Proposed Amendment — 37(8)(a)(ii)(B)(V)

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 13, will amend subcl. 37(8)(a)(ii)(B)(V) to replace "consumed" with "consumed or transformed". applicable to costs incurred after February 23, 1998.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Paragraph 37(8)(a) provides rules for interpreting the expression "expenditures on or in respect of scientific research and experimental development" which is used in subsections 37(1), (2) and (5).

Clause 37(8)(a)(ii)(B) provides for the alternative "proxy" method for determining SR&ED expenditures. Subclause 37(8)(a)(ii)(B)(V) provides that, in the context of the proxy method for determining SR&ED expenditures, the references to expenditures on or in respect of SR&ED (other than in subsection 37(2)) include only, among things listed in clause 37(8)(a)(ii)(B), the cost of "materials consumed" in the prosecution of SR&ED in Canada.

(VI) ½ of any other expenditure of a current nature in respect of the lease of premises, facilities or equipment used primarily for the prosecution of scientific research and experimental development in Canada, other than an expenditure in respect of general purpose office equipment or furniture;

Selected Cases [subpara. 37(8)(a)(ii)]: Dew Engineering & Development Ltd. v. Canada, [1996] 3 C.T.C. 2904 (TCC) (Portable laboratory was not a "building"); Highland Foundry Ltd. v. Canada, [1994] 2 C.T.C. 2329 (TCC) (Time frame for "all or substantially all" is time period over which prosecution or construction takes place, not full useful life of equipment; but see Reg. 2902(b)(i)(B) and 2900(11)(c)).

(b) for greater certainty, references to scientific research and experimental development related to a business include any scientific research and experimental development that may lead to or facilitate an extension of that business;

(c) except in the case of a taxpayer who derives all or substantially all of the taxpayer's revenue from the prosecution of scientific research and experimental development (including the sale of rights arising out of scientific research and experimental development carried on by the taxpayer), the prosecution of scientific research and experimental development shall not be considered to be a business of the taxpayer to which scientific research and experimental development is related; and

(d) notwithstanding paragraph (a), references to expenditures on or in respect of scientific research and experimental development shall not include

(i) any capital expenditure made in respect of the acquisition of a building, other than a prescribed special-purpose building, including a leasehold interest therein,

(ii) any outlay or expense made or incurred for the use of, or the right to use, a building other than a prescribed special-purpose building, and

(iii) payments made by a taxpayer to

(A) a corporation resident in Canada and exempt from tax under paragraph 149(1)(j), an approved research institute or an approved association, with which the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length,

(B) a corporation other than a corporation referred to in clause (A), or

(C) an approved university, college or organization to be used for scientific research and experimental development

(D) in the case of such a payment to a person described in clause (A) or (B), to the extent that the amount of the payment may reasonably be considered to have been made to enable the recipient to acquire a building or a leasehold interest in a building or to pay an amount in respect of the rental expense in respect of a building, and

(E) in the case of a payment to a person described in clause (C), to the extent that the amount of the payment may reasonably be considered to have been made to enable the recipient to acquire a building, or a leasehold interest in a building, in which the taxpayer has, or may reasonably be expected to acquire, an interest.

Proposed Amendment — 37(8)(d)(iii)(E)

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — bijuralism), subsec. 186(2), will amend cl. 37(8)(d)(iii)(E) by substituting "interest, or for civil law, a right" for "interest", to come into force on Royal Assent.

Subdivision c — Taxable Capital Gains and Allowable Capital Losses

38. Taxable capital gain and allowable capital loss — For the purposes of this Act,

(a) [taxable capital gain — general] — subject to paragraphs (a.1) to (a.3), a taxpayer's taxable capital gain for a taxation year from the disposition of any property is ½ of the taxpayer's capital gain for the year from the disposition of the property;

Possible Future Amendment — Capital gains deferral

Minister of Finance speech, Jim Flaherty, March 27, 2006: We also believe Canadians who reinvest their money and create jobs in their communities, their province and their country should be rewarded for doing so. It's why we campaigned on eliminating the capital gains tax for individuals on the sale of assets when the proceeds are reinvested within six months. With respect to this particular initiative, we will be taking some time to consult Canadians before moving forward.

[It is unclear whether or how this measure will be implemented. It was not included in any of the 2006 to 2012 Budgets — ed.]

Possible Future Amendment — Reduced capital gains rates

Minister of Finance, Economic and Fiscal Statement ("Advantage Canada"), Nov. 23, 2006: Canada's New Government will reduce personal income taxes on savings, including capital gains. This will support investment and economic growth while enhancing the overall fairness and neutrality of the tax system. It will also make our tax treatment of savings more competitive in relation to other countries.

38.1 Tax-deferred transaction — flow-through shares — If a taxpayer acquires a property (in this section referred to as the "acquired property") that is included in a flow-through share class of property in the course of a transaction or series of transactions to which any of section 51, subsections 73(1), 85(1) and (2) and 85.1(1), sections 86 and 87 and subsections 88(1) and 98(3) apply

(a) if the transfer of the acquired property is part of a gifting arrangement (within the meaning assigned by section 237.1) or of a transaction or series of transactions to which subsection

98(3) applies, or the transferor is a person with whom the taxpayer was, at the time of the acquisition, not dealing at arm's length, there shall be added, at the time of the transfer, to the taxpayer's exemption threshold in respect of the flow-through share class of property, and deducted from the transferor's exemption threshold in respect of the flow-through share class of property, the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount by which the transferor's exemption threshold in respect of the flow-through share class of property immediately before that time exceeds the capital gain, if any, of the transferor as a result of the transfer, and

B is the proportion that the fair market value of the acquired property immediately before the transfer is of the fair market value of all property of the transferor immediately before the transfer that is included in the flow-through share class of property; and

(b) if the transferor receives particular shares of the capital stock of the taxpayer as consideration for the acquired property and those particular shares are listed on a designated stock exchange or are shares of a mutual fund corporation, then for the purposes of this section and subsection 40(12)

(i) the particular shares are deemed to be flow-through shares of the transferor, and

(ii) there shall be added to the transferor's exemption threshold in respect of the flow-through share class of property that includes the particular shares the amount that is determined under paragraph (a) or that would be so determined if paragraph (a) applied to the taxpayer.

Related Provisions [s. 38.1]: 248(30)–(33) — Eligible amount of gift and advantage in respect of gift.

History: S. 38.1 added by 2011, c. 24, s. 4, deemed in force on March 22, 2011.

Definitions [s. 38.1]: "advantage" — 248(32); "amount" — 248(1); "capital gain" — 39(1)(a), 248(1); "disposition" — 248(1); "eligible amount" — 248(31), (41); "property", "taxpayer" — 248(1).

Proposed Addition — 38.1 [expected to be renumbered 38.2]

38.1 Allocation of gain re certain gifts — If a taxpayer is entitled to an amount of an advantage in respect of a gift of property described in paragraph 38(a.1) or (a.2),

(a) those paragraphs apply only to that proportion of the taxpayer's capital gain in respect of the gift that the eligible amount of the gift is of the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition in respect of the gift; and

(b) paragraph 38(a) applies to the extent that the taxpayer's capital gain in respect of the gift exceeds the amount of the capital gain to which paragraph 38(a.1) or (a.2) applies.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 14, will add s. 38.1 (will need to be 38.2 due to other 38.1 above), applicable to gifts made after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Paragraphs 38(a.1) and (a.2) provide a special inclusion rate for capital gains arising as a result of a gift to qualified donees of certain securities or of environmentally sensitive land. This inclusion rate is one-half of the normal inclusion rate.

Section 38.1 is added consequential to the addition of new subsections 248(31) to (33), for gifts made after December 20, 2002. New section 38.1 provides that, where a taxpayer is entitled to an advantage or benefit in respect of a gift, only part of the taxpayer's capital gain will be entitled to the special inclusion rate. The Part entitled to the special inclusion rate is that proportion of the gain that the eligible amount of the gift is of the taxpayer's total proceeds of disposition in respect of the property.

For additional details, see the commentary to new subsections 248(31) and (32) regarding the eligible amount of a gift and the amount of the advantage in respect of a gift.

Proposed Addition — 39(1.1)

(1.1) Foreign currency dispositions by an individual — If, because of any fluctuation after 1971 in the value of one or more currencies other than Canadian currency relative to Canadian currency, an individual (other than a trust) has made one or more particular gains or sustained one or more particular losses in a taxation year from dispositions of currency other than Canadian currency and the particular gains or losses would, in the absence of this subsection, be capital gains or losses described under subsection (1)

(a) subsection (1) does not apply to any of the particular gains or losses;

(b) the amount determined by the following formula is deemed to be a capital gain of the individual for the year from the disposition of currency other than Canadian currency:

$$A - (B + C)$$

where

A is the total of all the particular gains made by the individual in the year,

B is the total of all the particular losses sustained by the individual in the year, and

C is $200; and

(c) the amount determined by the following formula is deemed to be a capital loss of the individual for the year from the disposition of currency other than Canadian currency:

$$D - (E + F)$$

where

D is the total of all the particular losses sustained by the individual in the year,

E is the total of all the particular gains made by the individual in the year, and

F is $200.

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), s. 5, will add subsec. 39(1.1), applicable

(a) in determining the capital gain or loss of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, in respect of taxation years of the foreign affiliate that end after August 19, 2011; and

(b) in any other case, in respect of gains made and losses sustained in taxation years that begin after August 19, 2011.

See also Application under s. 90 re extended reassessment deadline.

Technical Notes: New subsection 39(1.1) is being added consequential to the removal from subsection 39(2) of the rule that reduces the net amount of an individual's gains and losses for a taxation year from certain foreign currency fluctuations by $200. As noted below, subsection 39(2) will now apply only to foreign currency debt owing by a taxpayer and not to dispositions of currency (i.e. money). Since the intent of the $200 carve-out rule for individuals was to provide a de minimis amount in respect of holdings of foreign currency, this objective will now be better achieved through a separate rule that contemplates only foreign exchange capital gains and losses from dispositions of foreign currency. New subsection 39(1.1) also ensures that this carve-out rule does not apply to trusts.

Related Provisions: 39(2) — Capital gains and losses from foreign currency debt; 257 — Formula amounts cannot calculate to less than zero.

(2) Capital gains and losses in respect of foreign currencies — Notwithstanding subsection (1), where, by virtue of any fluctuation after 1971 in the value of the currency or currencies of one or more countries other than Canada relative to Canadian currency, a taxpayer has made a gain or sustained a loss in a taxation year, the following rules apply:

(a) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all such gains made by the taxpayer in the year (to the extent of the amounts thereof that would not, if section 3 were read in the manner described in paragraph (1)(a) of this section, be included in computing the taxpayer's income for the year or any other taxation year)

exceeds

(ii) the total of all such losses sustained by the taxpayer in the year (to the extent of the amounts thereof that would not, if section 3 were read in the manner described in paragraph (1)(a) of this section, be deductible in computing the taxpayer's income for the year or any other taxation year), and

(iii) if the taxpayer is an individual, $200,

shall be deemed to be a capital gain of the taxpayer for the year from the disposition of currency of a country other than Canada, the amount of which capital gain is the amount determined under this paragraph; and

(b) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total determined under subparagraph (a)(ii),

exceeds

(ii) the total determined under subparagraph (a)(i), and

(iii) if the taxpayer is an individual, $200,

shall be deemed to be a capital loss of the taxpayer for the year from the disposition of currency of a country other than Canada, the amount of which capital loss is the amount determined under this paragraph.

Proposed Amendment — 39(2)

(2) Capital gains and losses from foreign currency debt — If, because of any fluctuation after 1971 in the value of a currency other than Canadian currency relative to Canadian currency, a taxpayer has made a gain or sustained a loss in a taxation year in respect of a foreign currency debt owing by the taxpayer

(a) the amount of the gain (to the extent of the amount of that gain that would not, if section 3 were read in the manner described in paragraph (1)(a), be included in computing the taxpayer's income for the year or any other taxation year), if any, is deemed to be a capital gain of the taxpayer for the year from the disposition of currency other than Canadian currency; and

(b) the amount of the loss (to the extent of the amount of that loss that would not, if section 3 were read in the manner described in paragraph (1)(a), be deductible in computing the taxpayer's income for the year or any other taxation year), if any, is deemed to be a capital loss of the taxpayer for the year from the disposition of currency other than Canadian currency.

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), s. 5, will amend subsec. 39(2) to read as above, applicable

(a) in determining the capital gain or loss of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, in respect of taxation years of the foreign affiliate that end after August 19, 2011; and

(b) in any other case, in respect of gains made and losses sustained in taxation years that begin after August 19, 2011.

See also Application under s. 90 re extended reassessment deadline.

Technical Notes: Subsection 39(2) currently applies in circumstances where a taxpayer makes a gain or sustains a loss in a taxation year from foreign exchange fluctuations. This provision, which only applies to gains and losses that are on capital account, deems the net amount of all such gains and losses to be a capital gain or loss for the year from a disposition of currency of a country other than Canada. In the case of taxpayers that are individuals, there is a $200 de minimis carve-out applicable for each year.

Subsection 39(2) is being amended in the following ways:

First, it will now apply only to foreign currency debt owing by a taxpayer. "Foreign currency debt" is defined in subsection 111(8) (and made applicable throughout the Act by subsection 248(1)) to be a debt obligation that is denominated in a currency of a country other than Canada. Thus, foreign exchange gains and losses in respect of asset dispositions, including dispositions of foreign currency, will now be determined (subject to, in the case of individuals other than trusts, new subsection 39(1.1) — as discussed above) exclusively under subsection 39(1). Also, amended subsection 39(2) will have no application to foreign exchange gains made, or losses sustained, by a corporate taxpayer in respect of shares issued by the corporation.

Second, it will no longer combine all foreign exchange gains and losses into one net amount of capital gain or loss for the year. Instead, amended subsection 39(2) creates a separate capital gain or loss from the disposition of currency, other than Canadian currency, for each gain made or loss incurred. This amendment will facilitate the application of the foreign affiliate "carve-out" rule in paragraph 95(2)(f.1) to such capital gains and losses. In this regard, readers should also refer to the commentary below discussing the amendments to paragraphs 95(2)(f.11) to (f.15).

Third, the $200 carve-out rule for individuals is being removed from subsection 39(2). In its place, new subsection 39(1.1) is being added. For more details, refer to the above commentary for that new subsection.

Fourth, certain non-substantive language changes are being made to modernize and clarify the provision.

(1.01) [Reserve on] Gift of non-qualifying security — A taxpayer's gain for a particular taxation year from a disposition of a non-qualifying security of the taxpayer (as defined in subsection 118.1(18)) that is the making of a gift (other than an excepted gift, within the meaning assigned by subsection 118.1(19)) to a qualified donee (as defined in subsection 149.1(1)) is the amount, if any, by which

(a) where the disposition occurred in the particular year, the amount, if any, by which the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition exceed the total of the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the security immediately before the disposition and any outlays and expenses to the extent they were made or incurred by the taxpayer for the purpose of making the disposition, and

(b) where the disposition occurred in the 60-month period that ends at the beginning of the particular year, the amount, if any, deducted under paragraph (c) in computing the taxpayer's gain for the preceding taxation year from the disposition of the security

(c) the amount that the taxpayer claims in prescribed form filed with the taxpayer's return of income for the particular year, where the taxpayer is not deemed by subsection 118.1(13) to have made a gift of property before the end of the particular year as a consequence of a disposition of the security by the donee or as a consequence of the security ceasing to be a non-qualifying security of the taxpayer before the end of the particular year.

Proposed Amendment — 40(1.01)(c)

(c) the amount that the taxpayer claims in prescribed form filed with the taxpayer's return of income for the particular year, not exceeding the eligible amount of the gift, where the taxpayer is not deemed by subsection 118.1(13) to have made a gift of property before the end of the particular year as a consequence of a disposition of the security by the donee or as a consequence of the security ceasing to be a non-qualifying security of the taxpayer before the end of the particular year.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 15(1), will amend para. 40(1.01)(c) to read as above, applicable to gifts made after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 40(1.01) allows a taxpayer to claim a reserve in respect of any gain realized from the making of a gift of a "non-qualifying security", as defined for the purposes of sections 110.1 and 118.1. The gift is not recognized as a gift for the purposes of those sections until a subsequent time when the security ceases to be a non-qualifying security or it is disposed of by the donee. The reserve available in subsection 40(1.01) allows the resulting inclusion in income to be deferred until the year that includes the subsequent time, unless the taxpayer first becomes non-resident or tax-exempt.

Paragraph 40(1.01)(c) is amended consequential to the addition of new subsections 248(30) to (33), for gifts made after December 20, 2002, to provide that the reserve claimed by the taxpayer may not exceed the eligible amount of the gift. For additional details, see the commentary to subsection 248(31) regarding the eligible amount of a gift.

History: Subsec. 40(1.01) added by 1998, c. 19, s. 8, applicable to 1997 et seq.

(1.1) Reserve — property disposed of to a child — In computing the amount that a taxpayer may claim under subparagraph (1)(a)(iii) in computing the taxpayer's gain from the disposition of a property, that subparagraph shall be read as if the references therein to "1/5" and "4" were references to "1/10" and "9" respectively, if,

(a) the property was disposed of by the taxpayer to the taxpayer's child,

(b) that child was resident in Canada immediately before the disposition, and

(c) the property was immediately before the disposition,

(i) any land in Canada or depreciable property in Canada of a prescribed class that was used by the taxpayer, the spouse or common-law partner of the taxpayer, a child or a parent of the taxpayer in a farming or fishing business carried on in Canada,

(ii) a share of the capital stock of a family farm corporation of the taxpayer or an interest in a family farm partnership of the taxpayer (such a share or an interest having the meaning assigned by subsection 70(10)),

(iii) a qualified small business corporation share of the taxpayer (within the meaning assigned by subsection 110.6(1)), or

(iv) a share of the capital stock of a family fishing corporation of the taxpayer or an interest in a family fishing partnership (such a share or an interest having the meaning assigned by subsection 70(10)).

Related Provisions: 40(8), 70(10) — Extended meaning of "child".

History: Subsec. 40(1.1) amended by 2007, c. 2, s. 4, applicable to dispositions of property that occur after May 1, 2006. It formerly read:

(1.1) [Farm, fishing or small business] Property disposed of to a child — Where the property referred to in subparagraph (1)(a)(iii) is property that the taxpayer disposed of to the taxpayer's child, who was resident in Canada immediately before the disposition, and was

(a) any land in Canada or depreciable property in Canada of a prescribed class that was, immediately before the disposition, used by the taxpayer, the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner, or any of the taxpayer's children in the business of farming,

(b) immediately before the disposition, a share of the capital stock of a family farm corporation of the taxpayer or an interest in a family farm partnership of the taxpayer, or

(c) immediately before the disposition, a share of the capital stock of a small business corporation of the taxpayer, in computing the amount of any claim in respect of that property under subparagraph (1)(a)(iii), that subparagraph shall be read as if the references therein to "1/5" and "4" were references to "1/10" and "9" respectively.

Para. 40(1.1)(a) amended by 2000, c. 12, Sch. 2, s. 1, to replace "spouse" with "spouse or common-law partner", applicable to 2001 et seq., in force July 31, 2000. See also the transitional rules reproduced in the History to 248(1)"common-law partner".

(2) Limitations — Notwithstanding subsection (1),

(a) [reserve limitations] — subparagraph (1)(a)(iii) does not apply to permit a taxpayer to claim any amount under that subparagraph in computing a gain for a taxation year if

(i) the taxpayer, at the end of the year or at any time in the immediately following year, was not resident in Canada or was exempt from tax under any provision of this Part, or

(ii) the purchaser of the property sold is a corporation that, immediately after the sale,

(A) was controlled, directly or indirectly, in any manner whatever, by the taxpayer,

(B) was controlled, directly or indirectly, in any manner whatever, by a person or group of persons by whom the taxpayer was controlled, directly or indirectly, in any manner whatever, or

(C) controlled the taxpayer, directly or indirectly, in any manner whatever, where the taxpayer is a corporation;

Proposed Addition — 40(2)(a)(iii)

(iii) the purchaser of the property sold is a partnership in which the taxpayer was, immediately after the sale, a majority interest partner;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 15(2), will add subpara. 40(2)(a)(iii), applicable to sales that occur after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Paragraph 40(2)(a) generally restricts a taxpayer's ability to claim a capital gains reserve in respect of properties disposed of to a non-resident or to a corporation that controlled the taxpayer or was controlled by the taxpayer. Paragraph 40(2)(a) is amended in respect of dispositions of property that occur after December 20, 2002, to provide that a capital gains reserve will also not be allowed to a taxpayer where the purchaser of the property is a partnership of which the taxpayer is a majority interest partner.

where

A is the amount that would, if this Act were read without reference to this paragraph and subsections 110.6(19) and (21), be the taxpayer's gain therefrom for the year,

B is one plus the number of taxation years that end after the acquisition date for which the property was the taxpayer's principal residence and during which the taxpayer was resident in Canada,

C is the number of taxation years that end after the acquisition date during which the taxpayer owned the property whether jointly with another person or otherwise, and

D is

(i) where the acquisition date is before February 23, 1994 and the taxpayer or a spouse or common-law partner of the taxpayer elected under subsection 110.6(19) in respect of the property or an interest therein that was owned, immediately before the disposition, by the taxpayer, 4/3 of the lesser of

(A) the total of all amounts each of which is the taxable capital gain of the taxpayer or of a spouse or common-law partner of the taxpayer that would have resulted from an election by the taxpayer or spouse or common-law partner under subsection 110.6(19) in respect of the property or interest if

(I) this Act were read without reference to subsection 110.6(20), and

(II) the amount designated in the election were equal to the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the property or interest at the end of February 22, 1994 exceeds the amount determined by the formula

(ii) all amounts required by subsection 53(1) to be added to the cost to the taxpayer of the property in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of that property at that time,

the following rules apply:

(c) subject to paragraph 93(1)(b), the amount of the excess shall be deemed to be a gain of the taxpayer for the year from a disposition at that time of the property,

(d) for the purposes of section 93, the definition "foreign accrual property income" in subsection 95(1) and section 110.6, the property shall be deemed to have been disposed of by the taxpayer in the year, and

(e) for the purposes of section 93, the amount of the excess shall be deemed to be proceeds of disposition of the property to the taxpayer.

Proposed Amendment — 40(3)(c)-(e)

(c) subject to paragraph 93(1)(b), the amount of the excess is deemed to be a gain of the taxpayer for the year from a disposition at that time of the property,

(d) for the purposes of section 93, the property is deemed to have been disposed of by the taxpayer at that time, and

(e) for the purposes of section 110.6, the property is deemed to have been disposed of by the taxpayer in the year.

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), subsec. 6(5), will amend paras. 40(3)(c) to (e) to read as above, applicable after August 19, 2011.

See also Application under s. 90 re extended reassessment deadline.

Technical Notes: Subsection 40(3) provides rules that apply where, at a particular time in a particular taxation year, the adjusted cost base ("ACB") of a capital property has been reduced below nil as a result of the adjustments required under subsection 53(2). These rules ensure that the "negative" ACB is generally treated as a capital gain of the taxpayer from a notional disposition of a property.

Paragraph 40(3)(c) is the rule that deems there to be a gain from a notional disposition of the property. Paragraph 40(3)(d) is the rule that deems there to be a notional disposition of the property.

Whereas paragraph 40(3)(c) refers to the notional disposition as having occurred at the particular time mentioned above (i.e., the time at which the ACB goes below nil), paragraph 40(3)(d) refers to the notional disposition as having occurred in the particular year, but without explicitly indicating that the notional disposition occurred at the particular time. The rule in paragraph 40(3)(d) is for the purposes of section 93, the subsection 95(1) definition of "foreign accrual property income", and section 110.6.

Paragraph 40(3)(e) is a rule that establishes an amount of proceeds of disposition for the purposes of section 93.

Paragraph 40(3)(d) is replaced by amended paragraph (d) and new paragraph (e).

Amended paragraph (d) is the rule that deems there to be a notional disposition of the property for the purposes of section 93. Amended paragraph (d) refers to the notional disposition as having occurred at the particular time, thus ensuring a clearer application of section 93, which makes reference to the time of a disposition as opposed to the year of the disposition.

New paragraph (e) is the rule that deems there to be a notional disposition of the property for the purposes of section 110.6. Like old paragraph (d), new paragraph (e) refers to the notional disposition as having occurred in the particular year.

Paragraph (d) is also amended to remove the references to the "foreign accrual property income" definition, as paragraph (c) is sufficient for the purposes of that definition, without the need for a rule like paragraph (d) or (e).

Existing paragraph (e) is effectively repealed as section 93 no longer requires the establishment of an amount of proceeds of disposition. For more details, refer to the commentary below under section 93.

Paragraphs 40(3)(c) and (d) are also amended to modernize their language.

Related Provisions: 40(3.1)–(3.2) — Deemed capital gain or loss for passive partners; 53(1)(a) — Deemed gain added to adjusted cost base of property; 93(1) — Election re disposition of share in foreign affiliate; 98(1)(c) — Where partnership ceases to exist; 98.1(1)(c) — Residual interest in partnership.

History: That portion of subsec. 40(3) following para. (b) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), s. 23, applicable to 1987 et seq. That portion formerly read:

> the amount of the excess shall be deemed to be a gain of the taxpayer for the year from a disposition at that time of that property and for the purposes of section 110.6, that property shall be deemed to have been disposed of by the taxpayer in the year.

(3.1) Deemed gain for certain partners — Where, at the end of a fiscal period of a partnership, a member of the partnership is a limited partner of the partnership, or is a member of the partnership who was a specified member of the partnership at all times since becoming a member, except where the member's partnership interest was held by the member on February 22, 1994 and is an excluded interest at the end of the fiscal period,

(a) the amount determined under subsection (3.11) is deemed to be a gain from the disposition, at the end of the fiscal period, of the member's interest in the partnership; and

(b) for the purpose of section 110.6, the interest is deemed to have been disposed of by the member at that time.

I.T. Technical News: 5 (adjusted cost base of partnership interest).

(3.11) Amount of gain — For the purpose of subsection (3.1), the amount determined at any time under this subsection in respect of a member's interest in a partnership is the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts required by subsection 53(2) to be deducted in computing the adjusted cost base to the member of the interest in the partnership at that time, and

B is the total of

(a) the cost to the member of the interest determined for the purpose of computing the adjusted cost base to the member of the interest at that time, and

(b) all amounts required by subsection 53(1) to be added to the cost to the member of the interest in computing the adjusted cost base to the member of the interest at that time.

Proposed Amendment — 40(3.11)A, B

A is the total of

(a) all amounts required by subsection 53(2) to be deducted in computing the adjusted cost base to the member of the interest in the partnership at that time, and

(b) where the member is a member of a professional partnership, and that time is the end of the fiscal period of the partnership, the amount referred to in subparagraph 53(2)(c)(i) in respect of the taxpayer for that fiscal period, and

(a) the cost to the member of the interest determined for the purpose of computing the adjusted cost base to the member of the interest at that time,

(b) all amounts required by subsection 53(1) to be added to the cost to the member of the interest in computing the adjusted cost base to the member of the interest at that time, and

(c) where the member is a member of a professional partnership, and that time is the end of the fiscal period of the partnership, the amount referred to in subparagraph 53(1)(e)(i) in respect of the taxpayer for that fiscal period.

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), subsec. 2(1), will amend the descriptions of A and B in subsec. 40(3.11) to read as above, applicable to fiscal periods that end after November 2001.

Technical Notes: Subsection 40(3.11) provides a formula to determine the gain of a member of a partnership for the purposes of subsection 40(3.1). The amount determined by the formula equals any "negative" balance in the adjusted cost base of the member's interest in the partnership at the end of a fiscal period of the partnership.

The formula is amended to include in this calculation the income or loss, as the case may be, for the particular fiscal period, if the partnership is a "professional partnership" as defined in new subsection 40(3.111).

New paragraph (b) of the description of variable A in subsection 40(3.11) provides that, if the partnership is a professional partnership, a taxpayer's share of any loss referred to in subparagraph 53(2)(c)(i) for the fiscal period will be added when calculating the amount under subsection 40(3.11).

New paragraph (c) of the description of variable B in subsection 40(3.11) provides that, if the partnership is a professional partnership, a taxpayer's share of any income referred to in subparagraph 53(1)(e)(i) for the fiscal period will be deducted when calculating the amount under subsection 40(3.11).

Letter from Dept. of Finance, July 11, 2003:

Dear [xxx]:

Re: Limited Liability Partnerships

I am replying to your letter of October 3, 2002 and follow-up discussions with Departmental officials concerning the definition "limited partner" in the Income Tax Act. Your client is concerned that this definition does not provide an exception for all types of professional limited liability partnerships ("LLPs").

As you know, the definition "limited partner" in the Income Tax Act was amended in 2001, to provide an exception for partners of an LLP (applicable after 1997) in cases where the LLP legislation protects the partner from liability arising because of the negligence of another member of the LLP. You described such partnerships as "partial" shield LLPs. You note that another statutory model for LLPs exists under which LLP partners are provided a "full" shield from partnership liabilities (for example, from partnership account payables). You ask that the definition "limited partner" for income tax purposes be amended to provide an exception for partners who benefit from full shield LLP legislation.

As mentioned in our discussions, we have difficulty supporting your proposal. In particular, a partner's personal liability with respect to the operation of a full shield LLP business, including general debts of the LLP, is limited. As well, the partner can withdraw capital (or be allocated losses) such that the partner's interest in the LLP can become negative. It is precisely such circumstances to which the negative adjusted cost base rule and limited partnership at-risk loss rules are intended to apply. From a tax policy perspective, therefore, we see no basis for distinguishing between the income tax treatment accorded a partner of a full shield professional LLP and that accorded a limited partner of another partnership.

However, in our discussions you also asked that, if we are unable to agree to your original request, that we consider allowing for an adjustment to the adjusted cost base (the "ACB") of a partner's interest in a full shield LLP for the income (loss) allocation made at the end of a fiscal period of the LLP rather than the current approach under which the adjustment is made immediately after the end of the fiscal period. The advantage of such a change for full shield LLP partners would be that an income allocation would be included in the ACB of partner's LLP interest at the end of the fiscal period of the LLP for the purpose of applying the negative adjusted cost base rule in subsection 40(3.1) of the Income Tax Act.

In this regard, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that, for the purposes of applying the negative adjusted cost base rule in subsection 40(3.1) of the Income Tax Act, the Act be amended to provide that the ACB of a full shield professional LLP be adjusted at the end of the fiscal period of the LLP to reflect income (loss) allocations made by the LLP at that time. If enacted, we would anticipate that such a change would apply to allocations of income (loss) made by full shield LLPs on or after December 1, 2001.

I trust that your client is in agreement with this approach to the matter and thank you for bringing this matter to my attention.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber
General Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Related Provisions: 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

History: Subsec. 40(3.11) added by 1995, c. 3, subsec. 12(2), applicable after February 21, 1994.

Proposed Addition — 40(3.111)

(3.111) Meaning of "professional partnership" — In this section, "professional partnership" means a partnership through which one or more persons carry on the practice of a profession that is governed or regulated under a law of Canada or a province.

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), subsec. 2(2), will add subsec. 40(3.111), applicable to fiscal periods that end after November 2001.

Technical Notes: New subsection 40(3.111) defines the term "professional partnership" for the purposes of the rules relating to deemed gains under subsection 40(3.1). "Professional partnership" means a partnership through which one or more persons carry on the practice of a profession that is governed or regulated under a law of Canada or a province.

(3.12) Deemed loss for certain partners — Where a corporation, an individual (other than a trust) or a testamentary trust (each of which is referred to in this subsection as the "taxpayer") is a member of a partnership at the end of a fiscal period of the partnership, the taxpayer shall be deemed to have a loss from the disposition at that time of the member's interest in the partnership equal to the amount that the taxpayer elects in the taxpayer's return of income under this Part for the taxation year that includes that time, not exceeding the lesser of

(a) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which was an amount deemed by subsection (3.1) to be a gain of the taxpayer from a disposition of the interest before that time

exceeds

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which was an amount deemed by this subsection to be a loss of the taxpayer from a disposition of the interest before that time, and

(3.13) Artificial transactions — For the purpose of applying section 53 at any time to a member of a partnership who would be a member described in subsection (3.1) of the partnership if the fiscal period of the partnership that includes that time ended at that time, where at any time after February 21, 1994 the member of the partnership makes a contribution of capital to the partnership and

(a) the partnership or a person or partnership with whom the partnership does not deal at arm's length

(i) makes a loan to the member or to a person with whom the member does not deal at arm's length, or

(ii) pays an amount as, on account of, in lieu of payment of or in satisfaction of, a distribution of the member's share of the partnership profits or partnership capital, or

(b) the member or a person with whom the member does not deal at arm's length becomes indebted to the partnership or a person or partnership with whom the partnership does not deal at arm's length, and it is established, by subsequent events or otherwise, that the loan, payment or indebtedness, as the case may be, was made or arose as part of a series of contributions and such loans, payments or other transactions, the contribution of capital shall be deemed not to have been made.

Related Provisions: 251 — Arm's length.

History: Subsec. 40(3.13) added by 1995, c. 3, subsec. 12(2), applicable after February 21, 1994.

(3.131) Specified member of a partnership — Where it can reasonably be considered that one of the main reasons that a member of a partnership was not a specified member of the partnership at all times since becoming a member of the partnership is to avoid the application of subsection (3.1) to the member's interest in the partnership, the member is deemed for the purpose of that subsection to have been a specified member of the partnership at all times since becoming a member of the partnership.

Related Provisions: 127.52(2.1) — Parallel rule for minimum tax purposes.

History: Subsec. 40(3.131) added by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 89(4), applicable after April 26, 1995.

(3.14) Limited partner — For the purpose of subsection (3.1), a member of a partnership at a particular time is a limited partner of the partnership at that time if, at that time or within 3 years after that time,

(a) by operation of any law governing the partnership arrangement, the liability of the member as a member of the partnership is limited (except by operation of a provision of a statute of Canada or a province that limits the member's liability only for debts, obligations and liabilities of the partnership, or any member of the partnership, arising from negligent acts or omissions or misconduct that another member of the partnership or an employee, agent or representative of the partnership commits in the course of the partnership business while the partnership is a limited liability partnership);

Proposed Amendment — 40(3.14)(a)

(a) by operation of any law governing the partnership arrangement, the liability of the member as a member of the partnership is limited (except by operation of a provision of a statute of Canada or a province that limits the member's liability only for debts, obligations and liabilities of the partnership, or any member of the partnership, arising from negligent acts or omissions, from misconduct or from fault of another member of the partnership or an employee, an agent or a representative of the partnership in the course of the partnership business while the partnership is a limited liability partnership);

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 15(3), will amend para. 40(3.14)(a) to read as above, applicable after June 20, 2001.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 40(3.1) provides that a member of a partnership is considered to realize a capital gain from the disposition, at the end of a fiscal period of the partnership, of the member's interest in the partnership where, at the end of the fiscal period, the member is a limited partner or was, since becoming a partner, a "specified member" of the partnership and the member's adjusted cost base of the interest is negative at that time.

Subsection 40(3.14) provides an extended definition of "limited partner" for the purpose of determining whether a member's interest in a partnership is subject to the negative adjusted cost base rule in subsection 40(3.1).

Paragraph 40(3.14)(a) provides that a member of a partnership is a "limited partner" if, by operation of law governing the partnership agreement, the liability of the member as a member is limited. However, paragraph 40(3.14)(a) does not apply in cases where a member's liability is limited by operation of a statutory provision of Canada (or of a province) that limits the member's liability only for the debts, obligations and liabilities of a limited liability partnership (or of any member of the partnership) arising from negligent acts or omissions of another member of the partnership (or of an employee, agent or representative of the partnership) in the course of the partnership business and while the partnership is a limited liability partnership.

The Province of Quebec has amended its legislation concerning partnerships to allow partners to carry on their activities within a limited liability partnership. That legislation refers to the civil law concept of "fault/fautes". Paragraph 40(3.14)(a) of the English version does not currently refer to the civil law concept of "fault" and is amended to do so, effective after June 20, 2001.

Proposed Amendment — 40(3.14)(a)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, July 11, 2003: See under 40(3.11).

(b) the member or a person not dealing at arm's length with the member is entitled, either immediately or in the future and either absolutely or contingently, to receive an amount or to obtain a benefit that would be described in paragraph 96(2.2)(d) if that paragraph were read without reference to subparagraphs (ii) and (vi);

(c) one of the reasons for the existence of the member who owns the interest

(i) can reasonably be considered to be to limit the liability of any person with respect to that interest, and

(ii) cannot reasonably be considered to be to permit any person who has an interest in the member to carry on the person's business (other than an investment business) in the most effective manner; or

(d) there is an agreement or other arrangement for the disposition of an interest in the partnership and one of the main reasons for the agreement or arrangement can reasonably be considered to be to attempt to avoid the application of this subsection to the member.

Related Provisions: 96(2.4) — Definition of limited partner for purposes of at-risk amount.

History: Para. 40(3.14)(a) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 25(2), applicable after 1997. Para. 40(3.14)(a) formerly read:

(a) by operation of any law governing the partnership arrangement, the liability of the member as a member of the partnership is limited;

Para. 40(3.14)(b) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 89(5), applicable to fiscal periods that end after November 1994. The para. formerly read:

(b) the member or a person with whom the member does not deal at arm's length is entitled to receive an amount or obtain a benefit that would be described in paragraph 96(2.2)(d) if it were read without reference to subparagraphs 96(2.2)(d)(ii) and (vi);

Subsec. 40(3.14) added by 1995, c. 3, subsec. 12(2), applicable after February 21, 1994.

(3.15) Excluded interest — For the purpose of subsection (3.1), an excluded interest in a partnership at any time means an interest in a partnership that actively carries on a business that was carried on by it throughout the period beginning February 22, 1994 and ending at that time, or that earns income from a property that was owned by it throughout that period, unless in that period there was a substantial contribution of capital to the partnership or a substantial increase in the indebtedness of the partnership.

History: Subsec. 40(3.15) added by 1995, c. 3, subsec. 12(2), applicable after February 21, 1994.

(3.16) Amounts considered not to be substantial — For the purpose of subsection (3.15), an amount will be considered not to be substantial where

(a) the amount

(i) was raised pursuant to the terms of a written agreement entered into by a partnership before February 22, 1994 to issue an interest in the partnership and was expended on expenditures contemplated by the agreement before 1995 (or before March 2, 1995 in the case of amounts expended to acquire a film production prescribed for the purpose of subparagraph 96(2.2)(d)(ii) the principal photography of which or, in the case of such a production that is a television series, one episode of the series, commences before 1995 and the production is completed before March 2, 1995, or an interest in one or more partnerships all or substantially all of the property of which is such a film production),

(iv) was used to repay a loan, debt or contribution of capital that had been received or incurred in respect of any such expenditure;

(b) the amount was raised before 1995 pursuant to the terms of a prospectus, preliminary prospectus, offering memorandum or registration statement filed before February 22, 1994 with a public authority in Canada pursuant to and in accordance with the securities legislation of Canada or of a province and, where required by law, accepted for filing by the public authority, and expended before 1995 (or before March 2, 1995 in the case of amounts expended to acquire a film production prescribed for the purpose of subparagraph 96(2.2)(d)(ii), or an interest in one or more partnerships all or substantially all of the property of which is such a film production) on expenditures contemplated by the document that was filed before February 22, 1994;

(3.3) When subsection (3.4) applies — Subsection (3.4) applies when

(a) a corporation, trust or partnership (in this subsection and subsection (3.4) referred to as the "transferor") disposes of a particular capital property (other than depreciable property of a prescribed class) otherwise than in a disposition described in any of paragraphs (c) to (g) of the definition "superficial loss" in section 54;

Proposed Amendment — 40(3.3)(a)

(a) a corporation, trust or partnership (in this subsection and subsection (3.4) referred to as the "transferor") disposes of a particular capital property — other than depreciable property of a prescribed class and other than, for the purposes of computing the exempt surplus or deficit, hybrid surplus or deficit, and taxable surplus or deficit of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, in respect of the taxpayer, where the transferor is the affiliate or is a partnership of which the affiliate is a member, property that is, or would be, if the transferor were a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, excluded property (within the meaning assigned by subsection 95(1)) of the transferor — otherwise than in a disposition described in any of paragraphs (c) to (g) of the definition "superficial loss" in section 54;

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), subsec. 6(6), will amend para. 40(3.3)(a) to read as above, applicable in respect of dispositions that occur after August 19, 2011.

See also Application under s. 90 re extended reassessment deadline.

Technical Notes: Subsections 40(3.3) to (3.6) contain loss denial rules that are similar to the one in subsection 13(21.2), except that they deal with non-depreciable capital property.

The amendments to paragraph 40(3.3)(a) and subsection 40(3.6) are similar to the first amendment discussed under subsection 13(21.2) above, and readers are referred to the commentary on the latter subsection for more information.

The amendments to subparagraph 40(3.4)(b)(v) are similar to the second amendment discussed under subsection 13(21.2) above, and readers are referred to the commentary on the latter subsection for more information.

Paragraph 40(3.5)(c) is also being amended, and there is no analogous provision in the other loss denial rules discussed above. Subsection 40(3.5) mainly provides special rules for the purposes of subsections 40(3.3) and (3.4) to ensure the proper application of these rules when certain corporate reorganizations occur.

Paragraph 40(3.5)(c) deals with situations in which the disposed property, i.e. the property in respect of which a loss is suspended under subsection 40(3.4), is a share of a corporation and that share disappears as a result of certain mergers or wind-ups involving that corporation. Where paragraph 40(3.5)(c) applies, it deems the otherwise non-existent share to be held by either the new corporation formed on the merger or the parent corporation to the wind-up, as the case may be, while the new corporation or parent is affiliated with the original transferor of the share.

The amendments to paragraph 40(3.5)(c) ensure that dispositions of shares of a foreign affiliate that undergoes certain types of corporate reorganizations will be subject to these continuity rules on a basis similar to dispositions of shares of domestic corporations.

(b) during the period that begins 30 days before and ends 30 days after the disposition, the transferor or a person affiliated with the transferor acquires a property (in this subsection and subsection (3.4) referred to as the "substituted property") that is, or is identical to, the particular property; and

(c) at the end of the period, the transferor or a person affiliated with the transferor owns the substituted property.

(b) the amount of the transferor's loss, if any, from the disposition (determined without reference to paragraph (2)(g) and this subsection) is deemed to be a loss of the transferor from a disposition of the particular property at the time that is immediately before the first time, after the disposition,

(i) at which a 30-day period begins throughout which neither the transferor nor a person affiliated with the transferor owns

(A) the substituted property, or

(B) a property that is identical to the substituted property and that was acquired after the day that is 31 days before the period begins,

(ii) at which the property would, if it were owned by the transferor, be deemed by section 128.1 or subsection 149(10) to have been disposed of by the transferor,

(iii) that is immediately before control of the transferor is acquired by a person or group of persons, where the transferor is a corporation,

(iv) at which the transferor or a person affiliated with the transferor is deemed by section 50 to have disposed of the property, where the substituted property is a debt or a share of the capital stock of a corporation, or

(v) at which the winding-up of the transferor begins (other than a winding-up to which subsection 88(1) applies), where the transferor is a corporation,

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsections 40(3.3) and (3.4) set out rules under which losses on certain dispositions of non-depreciable capital property are deferred. In some cases, the application of these rules is contingent upon whether one property is identical to the disposed of non-depreciable capital property.

Current paragraph 40(3.5)(b) treats a share that is acquired in exchange for another share under any of a number of sections as being identical to that other share. One of the effects of this deeming rule is to ensure that a deferred loss is not inappropriately realized through a transaction under one of those sections.

For example, assume that a taxpayer, who on Day 1 disposed of a share for proceeds that were less than the taxpayer's adjusted cost base of the share, reacquired an identical share on Day 15. Under the loss-deferral rules, the taxpayer's loss on the disposition will be deferred until, generally, neither the taxpayer nor an affiliated person owns such a share. If the taxpayer then exchanged that share for another, under for example an exchange under section 86, it would be appropriate to continue to defer recognition of the deferred loss until that substituted share is disposed of. This is accomplished by treating the share acquired on the exchange as identical to the share given up.

However, paragraph 40(3.5)(b) can have an inappropriate effect where a taxpayer uses the share-for-share exchange rule in section 85.1. Provided certain criteria are satisfied, that section permits a share-for-share exchange to take place on a tax-deferred basis, but it also allows the exchanging shareholder to realize a loss. A shareholder who chooses to do so may find that paragraph 40(3.5)(b) forces a deferral of that loss — even though the loss arises from the section 85.1 exchange itself, not from a previous disposition as in the above example.

Paragraph 40(3.5)(b) is amended to deem a share that is acquired in exchange for another share under section 85.1 to be identical to that other share only if the loss in respect of the exchanged share is suspended at the time of the exchange by virtue of subsections 40(3.3) and (3.4).

This amendment to paragraph 40(3.5)(b) applies to dispositions of property that occur after April 26, 1995, subject to the coming-into-force provisions that originally enacted subsection 40(3.5).

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Nov. 17, 1997:

Mr. Steve Suarez, Bennett Jones Verchere, Toronto
Re: Proposed Subsections 40(3.3)–(3.5) — Loss deferral rules

Dear Mr. Suarez:

I am writing further to your recent discussion of proposed Income Tax Act subsections 40(3.3) and following, with Lawrence Purdy of this Division.

You have described a situation in which you consider that these provisions may operate inappropriately, and have asked for our comments. As I understand that you have a client for whom this is an immediate concern, we have given this some priority.

Proposed subsections 40(3.3) to (3.5) set out rules that would apply where, in general terms, a corporation, partnership or trust would otherwise realize a loss on disposition of a non-depreciable capital property to an affiliated person. The rules would defer the recognition of that loss until the earliest of several possible subsequent events, the most typical of which is that the property (or an identical property) is no longer held by a person who is affiliated with the initial transferor. Once the property had left the affiliated population, the initial transferor could recognize that deferred loss.

The proposals include a few provisions directed at special circumstances. One of these is proposed paragraph 40(3.5)(b), which is meant to cover cases where shares are exchanged for one another. Paragraph 40(3.5)(b) would treat a share that was acquired in exchange for another share, in a transaction to which section 51, 85.1, 86 or 87 applies, as being identical to the other share. This ensures, for example, that a loss that is deferred on the transfer of a share to an affiliate will not be recognized if the share is merely replaced with another share under one of those provisions. Even though it may be argued that the former share is no longer held by an affiliated person (since that share no longer exists), paragraph 40(3.5)(b) causes the new share in effect to take its place for this purpose.

Your concern, as I understand it, is that paragraph 40(3.5)(b) may apply not only where the section 85.1 exchange takes place after the initial transfer of a share to an affiliated person, but also where the section 85.1 exchange is itself that initial transfer. In other words, paragraph 40(3.5)(b) might apply to any exchange to which section 85.1 applies. If this is the case, then the clear intention of section 85.1 to permit a loss to be realized on such an exchange, at least in some circumstances, would be contradicted — the shares taken back would be deemed to be identical to the shares given up, and the loss would be deferred under subsection 40(3.4).

I agree that this would not be an appropriate result, at least where the vendor and the purchaser (as they are described in subsection 85.1(1)(a)) are not affiliated. That is, I agree that it ought in policy terms to be possible for a vendor to realize a loss on an exchange of shares of an acquired corporation for shares of a purchaser that is not affiliated with the vendor immediately after the exchange.

We will consider further how this policy view can best be accommodated in the proposed legislation. Given the tight time-line we are on, it may not be possible to recommend a clarifying change before the legislation is introduced. In that case, we will recommend that the change be included in a future set of technical amendments. While I cannot, as you know, offer any assurance that either the Minister or Parliament itself will agree with the recommendations we intend to make in this regard, I hope this summary of our views is helpful.

Yours sincerely
Len Farber
Director General, Tax Legislation Division

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Sept. 15, 1998:

Dear [xxx]:

I am writing further to a recent exchange of messages between [xxx] and Lawrence Purdy of this Division, regarding Income Tax Act subsections 40(3.3) and following. I understand that you and [xxx] are working together on a particular transaction to which these provisions may be relevant, and that [xxx] has asked that you and he be given the same information.

Subsections 40(3.3) to (3.5) set out rules that apply where, in general terms, a corporation, partnership or trust would otherwise realize a loss on a disposition of a non-depreciable capital property to an affiliated person. The rules defer the recognition of that loss until the earliest of several possible subsequent events, the most typical of which is that the property (or an identical property) is no longer held by a person who is affiliated with the initial transferor. Once the property has left the affiliated population, the initial transferor can recognize that deferred loss.

The provisions include a few rules directed at special circumstances. One of those is paragraph 40(3.5)(b), which is meant to cover cases where shares are exchanged for one another. Paragraph 40(3.5)(b) treats a share that was acquired in exchange for another share, in a transaction to which section 51, 85.1, 86 or 87 applies, as being identical to the other share. This ensures, for example, that a loss that is deferred on the transfer of a share to an affiliate will not be recognized if the share is merely replaced with another share under one of those provisions. Even though it may be argued that the former share is no longer held by an affiliated person (since that share no longer exists), paragraph 40(3.5)(b) causes the new share in effect to take its place for this purpose.

Your concern, which has also been raised with us by others in the past, is that paragraph 40(3.5)(b) may apply not only where the section 85.1 exchange takes place after the initial transfer of a share to an affiliated person, but also where the section 85.1 exchange is itself that initial transfer. In other words, paragraph 40(3.5)(b) might apply to any exchange to which section 85.1 applies. If this is the case, then the clear intention of section 85.1 to permit a loss to be realized on such an exchange, at least in some circumstances, would be contradicted — the shares taken back would be deemed to be identical to the shares given up, and the loss would be deferred under subsection 40(3.4).

I agree that this would not be an appropriate result, at least where the vendor and the purchaser (as they are described in subsection 85.1(1) are not affiliated. That is, I agree that it ought in policy terms to be possible for a vendor to realize a loss on an exchange of shares of an acquired corporation for shares of a purchaser that is not affiliated with the vendor immediately after the exchange.

We will recommend that a clarifying change to the relevant rules be included in a future package of amendments. Since the change would be a strictly technical correction to the rules as they were enacted, I expect to recommend that the change apply as of the date the rules themselves took effect — that is, to dispositions of property that occur after April 26, 1995.

As you know, I cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister or Parliament itself will agree with the recommendations we intend to make in this regard. Nonetheless, I hope this summary of our views is helpful.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division

(10) Application — Subsection (11) applies in computing at any particular time a corporation's gain or loss (in this subsection and subsection (11) referred to as the "new gain" or "new loss", as the case may be), in respect of any part (which in this subsection and subsection (11) is referred to as the "relevant part" and which may for greater certainty be the whole) of a foreign currency debt of the corporation, arising from a fluctuation in the value of the currency of the foreign currency debt (other than, for greater certainty, a gain or a capital loss that arises because of the application of subsection 111(12)), if at any time before the particular time the corporation realized a capital loss or gain in respect of the foreign currency debt because of subsection 111(12).

History: Subsec. 40(10) added by 2009, c. 2, subsec. 10(2), applicable after 2005.

(11) Gain or loss on foreign currency debt — If this subsection applies, the new gain is the positive amount, or the new loss is the negative amount, as the case may be, determined by the formula

where

(a) if the corporation would, but for any application of subsection 111(12), recognize a new gain, the amount of the new gain, determined without reference to this subsection, or

(b) if the corporation would, but for any application of subsection 111(12), recognize a new loss, the amount of the new loss, determined without reference to this subsection, multiplied by (-1);

B is the total of all amounts each of which is that portion of the amount of a capital loss realized by the corporation at any time before the particular time, in respect of the foreign currency debt and because of subsection 111(12), that is reasonably attributable to

(a) the relevant part of the foreign currency debt at the particular time, or

(b) the forgiven amount, if any, (within the meaning assigned by subsection 80(1)) in respect of the foreign currency debt at the particular time; and

C is the total of all amounts each of which is that portion of the amount of a gain realized by the corporation at any time before the particular time, in respect of the foreign currency debt and because of subsection 111(12), that is reasonably attributable to

(a) the relevant part of the foreign currency debt at the particular time, or

(b) the forgiven amount, if any, (within the meaning assigned by subsection 80(1)) in respect of the foreign currency debt at the particular time.

(a) the taxpayer's exemption threshold at that time in respect of the flow-through share class of property, and

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is a capital gain from the actual disposition (for greater certainty, calculated without reference to this subsection).

(b) deduct from the amount determined under paragraph (a) such portion as the taxpayer may claim of the taxpayer's listed-personal-property losses for the 7 taxation years immediately preceding and the 3 taxation years immediately following the taxation year, except that for the purposes of this paragraph

(i) an amount in respect of a listed-personal-property loss is deductible for a taxation year only to the extent that it exceeds the total of amounts deducted under this paragraph in respect of that loss for preceding taxation years,

(ii) no amount is deductible in respect of the listed-personal-property loss of any year until the deductible listed-personal-property losses for previous years have been deducted, and

(iii) no amount is deductible in respect of listed-personal-property losses from the amount determined under paragraph (a) for a taxation year except to the extent of the amount so determined for the year,

Proposed Amendment — 42 [temporary]

42. For the purposes of this subdivision,

(a) an amount received or receivable by a taxpayer in a taxation year as consideration for a warranty, a covenant or another conditional or contingent obligation given or incurred by the taxpayer in respect of a property disposed of, at any time, by the taxpayer

(ii) is, if the amount is received or becomes receivable after that filing-due date, deemed to be a capital gain of the taxpayer from the disposition, by the taxpayer of the property, that occurs at the time when the amount is received or becomes receivable; and

(b) an outlay or expense paid or payable by the taxpayer in a taxation year under a warranty, covenant or another conditional or contingent obligation given or incurred by the taxpayer in respect of property disposed of, at any time, by the taxpayer

(i) is, if the amount is paid or becomes payable on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year in which the taxpayer disposed of the property, to be deducted in computing the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the property, and

(ii) is, if the amount is paid or becomes payable after that filing-due date, deemed to be a capital loss of the taxpayer from the disposition, by the taxpayer of the property, that occurs at the time when the amount is paid or becomes payable.

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), subsec. 3(2) (replacing a proposal in the February 27, 2004 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), s. 129), will amend s. 42 to read as above, applicable to taxation years and fiscal periods that end after February 27, 2004 and before November 5, 2010.

Proposed Amendment — 42

42. (1) Dispositions subject to warranty — For the purposes of this subdivision,

(a) an amount received or receivable by a person or partnership (referred to in this subsection as the "vendor"), as the case may be, as consideration for a warranty, covenant or other conditional or contingent obligation given or incurred by the vendor in respect of a property (in this section referred to as the "subject property") disposed of by the vendor,

(i) if it is received or receivable on or before the specified date, is deemed to be received as consideration for the disposition by the vendor of the subject property (and not to be an amount received or receivable by the vendor as consideration for the obligation) and is to be included in computing the vendor's proceeds of disposition of the subject property for the taxation year or fiscal period in which the disposition occurred, and

(ii) in any other case, is deemed to be a capital gain of the vendor from the disposition of a property by the vendor that occurs at the earlier of the time when the amount is received or becomes receivable; and

(b) an outlay or expense paid or payable by the vendor under a warranty, covenant or other conditional or contingent obligation given or incurred by the vendor in respect of the subject property disposed of by the vendor,

(i) if it is paid or payable on or before the specified date, is deemed to reduce the consideration for the disposition by the vendor of the subject property (and not to be an outlay or expense paid or payable by the vendor under the obligation) and is to be deducted in computing the vendor's proceeds of disposition of the subject property for the taxation year or fiscal period in which the disposition occurred, and

(ii) in any other case, is deemed to be a capital loss of the vendor from the disposition of a property by the vendor that occurs at the earlier of the time when the outlay or expense is paid or becomes payable.

(2) Meaning of "specified date" — In subsection (1), "specified date" means,

(a) if the vendor is a partnership, the last day of the vendor's fiscal period in which the vendor disposed of the subject property; and

(b) in any other case, the vendor's filing-due date for the vendor's taxation year in which the vendor disposed of the subject property.

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), subsec. 3(1), will amend s. 42 to read as above, applicable to taxation years and fiscal periods that end after November 4, 2010.

Technical Notes: Section 42 provides rules governing warranties, covenants, and other conditional or contingent obligations given by a taxpayer in respect of a disposition of property (the "subject property").

The provision provides generally that consideration for a warranty, covenant or other conditional or contingent obligation, given or incurred in respect of the disposition of the subject property, shall be treated as a gain from the disposition of a property, and not as consideration for the obligation.

The provision also provides generally that an outlay or expense under a warranty, covenant or other conditional or contingent obligation, given or incurred in respect of the disposition of the subject property, shall be treated as a loss from the disposition of a property, and not as an outlay or expense under the obligation.

Section 42 is amended to clarify the timing of the inclusion of gains and losses.

New paragraph 42(1)(a) provides generally that an amount received or receivable as consideration for an obligation is deemed to be a capital gain from the disposition of a property that occurs when the consideration is received or receivable. However, if the consideration is received or receivable on or before a "specified date", the amount is to be included in computing the proceeds of disposition of the subject property in the year in which the disposition occurred.

New subsection 42(2) defines "specified date" to mean generally the taxpayer's filing due-date for the taxation year in which the property was disposed of, except that, for partnerships, the specified date is the end of the partnership's fiscal period in which the subject property was disposed of.

New paragraph 42(1)(b) provides generally that an outlay or expense paid or payable under an obligation is deemed to be a capital loss from the disposition of a property that occurs when the outlay or expense is paid or payable. However, if the outlay or expense is paid or payable on or before the specified date, the amount is to be deducted in computing the proceeds of disposition of the subject property in the year in which the disposition occurred.

The amendment to section 42 generally applies to taxation years and fiscal periods that end on or after November 5, 2010. For taxation years and fiscal periods that end after February 27, 2004 and before November 5, 2010, section 42 will be read as proposed on February 27, 2004. The amendment applicable to taxation years and fiscal periods that end on or after November 5, 2010 is consistent with the amendment applicable to the earlier period but clarifies the timing of the inclusion of gains and losses in respect of partnerships.

(2) Ecological gifts — For the purposes of subsection (1) and section 53, if at any time a taxpayer disposes of a covenant or an easement to which land is subject or, in the case of land in the Province of Quebec, a real servitude, in circumstances where subsection 110.1(5) or 118.1(12) applies,

(a) the portion of the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the land immediately before the disposition that can reasonably be regarded as attributable to the covenant, easement or real servitude, as the case may be, is deemed to be equal to the amount determined by the formula

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 16, will amend the portion of subsec. 43(2) before the formula in para. (a) to read as above, applicable to gifts made after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): [Sub]Section 43(2) applies where the part of a property donated as an ecological gift is a covenant, easement or servitude established under common law, the civil law of the province of Quebec, or the law of other provinces allowing for their establishment. Subsection 43(2) ensures that a portion of the adjusted cost base ("ACB") of the land to which the covenant, easement or servitude relates is allocated to the donated covenant, easement or servitude. For this purpose, the allocation of the ACB of the land to the gift is calculated in proportion to the percentage decrease in the value of the land as a result of the donation.

Subsection 43(2) is amended to clarify its application to "real servitudes" under the Civil Code of Quebec.

History: The opening words of subsec. 44(6) substituted by 1994, c. 21, subsec. 17(2), applicable to dispositions occurring after December 21, 1992. The opening words of that subsec. formerly read:

(6) Deemed proceeds of disposition — Where a taxpayer has disposed of property that was a former business property and was in part a building and in part the land, or an interest therein, subjacent to or necessary for the use of the building, for the purposes of subsection (1), the amount, if any, by which

(7) Where subpara. (1)(e)(iii) does not apply — Subparagraph (1)(e)(iii) does not apply to permit a taxpayer to claim any amount under that subparagraph in computing a gain for a taxation year where

(a) the taxpayer, at the end of the year or at any time in the immediately following year, was not resident in Canada or was exempt from tax under any provision of this Part; or

(b) the person to whom the former property of the taxpayer was disposed of was a corporation that, immediately after the disposition,

(i) was controlled, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, by the taxpayer,

(ii) was controlled, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, by a person or group of persons by whom the taxpayer was controlled, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, or

(iii) controlled the taxpayer, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, where the taxpayer is a corporation.

Proposed Addition — 44(7)(c)

(c) the former property of the taxpayer was disposed of to a partnership in which the taxpayer was, immediately after the disposition, a majority interest partner.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 18(2), will add para. 44(7)(c), applicable to dispositions of property by a taxpayer that occur after December 20, 2002. However, if a property so disposed of pursuant to an agreement in writing made before December 21, 2002 is transferred to the purchaser before 2004,

(a) subsec. 44(7), as it read immediately before this amendment, applies in respect of the disposition of property; and

(b) for the purpose of applying subpara. 44(1)(e)(iii) to the taxpayer for a taxation year in respect of the property, a reasonable amount as a reserve in respect of the proceeds of disposition may not exceed the amount that would be reasonable if the proceeds from any subsequent disposition of the property that the purchaser receives before the end of the taxation year were received by the taxpayer.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 44(7) restricts a taxpayer from claiming a capital gains reserve under subparagraph 44(1)(e)(iii) where the former property of the taxpayer was disposed of to a non-resident or a corporation that, immediately after the disposition, controlled the taxpayer or was controlled by the taxpayer or by a person or group of persons who controlled the taxpayer. Subsection 44(7) is amended, generally in respect of dispositions of property that occur after December 20, 2002, to provide that the capital gains reserve is also not allowed to a taxpayer where the purchaser of the property is a partnership of which the taxpayer is a majority interest partner.

(6) Special rule — re eligible small business corporation share exchanges — For the purpose of this section, where an individual receives shares of the capital stock of a corporation that are eligible small business corporation shares of the individual (in this subsection referred to as the "new shares") as the sole consideration for the disposition of shares issued by another corporation that were eligible small business corporation shares of the individual (in this subsection referred to as the "exchanged shares"), the new shares are deemed to have been owned by the individual throughout the period that the exchanged shares were owned by the individual if Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 44.1(6) provides rules that apply where an individual exchanges an eligible small business corporation share for new eligible small business corporation share. Subsection 44.1(6) is amended to substitute the reference to subsection 85.1(3) with a reference to subsection 85.1(1) and to add a reference to sections 51 and 86.

(b) the individual's total proceeds of disposition of the exchanged shares was equal to the total of all amounts each of which was the individual's adjusted cost base of an exchanged share immediately before the disposition.

(a) section 51, paragraph 85(1)(h), subsection 85.1(1), section 86 or subsection 87(4) applied to the individual in respect of the new shares;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 19(2), will amend the portion of subsec. 44.1(7) before para. (b) to read as above, applicable to dispositions that occur after February 27, 2000.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 44.1(7) provides rules that apply where an individual, in the course of a qualifying disposition, disposes of common shares of an active business corporation for consideration consisting only of new common shares of another active business corporation issued to the individual. Subsection 44.1(7) is amended to substitute the reference to subsection 85.1(3) with a reference to subsection 85.1(1) and to add a reference to sections 51 and 86.

(8) Special rule — re carrying on an active business — For the purpose of the definitions in subsection (1), a property held at any particular time by a corporation that would, if this Act were read without reference to this subsection, be considered to carry on an active business at that time, is deemed to be used or held by the corporation in the course of carrying on that active business if the property (or other property for which the property is substituted property) was acquired by the corporation, at any time in the 36-month period ending at the particular time, because the corporation

(a) issued a debt or a share of a class of its capital stock in order to acquire money for the purpose of acquiring property to be used in or held in the course of, or making expenditures for the purpose of, earning income from an active business carried on by it;

(b) disposed of property used or held by it in the course of carrying on an active business in order to acquire money for the purpose of acquiring property to be used in or held in the course of, or making expenditures for the purpose of, earning income from an active business carried on by it; or

(c) accumulated income derived from an active business carried on by it in order to acquire property to be used in or held in the course of, or to make expenditures for the purpose of, earning income from an active business carried on by it.

Related Provisions: 248(5) — Substituted property.

(9) Special rule — re qualifying disposition — A disposition of a common share of an active business corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "subject share") by an individual that, but for this subsection, would be a qualifying disposition of the individual is deemed not to be a qualifying disposition of the individual unless the active business of the corporation referred to in paragraph (a) of the definition "active business corporation" in subsection (1) was carried on primarily in Canada

(a) at all times in the period that began at the time the individual last acquired the subject share and ended at the time of disposition, if that period is less than 730 days; or

(b) in any other case, for at least 730 days in the period referred to in paragraph (a).

(10) Special rule — re exceptions — For the purpose of this section, an eligible small business corporation and an active business corporation at any time do not include a corporation that is, at that time,

(a) a professional corporation;

(b) a specified financial institution;

(c) a corporation the principal business of which is the leasing, rental, development or sale, or any combination of those activities, of real property owned by it; or

(d) a corporation more than 50 per cent of the fair market value of the property of which (net of debts incurred to acquire the property) is attributable to real property.

Proposed Amendment — 44.1(10)(c), (d)

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — bijuralism), s. 191, will amend paras. 44.1(10)(c) and (d) by substituting "real or immovable property" for "real property" in each, to come into force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes (July 2010): See under 12(4).

(11) Determination rule — In determining whether a share owned by an individual is an eligible small business corporation share of the individual, this Act shall be read without reference to section 48.1.

(12) Anti-avoidance rule — The permitted deferral of an individual in respect of a qualifying disposition of shares issued by a corporation (in this subsection referred to as "new shares") is deemed to be nil where

(a) the new shares (or shares for which the new shares are substituted property) were issued to the individual or a person related to the individual as part of a series of transactions or events in which

(i) shares of the capital stock of a corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "old shares") were disposed of by the individual or a person related to the individual, or

(ii) the paid-up capital of old shares or the adjusted cost base to the individual or to a person related to the individual of the old shares was reduced;

(b) the new shares (or shares for which the new shares are substituted property) were issued by the corporation that issued the old shares or were issued by a corporation that, at or immediately after the time of issue of those shares, was a corporation that was not dealing at arm's length with the corporation that issued the old shares; and

Proposed Amendment — 44.1(12)(b)

(b) the new shares (or shares for which the new shares are substituted property) were

(i) issued by the corporation that issued the old shares,

(ii) issued by a corporation that, at or immediately after the time of issue of the new shares, was a corporation that was not dealing at arm's length with

(A) the corporation that issued the old shares, or

(B) the individual, or

(iii) issued, by a corporation that acquired the old shares (or by another corporation related to that corporation), as part of the transaction or event or series of transactions or events that included that acquisition of the old shares; and

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 19(3), will amend para. 44.1(12)(b) to read as above, applicable in respect of dispositions that occur after February 27, 2004.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 44.1(12) is an anti-avoidance rule. It applies where an individual or persons related to the individual dispose of shares of a particular corporation (which would normally result in the use of the corporate reorganization rules or a return of paid-up capital of shares of the corporation) and acquire new shares of the particular corporation or a corporation that does not deal at arm's length with the particular corporation principally for the purpose of increasing the total amount of permitted deferrals with respect to qualifying dispositions of the individual and the related persons. Where the rule applies, the permitted deferral with respect to qualifying dispositions of the new shares is deemed to be nil.

Subsection 44.1(12) is amended to apply to the following circumstances:

- when the new shares are issued by a corporation that, at or immediately after the time of issue of the new shares, was a corporation that was not dealing at arm's length with the individual; and
- when the new shares are issued, by a corporation that acquired the old shares (or by another corporation related to that corporation), as part of the transaction or event or series of transactions or events that included that acquisition of the old shares.

(c) it is reasonable to conclude that one of the main reasons for the series of transactions or events or a transaction in the series was to permit the individual, persons related to the individual, or the individual and persons related to the individual to become eligible to deduct under subsection (2) permitted deferrals in respect of qualifying dispositions of new shares (or shares substituted for the new shares) the total of which would exceed the total that those persons would have been eligible to deduct under subsection (2) in respect of permitted deferrals in respect of qualifying dispositions of old shares.

Related Provisions: 248(5) — Substituted property.

Proposed Addition — 44.1(13)

(13) Order of disposition of shares — For the purpose of this section, an individual is deemed to dispose of shares that are identical properties in the order in which the individual acquired them.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 19(4), will add subsec. 44.1(13), applicable in respect of dispositions that occur after December 20, 2002. However, if an individual so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the individual's filing-due date for the individual's taxation year in which the amending legislation is assented to, subsec. 44.1(13) applies, in respect of the individual, to dispositions that occur after February 27, 2000.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 44.1(13) is a provision that applies when an individual disposes of a share that is identical to other shares owned by the individual. The provision deems, for the purposes of section 44.1, the shares to have been disposed of in the same order in which the individual acquired them.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, 2002:

Mr. Mark D. Brender, Davies Ward Phillips & Vineberg LLP, Montreal

Dear Mr. Brender:

We are responding to your letter dated February 20, 2002 concerning section 44.1 of the Income Tax Act (the Act).

Section 44.1 of the Act provides for a deferral of the recognition of a capital gain in cases where an individual disposes of shares of an eligible small business corporation. Your comments relate to the application of this deferral where identical properties are disposed of and not all of the gains on the identical properties are eligible for deferral.

In your example, an individual purchases 100 common shares of an eligible small business corporation (as defined in section 44.1). In the year after the purchase, the corporation makes an initial public offering and ceases to be an eligible small business corporation. On the initial public offering, the individual buys an additional 100 common shares. Finally, the individual disposes of 100 common shares and reinvests the capital gain realized in another eligible small business corporation. In the absence of an ordering rule for dispositions of shares, it would not be certain that the capital gain realized on the sale of the 100 common shares was eligible for the deferral treatment.

It would be appropriate to provide a rule which provides for certainty in determining access to the deferral of the recognition of a capital gain under section 44.1 in the case described in your example. Consequently, we are prepared to recommend that an individual be deemed, for the purpose of this provision, to have disposed of shares that are identical properties in the order in which the individual acquired them.

It will be recommended that this amendment apply to dispositions of shares that occur after announcement date and that, if an individual elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue in the time provided for filing the election, that this amendment apply to dispositions of shares that occur after February 27, 2000. Normally, the time for filing the election would be on or before the filing-due date for the return of income of the individual for the individual's taxation year in which this amendment receives royal assent.

Thank you for bringing this matter to our attention.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

45. (1) Property with more than one use [change in use] — For the purposes of this subdivision the following rules apply:

(a) where a taxpayer,

(i) having acquired property for some other purpose, has commenced at a later time to use it for the purpose of gaining or producing income, or

(ii) having acquired property for the purpose of gaining or producing income, has commenced at a later time to use it for some other purpose, the taxpayer shall be deemed to have

(iii) disposed of it at that later time for proceeds equal to its fair market value at that later time, and

(iv) immediately thereafter reacquired it at a cost equal to that fair market value;

(b) where property has, since it was acquired by a taxpayer, been regularly used in part for the purpose of gaining or producing income and in part for some other purpose, the taxpayer shall be deemed to have acquired, for that other purpose, the proportion of the property that the use regularly made of the property for that other purpose is of the whole use regularly made of the property at a cost to the taxpayer equal to the same proportion of the cost to the taxpayer of the whole property, and, if the property has, in such a case, been disposed of, the proceeds of disposition of the proportion of the property deemed to have been acquired for that other purpose shall be deemed to be the same proportion of the proceeds of disposition of the whole property;

(c) where, at any time after a taxpayer has acquired property, there has been a change in the relation between the use regularly made by the taxpayer of the property for gaining or producing income and the use regularly made of the property for other purposes,

(i) if the use regularly made of the property for those other purposes has increased, the taxpayer shall be deemed to have

(A) disposed of the property at that time for proceeds equal to the proportion of the fair market value of the property at that time that the amount of the increase in the use regularly made by the taxpayer of the property for those other purposes is of the whole use regularly made of the property, and

(B) immediately thereafter reacquired the property so disposed of at a cost equal to the proceeds referred to in clause (A), and

(ii) if the use regularly made of the property for those other purposes has decreased, the taxpayer shall be deemed to have

(A) disposed of the property at that time for proceeds equal to the proportion of the fair market value of the property at that time that the amount of the decrease in use regularly made by the taxpayer of the property for those other purposes is of the whole use regularly made of the property, and

(B) immediately thereafter reacquired the property so disposed of at a cost equal to the proceeds referred to in clause (A); and the amount of the gain or loss, as the case may be, shall be deemed to be the amount that it would have been but for the decrease.

(d) in applying this subsection in respect of a non-resident taxpayer, a reference to "gaining or producing income" shall be read as a reference to "gaining or producing income from a source in Canada".

(5) Excluded property [art flips] — For the purpose of this section, "excluded property" of a taxpayer means property acquired by the taxpayer, or by a person with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length, in circumstances in which it is reasonable to conclude that the acquisition of the property relates to an arrangement, plan or scheme that is promoted by another person or partnership and under which it is reasonable to conclude that the property will be the subject of a gift to which subsection 110.1(1), or the definition "total charitable gifts", "total cultural gifts" or "total ecological gifts" in subsection 118.1(1), applies.

the amount so included shall be added in computing the cost to that person of that property.

(2) Cost of property received as dividend in kind — Where any property has, after 1971, been received by a shareholder of a corporation at any time as, on account or in lieu of payment of, or in satisfaction of, a dividend payable in kind (other than a stock dividend) in respect of a share owned by the shareholder of the capital stock of the corporation, the shareholder shall be deemed to have acquired the property at a cost to the shareholder equal to its fair market value at that time, and the corporation shall be deemed to have disposed of the property at that time for proceeds equal to that fair market value.

(3) Cost of stock dividend — Where a shareholder of a corporation has, after 1971, received a stock dividend in respect of a share owned by the shareholder of the capital stock of the corporation, the shareholder shall be deemed to have acquired the share or shares received by the shareholder as a stock dividend at a cost to the shareholder equal to the total of

(a) where the stock dividend is a dividend, the amount of the stock dividend,

Proposed Amendment — 52(3)(a)

(a) where the stock dividend is a dividend, the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount of the stock dividend

exceeds

(ii) the amount of the dividend that the shareholder may deduct under subsection 112(1) in computing the shareholder's taxable income, except any portion of the dividend that, if paid as a separate dividend, would not be subject to subsection 55(2) because the capital gain referred to in that subsection could reasonably be considered not to be attributable to anything other than income earned or realized by any corporation after 1971 and before the safe-income determination time for the transaction or event or series of transactions or events as part of which the dividend was received,

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 21(2), will amend para. 52(3)(a) to read as above, applicable in respect of amounts received after November 8, 2006.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 52(3) establishes the cost of a share received as a stock dividend by a shareholder of a corporation.

If the stock dividend is a dividend under the Act, paragraph 52(3)(a) provides that the cost of a stock dividend received by a shareholder is the amount of the dividend. Paragraph 52(3)(a) is amended to provide that the cost of a stock dividend to a shareholder that is a corporation does not include the amount, if any, of a dividend that the corporation may deduct under subsection 112(1) in computing the corporation's taxable income (except the portion of the dividend that is not a capital gain under subsection 55(2) because it is attributable to the corporation's safe income). Essentially, this change is meant to ensure that the cost of a stock dividend does not include an amount that is not taxable income to the recipient corporation unless it represents safe income to it.

For related amendments, see the commentary accompanying amended paragraph 53(1)(b) and amended definition "capital dividend account" in subsection 89(1).

This amendment is consequential to changes made to the expenditure limitation proposals in new section 143.3, which were first released for consultation on November 17, 2005 (Department of Finance release 2005-080). [The "safe-income" exception did not appear in earlier drafts before July 2010 — ed.]

(6) [Repealed]

History: Subsec. 52(6) repealed by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 35(2), applicable after 1999, but not to rights that were acquired before 2000 and disposed of before March 2000. It formerly read:

> (6) Cost of right to receive from trust — Notwithstanding subsection (1), where a beneficiary under a trust acquires a right to enforce payment by the trust of an amount out of a capital gain or the income of the trust (determined without reference to the provisions of this Act) for the taxation year of the trust in which the right was acquired by the beneficiary, for the purposes of this subdivision, the cost to the beneficiary of the right shall be deemed to be the amount that became so payable.

(7) Cost of shares of subsidiary — Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, where a corporation disposes of property to another corporation in a transaction to which paragraph 219(1)(l) applies, the cost to it of any share of a particular class of the capital stock of the other corporation received by it as consideration for the property is deemed to be the lesser of the cost of the share to the corporation otherwise determined immediately after the disposition and the amount by which the paid-up capital in respect of that class increases because of the issuance of the share.

History: Subsec. 52(7) amended by 1998, c. 19, s. 93, applicable to taxation years that begin after 1995. The subsec. formerly read:

> (7) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, where a corporation has disposed of property to its subsidiary wholly-owned corporation in a transaction to which paragraph 219(1)(k) applies, the cost to it of any share of a particular class of the capital stock of the subsidiary corporation received by it as consideration for the property shall be deemed to be equal to the lesser of the cost of the share to the corporation otherwise determined immediately after the disposition and the amount, if any, by which the paid-up capital of that class increased by virtue of the issuance of that share.

> (8) Cost of shares on immigration [of corporation] — Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, where at any time a corporation becomes resident in Canada, the cost to any shareholder that is not at that time resident in Canada of any share of the capital stock of the corporation shall be deemed to be equal to the lesser of that cost otherwise determined and the paid-up capital in respect of the share immediately after that time.

53. (1) Adjustments to cost base [additions to ACB] — In computing the adjusted cost base to a taxpayer of property at any time, there shall be added to the cost to the taxpayer of the property such of the following amounts in respect of the property as are applicable:

(a) [negative ACB] — any amount deemed by subsection 40(3) to be a gain of the taxpayer for a taxation year from a disposition before that time of the property;

(b) [share, where 84(1) applied] — where the property is a share of the capital stock of a corporation resident in Canada, the amount of any dividend on the share deemed by subsection 84(1) to have been received by the taxpayer before that time;

Proposed Amendment — 53(1)(b)

(b) where the property is a share of the capital stock of a corporation resident in Canada, the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a dividend on the share deemed by subsection 84(1) to have been received by the taxpayer before that time

exceeds

(ii) the portion of the total determined under subparagraph (i) that relates to dividends in respect of which the taxpayer was permitted a deduction under subsection 112(1) in computing the taxpayer's taxable income, except any portion of the dividend that, if paid as a separate dividend, would not be subject to subsection 55(2) because the capital gain referred to in that subsection could reasonably be considered not to be attributable to anything other than income earned or realized by any corporation after 1971 and before the safe-income determination time for the transaction or event or series of transactions or events as part of which the dividend was received;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 22(1), will amend para. 53(1)(b) to read as above, applicable in respect of dividends received after November 8, 2006. However, if the taxpayer elects, no later than 180 days after the draft legislation is assented to, by filing with the Minister of National Revenue an election in writing, in respect of the dividend received by the taxpayer before July 16, 2010, para. 53(1)(b) is to be read as follows:

> (b) where the property is a share of the capital stock of a corporation resident in Canada, the amount, if any, by which
> (i) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a dividend on the share deemed by subsection 84(1) to have been received by the taxpayer before that time
> (ii) the portion of the total determined under subparagraph (i) that relates to dividends
> (A) in respect of which the taxpayer was permitted a deduction under subsection 112(1) in computing the taxpayer's taxable income, and
> (B) that arose directly or indirectly as a result of a conversion of contributed surplus into paid-up capital;

Technical Notes (July 2010): Paragraph 53(1)(b) provides an addition to cost base — where the taxpayer's property is a share of the capital stock of a corporation resident in Canada — equal to the amount of any dividend on the share deemed by the anti-avoidance rule in subsection 84(1) to have been received by the taxpayer before that time.

Paragraph 53(1)(b) is amended to exclude from this addition certain amounts received by a recipient shareholder that is a corporation. The amount excluded from the cost base addition is the portion, if any, of the dividend that the corporate shareholder is permitted to deduct under subsection 112(1) in computing the corporation's taxable income, except the portion of the dividend that is not a capital gain under subsection 55(2) because it is attributable to the corporation's safe income.

Essentially, this amendment to paragraph 53(1)(b), as well as to paragraph 52(3)(a) and to paragraph (a) of the definition "capital dividend account" in subsection 89(1), addresses circumstances in which increases in a corporation's paid-up capital result in dividends that may be deducted under subsection 112(1) by a recipient corporate shareholder in computing its taxable income (if the dividend is not safe income to the corporation under section 55).

This amendment also relates to changes made to the expenditure limitation proposals in new section 143.3, which were originally released for consultations on November 17, 2005 (Department of Finance release 2005-080). Under the original proposal, the amount by which the fair market value of shares issued by a corporation exceeded the increase in the issuing corporation's paid-up capital could not be treated as an expenditure. One outcome of this approach would have been to preclude certain increases in the adjusted cost base of shares in the issuing corporation where the issuing corporation subsequently increased its paid-up capital by all or a portion of the excess. That proposal has been revised to remove the reference to paid-up capital.

Related Provisions: 52(3)(a) — Cost of share received as stock dividend excludes amount deductible under 112(1).

(b.1) [share of immigrant corporation] — where the property is a share of the capital stock of a corporation, the amount of any dividend deemed by paragraph 128.1(1)(c.2) to have been received in respect of the share by the taxpayer before that time and while the taxpayer was resident in Canada;

Related Provisions: 52(8) — Cost of share to non-resident.

History: Para. 53(1)(b.1) added by 1999, c. 22, subsec. 14(1), applicable after February 23, 1998.

(c) [share, where contribution of capital made] — where the property is a share of the capital stock of a corporation and the taxpayer has, after 1971, made a contribution of capital to the corporation otherwise than by way of a loan, by way of a disposition of shares of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer to which subsection 85.1(3) or paragraph 95(2)(c) applies or, subject to subsection (1.1), a disposition of property in respect of which the taxpayer and the corporation have made an election under section 85, that proportion of such part of the amount of the contribution as cannot reasonably be regarded as a benefit conferred by the taxpayer on a person (other than the corporation) who was related to the taxpayer that

(i) the amount that may reasonably be regarded as the increase in the fair market value, as a result of the contribution, of the share

is of

(ii) the amount that may reasonably be regarded as the increase in the fair market value, as a result of the contribution, of all shares of the capital stock of the corporation owned by the taxpayer immediately after the contribution;

Related Provisions: 52(8) — Cost to non-resident of share of corporation that becomes resident in Canada; 53(1)(j) — Addition to ACB of share on which stock option benefit received; 53(1.1) — Deemed contribution of capital; 92(1)(a), (1.2) — Additions to ACB.

(d) [share of foreign affiliate] — where the property is a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, any amount required by paragraph 92(1)(a) to be added in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the share;

Proposed Amendment — 53(1)(d)

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — foreign affiliates), s. 29, will amend para. 53(1)(d) to substitute "section 92" for "paragraph 92(1)(a)". applicable after December 20, 2002.

S. 53 of the draft legislation provides that any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year that ends before the day on which the draft legislation is assented to and would, in the absence of this section, be precluded because of subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act shall be made to the extent necessary to take into account this amendment, if the taxpayer

(i) elects in writing in respect of all of its foreign affiliates that this section apply in respect of that provision, and

(ii) files that election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before June 30, 2011.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Subsection 53(1) sets out a number of amounts that are added in computing a taxpayer's adjusted cost base of a property. Paragraph 53(1)(d) provides that, where the property is a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, there is to be added any amount required by paragraph 92(1)(a) to be added in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the share.

Consequential to new subsection 92(1.1), which also provides for additions in computing the taxpayer's adjusted cost base of a share of a foreign affiliate, paragraph 53(1)(d) is amended to refer to section 92, instead of only paragraph 92(1)(a). For more detail about new subsection 92(1.1), refer to the commentary on that subsection. This amendment also allows for cost base adjustments pursuant to transitional subsection 92(1.4) where an election is made under clause 51 to have the so-called "consolidated net surplus" rules apply.

(d.01) [share of demutualized insurer] — where the property is a share of the capital stock of a corporation, any amount required by paragraph 139.1(16)(l) to be added in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the share;

History: Para. 53(1)(d.01) added by 2000, c. 19, s. 4, applicable after December 15, 1998.

(d.1) [capital interest in trust] — where the property is a capital interest of the taxpayer in a trust to which paragraph 94(1)(d) applies, any amount required by paragraph 94(5)(a) to be added in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the interest;

Proposed Amendment — 53(1)(d.1)

(d.1) capital interest in a non-resident trust — where the property is a capital interest in a trust, any amount included under subsection 91(1) or (3) in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year that ends at or before that time (or that would have been required to have been included under those subsections but for subsection 56(4.1) and sections 74.1 to 75 of this Act and section 74 of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952) in respect of that interest;

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — NRTs), subsec. 3(1), will amend para. 53(1)(d.1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after 2006, and in computing the adjusted cost base to a taxpayer of a capital interest in a trust for an earlier taxation year if subsec. 94(3), as enacted by s. 6 of the draft legislation, applies to the trust for a taxation year that ends in that earlier taxation year of the taxpayer.

In computing the adjusted cost base of a capital interest in a trust disposed of before August 28, 2010, para. 53(1)(d.1) shall be read as follows:

(d.1) where the property is a capital interest in a trust, any amount required to be included under subsection 91(1) or (3) in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year that ends before that time (or that would have been required to have been included under those subsections but for subsection 56(4.1) and sections 74.1 to 75 of this Act and section 74 of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952) in respect of that interest;

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Paragraph 53(1)(d.1), applied together with paragraph 94(5)(a), provides for an addition in computing the adjusted cost base (ACB) to a taxpayer of the taxpayer's capital interest in a trust to which existing paragraph 94(1)(d) applies. Paragraph 94(5)(a) generally describes amounts required to be included in the taxpayer's income under subsection 91(1) or (3) in respect of the trust, which apply where paragraph 94(1)(d) treats the trust as, in effect, a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer.

Paragraph 53(1)(d.1) is amended to ensure that the historical ACB additions are maintained, notwithstanding the replacement of the rules in existing section 94, and to provide for ACB additions at a particular time in respect of amounts included, under subsection 91(1) or (3) (i.e., where they apply because of section 94.2, the successor to paragraph 94(1)(d)), in the taxpayer's income for a taxation year that ends at or before the particular time.

This amendment applies to taxation years that end after 2006. It also applies in computing the adjusted cost base to a taxpayer of a capital interest in a trust for an earlier taxation year if new subsection 94(3) applies to the trust (because of a valid election by the trust under the coming-into-force provision for new section 94) for a taxation year that ends in that earlier taxation year of the taxpayer.

Related Provisions: 53(2)(h), (i), (j) — Deductions from adjusted cost base — interest in a trust.

(d.2) [unit in mutual fund trust] — where the property is a unit in a mutual fund trust, any amount required by subsection 132.1(2) to be added in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the unit;

(d.3) [share] — where the property is a share of the capital stock of a corporation of which the taxpayer was, at any time, a specified shareholder, any expense incurred by the taxpayer in respect of land or a building of the corporation that was by reason of subsection 18(2) or (3.1) not deductible by the taxpayer in computing the taxpayer's income for any taxation year commencing before that time;

Related Provisions: 10(1.1) — Effect of 53(1)(d.3) on cost of land inventory; 53(1)(h) — Where land owned directly by taxpayer.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-153R3: Land developers — subdivision and development costs and carrying charges on land.

(e) [partnership interest] — where the property is an interest in a partnership,

(i) an amount in respect of each fiscal period of the partnership ending after 1971 and before that time, equal to the total of all amounts each of which is the taxpayer's share (other than a share under an agreement referred to in subsection 96(1.1)) of the income of the partnership from any source for that fiscal period, computed as if this Act were read without reference to

(A) paragraphs 38(a.1) and (a.2) and the fractions set out in the formula in paragraph 14(1)(b) and in subsection 14(5), paragraph 38(a) and subsection 41(1),

(A.1) paragraph 18(1)(l.1),

Proposed Repeal — 53(1)(e)(i)(A.1)

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), subsec. 4(1), will repeal cl. 53(1)(e)(i)(A.1), applicable in respect of amounts that became payable after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 53(1)(e) provides for additions to the adjusted cost base of a taxpayer's partnership interest.

Existing clause 53(1)(e)(i)(A.1) is repealed consequential to the repeal of paragraph 18(1)(l.1). This amendment applies to amounts that became payable after December 20, 2002.

Proposed Addition — 53(1)(e)(i)(A.1)

(A.1) subparagraph 39(1)(a)(i.1) in respect of an object referred to in that subparagraph that is not the subject of a gifting arrangement, as defined in subsection 237.1(1), nor a property that is a tax shelter,

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), subsec. 4(2), will add cl. 53(1)(e)(i)(A.1), applicable in respect of the disposition of an object made after 2003.

Technical Notes: New clause 53(1)(e)(i)(A.1) provides that a gain from a disposition of an object that is certified cultural property, by a partnership to a designated institution, will generally result in a corresponding adjustment to the adjusted cost base of the partners' interests in the partnership. That is, a partner's adjusted cost base will now be computed as if the Act were read without reference to subparagraph 39(1)(a)(i.1), where the object referred to in that subparagraph is not the subject of a gifting arrangement, nor a property that is a tax shelter, for the purpose of section 237.1.

(A.2) the description of C in the formula in paragraph 14(1)(b), and

(B) paragraph (i), paragraphs 12(1)(o) and (z.5), 18(1)(m), 20(1)(v.1) and 29(1)(b) and (2)(b), section 55, subsections 69(6) and (7) and paragraph 82(1)(b) of this Act and paragraphs 20(1)(gg) and 81(1)(r) and (s) of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, and the provisions of the Income Tax Application Rules relating to income from the operation of new mines,

(ii) the taxpayer's share of any capital dividends and any life insurance capital dividends received by the partnership before that time on shares of the capital stock of a corporation that were partnership property,

(iii) the taxpayer's share of the amount, if any, by which

(A) any proceeds of a life insurance policy received by the partnership after 1971 and before that time in consequence of the death of any person whose life was insured under the policy,

exceeds

(B) the adjusted cost basis (within the meaning assigned by subsection 148(9)) of the policy to the partnership immediately before that person's death,

(iv) where the taxpayer has, after 1971, made a contribution of capital to the partnership otherwise than by way of loan, such part of the amount of the contribution as cannot reasonably be regarded as a benefit conferred on any other member of the partnership who was related to the taxpayer,

Proposed Addition — 53(1)(e)(iv.1)

(iv.1) each amount that is in respect of a specified amount described in subsection 80.2(1) and that is paid by the taxpayer to the partnership, to the extent that the amount paid is not deductible in computing the income of the taxpayer,

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 22(2), will add subpara. 53(1)(e)(iv.1), applicable to payments made in taxation years that end after 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Paragraph 53(1)(e) provides for additions to the adjusted cost base of a taxpayer's partnership interest. This paragraph is being amended, by adding new subparagraph (iv.1), effective for payments made in taxation years that end after 2002. New subparagraph 53(1)(e)(iv.1) provides for an addition to the taxpayer's adjusted cost base in circumstances where the taxpayer makes a payment to a partnership that is described in subsection 80.2(1). The addition to the adjusted cost base is equal to the amount of the payment that is not deductible in computing the income of the taxpayer.

(v) where the time is immediately before the taxpayer's death and the taxpayer was at that time a member of a partnership, the value, at the time of the taxpayer's death, of the rights or things referred to in subsection 70(2) in respect of a partnership interest held by the taxpayer immediately before the taxpayer's death, other than an interest referred to in subsection 96(1.5),

(vi) any amount deemed by subsection 40(3.1) to be a gain of the taxpayer for a taxation year from a disposition before that time of the property,

(vii) any amount deemed by paragraph 98(1)(c) or 98.1(1)(c) to be a gain of the taxpayer for a taxation year from a disposition before that time of the property,

(vii.1) a share of the taxpayer's Canadian development expense or Canadian oil and gas property expense that was deducted at or before that time in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the interest because of subparagraph (2)(c)(ii) and in respect of which the taxpayer elected under paragraph (f) of the definition "Canadian development expense" in subsection 66.2(5) or paragraph (b) of the definition "Canadian oil and gas property expense" in subsection 66.4(5), as the case may be,

(viii) an amount deemed, before that time, by subsection 66.1(7), 66.2(6) or 66.4(6) to be an amount referred to in the description of G in the definition "cumulative Canadian exploration expense" in subsection 66.1(6), paragraph (a) of the description of F in the definition "cumulative Canadian development expense" in subsection 66.2(5) or the description of G in that definition, or paragraph (a) of the description of F in the definition "cumulative Canadian oil and gas property expense" in subsection 66.4(5) or the description of G in that definition in respect of the taxpayer,

Proposed Addition — 53(1)(e)(viii.1)

(viii.1) an amount deemed, before that time, by subsection 59(1.1) to be proceeds of disposition receivable by the taxpayer in respect of the disposition of a foreign resource property,

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), subsec. 4(3), will add subpara. 53(1)(e)(viii.1), applicable for fiscal periods of a partnership that begin after 2000.

Technical Notes: New subparagraph 53(1)(e)(viii.1) provides for an addition in computing the adjusted cost base of a taxpayer's partnership interest, where the taxpayer is a member of the partnership, equal to the member's share of proceeds of disposition receivable by the member in respect of a disposition of a foreign resource property by the partnership. This amendment ensures that, on disposition of a foreign resource property by the partnership, the proceeds of the disposition that are deemed by subsection 59(1.1) to become receivable by a member of the partnership and that are excluded in computing the income of the partnership because of paragraph 96(1)(d) are added to the adjusted cost base of the member's partnership interest.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, July 16, 2004:

Dear [xxx]:

Thank you for your letter of January 27, 2004 to Davine Roach of this Division concerning the interaction among subsection 59(1.1) and paragraphs 53(1)(e) and 96(1)(d) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act"). In particular, your concern relates to the application of these provisions in circumstances where a partnership disposes of a foreign resource property ("FRP").

Where a taxpayer is a member of a partnership, the taxpayer's share of the net proceeds of disposition of a FRP disposed of by the partnership is deemed by subsections 59(1) and (1.1) of the Act to be included in the taxpayer's income. However, there is no provision of the Act that permits an addition to the adjusted cost base ("ACB") of the partnership interest held by the taxpayer. You submit that this is an inappropriate tax result because a subsequent distribution of the net proceeds realized on the disposition of the FRP by the partnership would reduce the ACB of the taxpayer's partnership interest. Since the ACB of the taxpayer's partnership interest was not increased to reflect the fact that this amount was already included in the taxpayer's income, the taxpayer would be subject to double taxation.

In your letter, you noted that paragraph 96(1)(d) of the Act was amended, applicable to partnership fiscal periods that begin after 2000, to include a reference to subsection 59(1). As a result of this change, you submit that a concurrent amendment to paragraph 53(1)(e) is required to ensure that the proceeds of disposition deemed to become receivable by a partner under subsection 59(1.1) are added to the ACB of that partner's partnership interest.

We agree that the proceeds of disposition of a FRP that are deemed by subsection 59(1.1) of the Act to become receivable by a member of a partnership and that are excluded in computing the income of the partnership by paragraph 96(1)(d) should be added to the ACB of that member's partnership interest. Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend that paragraph 53(1)(e) be amended, applicable to fiscal periods that begin after 2000, to include in the ACB of a partner's partnership interest, an amount equal to the amount deemed to be receivable by the partner pursuant to subsection 59(1.1). While I cannot, as you know, offer an assurance that either the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendation, I hope that this statement of our position is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendment — 53(1)(r)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 13, 2003:

Dear [xxx]:

Thank you for your letter dated April 10, 2002, concerning paragraph 53(1)(r) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") and its application in respect of an employee trust.

Paragraph 53(1)(r) of the Act was added as a consequence of the elimination of the $100,000 lifetime capital gains exemption for gains that are realized after February 22, 1994 and the introduction of a mechanism in subsection 110.6(19) of the Act for recognizing gains accrued to the end of that day. Where an individual recognized a capital gain accrued to that time on a share or other interest in a flow-through entity (as defined in subsection 39.1(1) of the Act), the amount of the gain is credited to a special account referred to as the individual's exempt capital gains balance in respect of the entity. Claims may be made against this account to reduce gains that are flowed out to the individual by the entity for taxation years that end before 2005 or that are realized on dispositions of shares or other interests in the entity for those years.

Where an individual disposes of all shares or other interest in an entity described in any of paragraphs (a) to (f) of the flow-through entity definition, paragraph 53(1)(r) of the Act increases the individual's adjusted cost base of each share or interest by a pro rata portion of the amount of the individual's unused exempt capital gains balance in respect of the entity. Paragraph 53(1)(r) of the Act benefits individuals in circumstances in which their interest in a flow-through entity has declined in value since February 22, 1994.

In your letter, you have requested that paragraph 53(1)(r) of the Act be amended to include a reference to a flow-through entity described in paragraph (h) of the definition "flow-through" entity in subsection 39.1(1) of the Act, (i.e. a trust maintained primarily to hold shares of a corporation for the benefit of employees of the corporation).

In your letter, you have also requested that paragraph 53(1)(r) of the Act be amended to provide that where the fair market value of a particular interest in an entity is nil, the fair market value of the particular interest be deemed to be $1 to permit a calculation to be made under the formula in paragraph 53(1)(r) of the Act where the fair market value of all the interests in an entity is nil at the time of disposition.

From a policy perspective, it appears appropriate to permit a trust described in paragraph (h) of the definition "flow-through entity" in subsection 39.1(1) of the Act to qualify for the adjustment to the cost base in paragraph 53(1)(r) of the Act. Consequently, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that an amendment be made to paragraph 53(1)(r) of the Act to add a reference to an entity described in paragraph (h) of the definition "flow-through entity" in subsection 39.1(1) of the Act. We understand that this particular issue arises, in the context of your client, with respect to a disposition occurring in 2002; accordingly it will be recommended that this amendment apply to dispositions of shares or interests that occur after 2001.

It also seems appropriate to provide that, for the purpose of the calculation in paragraph 53(1)(r) of the Act, where the fair market value of all the interests in an entity is nil at the time of disposition, the fair market value of each interest in the entity be deemed to be $1 and a recommendation to that effect will also be put forward.

Of course, I can offer no assurance that the Minister of Finance will agree with the recommendations that I have described. Nonetheless, I hope that this statement of our position is helpful.

Thank you for bringing this matter to our attention.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(A) any amount required under paragraph 80.1(4)(d) or section 92 to be deducted in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the share, and

(B) any amount received by the taxpayer after 1971 and on or before August 19, 2011 on a reduction of the paid-up capital of the corporation in respect of the share, or

(ii) in any other case, any amount received by the taxpayer after 1971 and before that time on a reduction of the paid-up capital of the corporation in respect of the share;

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), s. 7, will amend para. 53(2)(b) to read as above, applicable after August 19, 2011.

See also Application under s. 90 re extended reassessment deadline.

Technical Notes: Subsection 53(2) sets out a number of amounts that are deducted in computing a taxpayer's adjusted cost base ("ACB") of a property at a particular time. Paragraph 53(2)(b) provides that, where the property is a share of the capital stock of a non-resident corporation, there is to be deducted all amounts described in subparagraph (i) plus all amounts described in subparagraph (ii). The amounts described in subparagraph (i) are any amounts required by paragraph 80.1(4)(d) or section 92 to be deducted in computing the taxpayer's ACB of the share. The amounts described in subparagraph (ii) are any amounts received by the taxpayer after 1971 and before the particular time on a reduction of the paid-up capital of the non-resident corporation in respect of the share.

Paragraph 53(2)(b) is being amended to provide that reductions, made after August 19, 2011, of the paid-up capital of a foreign affiliate in respect of a share of the foreign affiliate no longer reduce the ACB of the share. This amendment is consequential to the new definition of a dividend from a foreign affiliate (which is effected by the combined operation of new subsections 90(2) and (3)) that should include reductions of capital by a foreign affiliate. For more details, refer to the commentary below dealing with those provisions.

(b.1) [capital interest in non-resident trust] — where the property is a capital interest of the taxpayer in a trust to which paragraph 94(1)(d) applies, any amount required by paragraph 94(5)(b) to be deducted in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the interest;

(b.1) capital interest in a non-resident trust — where the property is a capital interest in a trust, any amount deducted by the taxpayer by reason of subsection 91(2) or (4) in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year that ends at or before that time (or that would have been so deductible by the taxpayer but for subsection 56(4.1) and sections 74.1 to 75 of this Act and section 74 of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952) in respect of that interest;

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — NRTs), subsec. 3(2), will amend para. 53(2)(b.1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after 2006, and in computing the adjusted cost base to a taxpayer of a capital interest in a trust for an earlier taxation year if subsec. 94(3), as enacted by s. 6 of the draft legislation, applies to the trust for a taxation year that ends in that earlier taxation year of the taxpayer.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Paragraph 53(2)(b.1), applied together with existing paragraph 94(5)(b), provides for a deduction in computing the ACB to a taxpayer of the taxpayer's capital interest in a trust to which existing paragraph 94(1)(d) applies. Paragraph 94(5)(b) generally describes amounts for which a deduction may be claimed under subsection 91(2) or (4) in respect of the trust, which apply where paragraph 94(1)(d) treats the trust as, in effect, a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer.

Paragraph 53(2)(b.1) is amended to ensure that historical ACB deductions are maintained, notwithstanding the replacement of the rules in existing section 94, and to provide for ACB deductions at a particular time in respect of amounts deducted, under subsections 91(2) or (4) (i.e., where they apply because of section 94.2, the successor to paragraph 94(1)(d)). in the taxpayer's income for a taxation year that ends at or before the particular time.

This amendment applies to taxation years that end after 2006. It also applies in computing the adjusted cost base to a taxpayer of a capital interest in a trust for an earlier taxation year if new subsection 94(3) applies to the trust (because of a valid election by the trust under the coming-into-force provision for new section 94) for a taxation year that ends in that earlier taxation year of the taxpayer.

(b.2) [property of corporation after change in control] — where the property is property of a corporation control of which was acquired by a person or group of persons at or before that time, any amount required by paragraph 111(4)(c) to be deducted in computing the adjusted cost base of the property;

Related Provisions: 142.4(1)"tax basis"(q) — Disposition of specified debt obligation by financial institution; 256(6)–(9) — Whether control acquired.

(c) [partnership interest] — where the property is an interest in a partnership,

(i) an amount in respect of each fiscal period of the partnership ending after 1971 and before that time, equal to the total of amounts each of which is the taxpayer's share (other than a share under an agreement referred to in subsection 96(1.1)) of any loss of the partnership from any source for that fiscal period, computed as if this Act were read without reference to

(A) the fractions set out in subsection 14(5), paragraph 38(b) and in the formula in paragraph 14(1)(b),

(A.1) paragraph 18(1)(l.1),

Proposed Repeal — 53(2)(c)(i)(A.1)

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), subsec. 4(4), will repeal cl. 53(2)(c)(i)(A.1), applicable in respect of amounts that became payable after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 53(2)(c) provides for deductions to the adjusted cost base of a taxpayer's partnership interest.

Clause 53(2)(c)(i)(A.1) is repealed consequential to the repeal of paragraph 18(1)(l.1).

(A.2) the description of C in the formula in paragraph 14(1)(b),

(B) paragraphs 12(1)(o) and (z.5), 18(1)(m) and 20(1)(v.1), section 31, subsection 40(2), section 55 and subsections 69(6) and (7) of this Act and paragraphs 20(1)(gg) and 81(1)(r) and (s) of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, and

(i.1) an amount in respect of each fiscal period of the partnership ending before that time that is the taxpayer's limited partnership loss in respect of the partnership for the taxation year in which that fiscal period ends to the extent that such loss was deducted by the taxpayer in computing the taxpayer's taxable income for any taxation year that commenced before that time,

(i.2) any amount deemed by subsection 40(3.12) to be a loss of the taxpayer for a taxation year from a disposition before that time of the property,

(i.3) if at that time the property is not a tax shelter investment as defined by section 143.2 and the taxpayer would be a member, described in subsection 40(3.1), of the partnership if the fiscal period of the partnership that includes that time ended at that time, the unpaid principal amount of any indebtedness of the taxpayer for which recourse is limited, either immediately or in the future and either absolutely or contingently, and that can reasonably be considered to have been used to acquire the property,

(i.4) unless that time is immediately before a disposition of the interest, if the taxpayer is a member of the partnership and the taxpayer has been a specified member of the partnership at all times since becoming a member of the partnership, or the taxpayer is at that time a limited partner of the partnership for the purposes of subsection 40(3.1),

(B) where that time is in any other taxation year, the portion of the amount deducted in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxation year immediately preceding that other year under subsection 34.2(11) in respect of the partnership that would have been deductible if the definition "qualifying transitional income" in subsection 34.2(1) were read without reference to paragraph (b),

(ii) an amount in respect of each fiscal period of the partnership ending after 1971 and before that time, other than a fiscal period after the fiscal period in which the taxpayer ceased to be a member of the partnership, equal to the taxpayer's share of the total of

(C) the Canadian exploration expense, if any, incurred by the partnership in the fiscal period,

(E) the Canadian oil and gas property expense, if any, incurred by the partnership in the fiscal period,

(iii) any amount deemed by subsection 110.1(4) or 118.1(8) to have been a gift made, or by subsection 127(4.2) to have been an amount contributed, by the taxpayer by reason of the taxpayer's membership in the partnership at the end of a fiscal period of the partnership ending before that time,

Proposed Amendment — 53(2)(c)(iii)

(iii) any amount deemed by subsection 110.1(4) or 118.1(8) to have been the eligible amount of a gift made by the taxpayer by reason of the taxpayer's membership in the partnership at the end of a fiscal period of the partnership ending before that time,

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 22(3), will amend subpara. 53(2)(c)(iii) to read as above, applicable in respect of gifts and contributions made after December 20, 2002, except that in its application before January 1, 2007, it is to be read as follows:

(iii) any amount deemed by subsection 110.1(4) or 118.1(8) to have been the eligible amount of a gift made, or by subsection 127(4.2) to have been an amount contributed, by the taxpayer by reason of the taxpayer's membership in the partnership at the end of a fiscal period of the partnership ending before that time,

Technical Notes (July 2010): Paragraph 53(2)(c) provides deductions from a taxpayer's adjusted cost base ("ACB") of a partnership interest for the purpose of determining its adjusted cost base. Subparagraph 53(2)(c)(iii) provides for the deduction from the ACB of a partnership interest of an amount deemed by subsection 110.1(4), 118.1(8) or 127(4.2) to have been a charitable donation or a political party contribution because of the taxpayer's membership in the partnership.

Subparagraph 53(2)(c)(iii) is amended, consequential to the amendment of subsections 110.1(4), 118.1(8) and 127(4.2) and the addition of new subsection 248(31), for gifts made after December 20, 2002. Amended subparagraph 53(2)(c)(iii) refers to the "eligible amount" of a gift or contribution made because of the taxpayer's membership in the partnership. For additional information about eligible amounts, see the commentary to new subsections 248(31) and (32).

(v) any amount received by the taxpayer after 1971 and before that time as, on account or in lieu of payment of, or in satisfaction of, a distribution of the taxpayer's share (other than a share under an agreement referred to in subsection 96(1.1)) of the partnership profits or partnership capital,

(vi) an amount equal to that portion of all amounts deducted under subsection 127(5) in computing the tax otherwise payable by the taxpayer under this Part for the taxpayer's taxation years ending before that time that may reasonably be attributed to amounts added in computing the investment tax credit of the taxpayer by virtue of subsection 127(8),

(vii) any amount added pursuant to subsection 127.2(4) in computing the taxpayer's share-purchase tax credit for a taxation year ending before or after that time,

(viii) an amount equal to 50% of the amount deemed to be designated pursuant to subsection 127.3(4) before that time in respect of each share, debt obligation or right acquired by the partnership and deemed to have been acquired by the taxpayer under that subsection,

(ix) the amount of all assistance received by the taxpayer before that time that has resulted in a reduction of the capital cost of a depreciable property to the partnership by virtue of subsection 13(7.2),

(x) any amount deductible by the taxpayer under subparagraph 20(1)(e)(vi) in respect of the partnership for a taxation year of the taxpayer ending at or after that time,

Proposed Amendment — 53(4) opening words

(4) Recomputation of adjusted cost base on transfers and deemed dispositions — If at any time in a taxation year a person or partnership (in this subsection referred to as the "vendor") disposes of a specified property and the proceeds of disposition of the property are determined under paragraph 48.1(1)(c), section 70 or 73, subsection 85(1), paragraph 87(4)(a) or (c) or 88(1)(a), subsection 97(2) or 98(2), paragraph 98(3)(f) or (5)(f), subsection 104(4), paragraph 107(2)(a) or (2.1)(a), 107.4(3)(a) or 111(4)(e) or section 128.1,

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 22(4), will amend the opening words of subsec. 53(4) to read as above, applicable after February 27, 2004.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 53(4) provides rules that affect the computation of the adjusted cost base (ACB) to a taxpayer of any "specified property". As defined in section 54, "specified property" is capital property that is a share, a capital interest in a trust, a partnership interest or an option to acquire any such property. The rules in subsection 53(4) apply where the proceeds of disposition of a specified property are determined under any one of a number of specified provisions in the Act set out in the subsection.

Subsection 53(4) is amended to reflect amendments to a number of those specified provisions; namely, subsections 107(2.1), (4) and (5). The references in subsection 53(4) to subsections 107(4) and (5) are removed because those provisions no longer provide for a deemed disposition of trust property. Instead, where subsection 107(4) or (5) applies, a disposition of property will result under paragraph 107(2.1)(a). Therefore, the reference to paragraph 107(2.1)(a) in subsection 53(4) is sufficient.

(a) there shall be deducted after that time in computing the adjusted cost base to the person or partnership (in this subsection referred to as the "transferee") who acquires or reacquires the property at or immediately after that time the amount, if any, by which

exceeds

(ii) the amount that would be the vendor's capital gain for the year from that disposition if this Act were read without reference to subparagraph 40(1)(a)(iii) and subsection 100(2); and

(b) the amount determined under paragraph (a) in respect of that disposition shall be added after that time in computing the adjusted cost base to the transferee of the property.

Related Provisions: 53(1)(q) — Addition to adjusted cost base for amount under 53(4)(b); 53(2)(g.1) — Reduction in adjusted cost base under 53(4)(a); 53(5) — Recomputation of ACB on other transfers; 80.03(2)(a) — Deemed gain on disposition following debt forgiveness; 251(1) — Arm's length.

History: The opening words of subsec. 53(4) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 36(14), applicable to 1998 et seq. The opening words formerly read:

(4) Where at any time in a taxation year a person or partnership (in this subsection referred to as the "vendor") disposes of a specified property and the proceeds of disposition of the property are determined under paragraph 48.1(1)(c), section 70 or 73, subsection 85(1), paragraph 87(4)(a) or (c) or 88(1)(a), subsection 97(2) or 98(2), paragraph 98(3)(f) or (5)(f), subsection 104(4), paragraph 107(2)(a), (2.1)(a), (4)(d) or (5)(a) or 111(4)(e) or section 128.1,

The opening words of subsec. 53(4) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 94(6), applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994. The opening words formerly read:

(4) Where at any time in a taxation year a person or partnership (in this subsection referred to as the "vendor") disposes of a specified property and the proceeds of disposition of the property are determined under paragraph 48.1(1)(c), section 70 or 73, subsection 85(1), paragraph 85.1(1)(a), 87(4)(a) or (c) or 88(1)(a), subsection 97(2) or 98(2), paragraph 98(3)(f) or (5)(f), subsection 104(4), paragraph 107(2)(a), (2.1)(a), (4)(d) or (5)(a) or 111(4)(e) or section 128.1,

Subsec. 53(4) added by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 17(4), applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994.

(5) Recomputation of adjusted cost base on other transfers — Where

(a) at any time in a taxation year a person or partnership (in this subsection referred to as the "vendor") disposes of a specified property to another person or partnership (in this subsection referred to as the "transferee"),

(b) immediately before that time, the vendor and the transferee do not deal with each other at arm's length or would not deal with each other at arm's length if paragraph 80(2)(j) applied for the purpose of this subsection,

(c) paragraph (b) would apply in respect of the disposition if each right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b) that is a right of the transferee to acquire the specified property from the vendor or a right of the transferee to acquire other property as part of a transaction or event or series of transactions or events that includes the disposition were not taken into account, and

(d) the proceeds of the disposition are not determined under any of the provisions referred to in subsection (4),

the following rules apply:

(e) there shall be deducted after that time in computing the adjusted cost base to the transferee of the property the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts deducted under paragraph (2)(g.1) in computing the adjusted cost base to the vendor of the property immediately before that time

exceeds

(ii) the amount that would be the vendor's capital gain for the year from that disposition if this Act were read without reference to subparagraph 40(1)(a)(iii) and subsection 100(2), and

(f) the amount determined under paragraph (e) in respect of that disposition shall be added after that time in computing the adjusted cost base to the transferee of the property.

Related Provisions: 53(1)(q) — Addition to ACB for amount under 53(5)(b); 53(2)(g.1) — Reduction in ACB under 53(5)(a); 80.03(2)(a) — Deemed gain on disposition following debt forgiveness.

History: Subsec. 53(5) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 94(7), applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994. The subsec. formerly read:

(5) Where at any time in a taxation year a person or partnership (in this subsection referred to as the "vendor") disposes of a specified property to another person or partnership (in this subsection referred to as the "transferee"), the vendor and the transferee do not deal with each other at arm's length (or would not deal with each other at arm's length if paragraph 80(2)(j) applied for the purpose of this subsection) and the proceeds of disposition of the property at that time are not determined under any of the provisions referred to in subsection (4),

(a) there shall be deducted after that time in computing the adjusted cost base to the transferee of the property the amount, if any, by which

exceeds

(ii) the amount that would be the vendor's capital gain for the year from that disposition if this Act were read without reference to subparagraph 40(1)(a)(iii) and subsection 100(2); and

(b) the amount determined under paragraph (a) in respect of that disposition shall be added after that time in computing the adjusted cost base to the transferee of the property.

Subsec. 53(5) added by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 17(4), applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994.

(6) Recomputation of adjusted cost base on amalgamation — Where a capital property that is a specified property is acquired by a new corporate entity at any time as a result of the amalgamation or merger of 2 or more predecessor corporations,

(a) there shall be deducted after that time in computing the adjusted cost base to the new entity of the property the total of all amounts deducted under paragraph (2)(g.1) in computing, immediately before that time, the adjusted cost base to a predecessor corporation of the property, unless those amounts are otherwise deducted under that paragraph in computing the adjusted cost base to the new entity of the property; and

(b) the amount deducted under paragraph (a) in respect of the acquisition shall be added after that time in computing the adjusted cost base to the new entity of the property.

Related Provisions: 53(1)(q) — Addition to ACB for amount under 53(6)(b); 53(2)(g.1) — Reduction in ACB under 53(6)(a); 80.03(2)(a) — Deemed gain on disposition following debt forgiveness.

Proposed Amendment — 54.1(1) opening words

54.1 (1) Exception to principal residence rules — A taxation year in which a taxpayer does not ordinarily inhabit the taxpayer's property as a consequence of the relocation of the place of employment of the taxpayer or the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner while the taxpayer or the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner, as the case may be, is employed by an employer who is not a person to whom the taxpayer or the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner is related is deemed not to be a previous taxation year referred to in paragraph (d) of the definition "principal residence" in section 54 if

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 24, will amend the opening words of subsec. 54.1(1) to read as above, applicable to 2001 et seq. except that, if a taxpayer and a person have jointly elected under s. 144 of the Modernization of Benefits and Obligations Act [S.C. 2000, c. 12; see the transitional rules reproduced in the History to 248(1)"common-law partner"], in respect of the 1998, 1999 or 2000 taxation years, the amendment applies to the taxpayer and the person in respect of the applicable taxation year and subsequent taxation years.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 54.1 sets out an exception to the principal residence rules. Under the rules in section 54, if a housing unit is not ordinarily inhabited in a year and is rented out, it can continue to qualify as a principal residence for up to 4 years if the taxpayer so elects under subsection 45(2). However, under section 54.1 it can continue to so qualify indefinitely provided that, as a consequence of a relocation of employment of the taxpayer or the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner, the property is not ordinarily inhabited by the taxpayer. The recent amendments to add references in the Act to a common-law partner was not made to the English version of section 54.1. The current amendment adds the required reference and corrects that oversight and generally applies to the 2001 and subsequent taxation years. However, it may apply as early as 1998 where common-law partners have jointly elected to be treated as such under the Act, starting in that year.

(a) the property subsequently becomes ordinarily inhabited by the taxpayer during the term of the taxpayer's or the taxpayer's spouse's or common-law partner's employment by that employer or before the end of the taxation year immediately following the taxation year in which the taxpayer's or the spouse's or common-law partner's employment by that employer terminates; or

(b) the taxpayer dies during the term of the taxpayer's or the spouse's or common-law partner's employment by that employer.

(2) Definition of "property" — In this section, "property", in relation to a taxpayer, means a housing unit

(a) owned by the taxpayer,

(b) in respect of which the taxpayer has a leasehold interest, or

(c) in respect of which the taxpayer owned a share of the capital stock of a co-operative housing corporation if the share was acquired for the sole purpose of acquiring the right to inhabit a housing unit owned by the corporation whether jointly with another person or otherwise in the year and that at all times was at least 40 kilometres farther from the taxpayer's or the taxpayer's spouse's or common-law partner's new place of employment than was the taxpayer's subsequent place or places of residence.

Related Provisions: 40(2)(b), 40(4)–(6) — Principal residence rules.

History [s. 54.1]: The opening words of subsec. 54.1(1) amended by 2001, c. 17, s. 238, applicable to 2001 et seq. except that, if a taxpayer and a person have jointly elected pursuant to s. 144 of the Modernization of Benefits and Obligations Act [2000, c. 12], in respect of the 1998, 1999 or 2000 taxation years, the amendment applies to the taxpayer and the person in respect of the applicable taxation year and subsequent taxation years. The opening words formerly read:

> 54.1 (1) A taxation year in which a taxpayer does not ordinarily inhabit the taxpayer's property as a consequence of the relocation of the taxpayer's or the taxpayer's spouse's or common-law partner's place of employment while the taxpayer or the spouse, as the case may be, is employed by an employer who is not a person to whom the taxpayer or the spouse is related shall be deemed not to be a previous taxation year referred to in paragraph (d) of the definition "principal residence" in section 54 if

S. 54.1 amended to replace "spouse's"with "spouse's or common-law partner's" by 2000, c. 12, Sch. 2, s. 7, applicable to 2001 et seq., in force July 31, 2000. See also the transitional rules reproduced in the History to 248(1)"common-law partner".

"distribution" means a direct or indirect transfer of property of a corporation (referred to in this section as the "distributing corporation") to one or more corporations (each of which is referred to in this section as a "transferee corporation") where, in respect of each type of property owned by the distributing corporation immediately before the transfer, each transferee corporation receives property of that type the fair market value of which is equal to or approximates the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the fair market value, immediately before the transfer, of all property of that type owned at that time by the distributing corporation,

B is the fair market value, immediately before the transfer, of all the shares of the capital stock of the distributing corporation owned at that time by the transferee corporation, and

C is the fair market value, immediately before the transfer, of all the issued shares of the capital stock of the distributing corporation;

Related Provisions: 55(3.02) — Where distributing corporation is a specified corporation; 88(1)(c)(iv) — Winding-up.

(b) an exchange of shares of the capital stock of the distributing corporation by one or more shareholders of the distributing corporation (each of whom is referred to in this paragraph as a "participant") for shares of the capital stock of another corporation (referred to in this paragraph as the "acquiror") in contemplation of the distribution where

(i) no share of the capital stock of the acquiror outstanding immediately after the exchange (other than directors' qualifying shares) is owned at that time by any person or partnership other than a participant,

and either

(ii) the acquiror owns, immediately before the distribution, all the shares each of which is a share of the capital stock of the distributing corporation that was owned immediately before the exchange by a participant, or

(iii) the fair market value, immediately before the distribution, of each participant's shares of the capital stock of the acquiror is equal to or approximates the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the fair market value, immediately before the distribution, of all the shares of the capital stock of the acquiror then outstanding (other than shares issued to participants in consideration for shares of a specified class all the shares of which were acquired by the acquiror on the exchange),

B is the fair market value, immediately before the exchange, of all the shares of the capital stock of the distributing corporation (other than shares of a specified class none or all of the shares of which were acquired by the acquiror on the exchange) owned at that time by the participant,

C is the fair market value, immediately before the exchange, of all the shares (other than shares of a specified class none or all of the shares of which were acquired by the acquiror on the exchange and shares to be redeemed, acquired or cancelled by the distributing corporation pursuant to the exercise of a statutory right of dissent by the holder of the share) of the capital stock of the distributing corporation outstanding immediately before the exchange, and

D is the fair market value, immediately before the distribution, of all the shares issued to the participant by the acquiror in consideration for shares of a specified class all of the shares of which were acquired by the acquiror on the exchange;

(b) a redemption or purchase for cancellation by a transferee corporation in relation to the distributing corporation, or by a corporation that, immediately after the redemption or purchase, was a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation of the transferee corporation, as part of the reorganization in which the distribution was made, of all of the shares of the capital stock of the transferee corporation or the subsidiary wholly-owned corporation that were acquired by the distributing corporation in consideration for the transfer of property received by the transferee corporation on the distribution, and

(c) a redemption or purchase for cancellation by the distributing corporation, in contemplation of the distribution, of all the shares of its capital stock each of which is

(i) a share of a specified class the cost of which, at the time of its issuance, to its original owner was equal to the fair market value at that time of the consideration for which it was issued, or

(ii) a share that was issued, in contemplation of the distribution, by the distributing corporation in exchange for a share described in subparagraph (i);

History: Paras. (a) and (b) of the definition "permitted redemption" in subsec. 55(1) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 96(1), applicable to dividends received after February 21, 1994. The paras. formerly read:

Proposed Addition — 55(1)"qualified person"

"qualified person", in relation to a distribution, means a person or partnership with whom the distributing corporation deals at arm's length at all times during the course of the series of transactions or events that includes the distribution if

(a) at any time before the distribution,

(i) all of the shares of each class of the capital stock of the distributing corporation that includes shares that cause that person or partnership to be a specified shareholder of the distributing corporation (in this definition all of those shares in all of those classes are referred to as the "exchanged shares") are, in the circumstances described in paragraph (a) of the definition "permitted exchange", exchanged for consideration that consists solely of shares of a specified class of the capital stock of the distributing corporation (in this definition referred to as the "new shares"), or

(ii) the terms or conditions of all of the exchanged shares are amended (which shares are in this definition referred to after the amendment as the "amended shares") and the amended shares are shares of a specified class of the capital stock of the distributing corporation,

(b) immediately before the exchange or amendment, the exchanged shares are listed on a designated stock exchange,

(c) immediately after the exchange or amendment, the new shares or the amended shares, as the case may be, are listed on a designated stock exchange,

(d) the exchanged shares would be shares of a specified class if they were not convertible into, or exchangeable for, other shares,

(e) the new shares or the amended shares, as the case may be, and the exchanged shares are non-voting in respect of the election of the board of directors of the distributing corporation except in the event of a failure or default under the terms or conditions of the shares, and

(f) no holder of the new shares or the amended shares, as the case may be, is entitled to receive on the redemption, cancellation or acquisition of the new shares or the amended shares, as the case may be, by the distributing corporation or by any person with whom the distributing corporation does not deal at arm's length an amount (other than a premium for early redemption) that is greater than the total of the fair market value of the consideration for which the exchanged shares were issued and the amount of any unpaid dividends on the new shares or on the amended shares, as the case may be;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 25(2), will add the definition "qualified person" to subsec. 55(1), applicable in respect of dividends received after 1999, except that for the period before December 14, 2007, the references to "designated stock exchange" in the definition are to be read as references to "prescribed stock exchange".

Technical Notes (July 2010): The definition "qualified person" is added to subsection 55(1), in conjunction with amendments to clause 55(3.1)(b)(i)(B) and paragraph 55(3.2)(h). As a result of these amendments, a person or partnership may exchange shares of a distributing corporation ("old shares") for new shares of the distributing corporation and, where the conditions set out in the definition are satisfied, the ownership of the old shares will not affect the tax treatment of dividends received in the course of a reorganization to which paragraph 55(3)(b) applies. In general terms, a qualified person is a person or partnership that exchanges all of the old shares that caused that person or partnership to be a specified shareholder of the distributing corporation for consideration consisting solely of shares of a specified class. The definition also provides that the old shares must not be shares of a specified class solely because they were convertible into a class of shares that was not a specified class and that every holder of old shares must participate in the exchange. In addition, a person or partnership will not be a qualified person unless the old shares and the new shares are non-voting in respect of the election of the board of directors (or have voting rights only in the event of failure or default under the terms of the shares).

The addition of the definition "qualified person", applicable in respect of dividends received after 1999, is made concurrently with the addition of new subsection 55(3.4). New subsection 55(3.4) provides that shares of a specified class are not taken into consideration in determining if a person is a specified shareholder for the purpose of subparagraph 55(3.1)(b)(i) and for the purpose of paragraph 55(3.2)(h), as that paragraph applies for the purpose of subparagraph 55(3.1)(b)(iii).

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 15, 2000:

Dear [xxx]:

This is in response to your letter of April 14, 2000 and further to your telephone conversation with Davine Roach of this Division regarding a proposed butterfly reorganization in which [xxx], a Canadian public corporation, proposes to distribute some of its assets to Newco. You are concerned that the current wording of the definition "specified shareholder" in subsection 55(3.3) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") inappropriately applies to cause paragraph 55(3.1)(b) of the Act to apply to the butterfly reorganization transaction rendering it taxable. You ask that the Act be amended to address this concern.

Our understanding of the facts of the proposed transaction is that MBC proposes to transfer on a tax-deferred-basis to Newco, in the course of a butterfly reorganization to which paragraph 55(3)(b) of the Act applies, 80% of the net fair market value of [xxx] total property. Newco will be owned by the shareholders of [xxx] for the purpose of acquiring the distributed assets. As part of the series of transactions that includes the butterfly reorganization, [xxx] will redeem the first preference shares (Series B). These shares are shares of a "specified class" within the meaning of the definition "specified class" in subsection 55(1) of the Act. Mr. X owns more than 10% of the first preference shares. Consequently, Mr. X is a specified shareholder of [xxx] within the meaning of "specified shareholder" in subsection 55(3.3). Mr. X also owns common shares of [xxx] but would not be a specified shareholder of [xxx] if he did not own more than 10% of the first preference shares.

Immediately after the butterfly reorganization, a company wholly-owned by [xxx] ("Acquisition Co.") will acquire for cash all of [xxx] outstanding shares including those held by Mr. X. [xxx] is the controlling shareholder of [xxx]. Mr. X is unrelated to [xxx]. Because Mr. X is a "specified shareholder" of [xxx] and unrelated to Acquisition Co., paragraph 55(3.1)(b) of the Act will apply to the share acquisition by Acquisition Co. to cause the butterfly reorganization to be subject to the application of subsection 55(2) of the Act. You believe that the restrictions in paragraph 55(3.1)(b) should not apply to a person who is a specified shareholder because the person holds shares of a "specified class" as defined in subsection 55(1) of the Act.

We agree that, from a policy perspective, shareholders holding shares of a specified class should not be subject to all specified shareholder restrictions in paragraph 55(3.1)(b) of the Act. Consequently, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended to provide that, for the purposes of subparagraph 55(3.1)(b)(i) and paragraph 55(3.2)(h) of the Act as it applies for the purposes of subparagraph 55(3.1)(b)(iii), a shareholder will not be treated as a specified shareholder only because the shareholder holds shares of a "specified class" as defined by subsection 55(1) of the Act and the shares are otherwise non-voting. It would also be recommended that such an amendment be effective for dividends received after 1999.

If the above recommendations are acted upon, I would anticipate that such amendments would be included in a future income tax technical bill.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division

"safe-income determination time" for a transaction or event or a series of transactions or events means the time that is the earlier of

(a) the time that is immediately after the earliest disposition or increase in interest described in any of subparagraphs (3)(a)(i) to (v) that resulted from the transaction, event or series, and

(b) the time that is immediately before the earliest time that a dividend is paid as part of the transaction, event or series;

History: The definition "safe-income determination time" added to subsec. 55(1) by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 96(2), applicable to dividends received after June 20, 1996.

"specified class" means a class of shares of the capital stock of a distributing corporation where

(a) the paid-up capital in respect of the class immediately before the beginning of the series of transactions or events that includes a distribution by the distributing corporation was not less than the fair market value of the consideration for which the shares of that class then outstanding were issued,

(b) under neither the terms and conditions of the shares nor any agreement in respect of the shares are the shares convertible into or exchangeable for shares other than shares of a specified class or shares of the capital stock of a transferee corporation in relation to the distributing corporation, and

(c) under neither the terms and conditions of the shares nor any agreement in respect of the shares is any holder of the shares entitled to receive on the redemption, cancellation or acquisition of the shares by the corporation or by any person with whom the corporation does not deal at arm's length (excluding any premium for early redemption) an amount greater than the total of the fair market value of the consideration for which the shares were issued and the amount of any unpaid dividends thereon.

Proposed Amendment — 55(1)"specified class"(c), (d)

(c) no holder of the shares is entitled to receive on the redemption, cancellation or acquisition of the shares by the corporation or by any person with whom the corporation does not deal at arm's length an amount (other than a premium for early redemption) that is greater than the total of the fair market value of the consideration for which the shares were issued and the amount of any unpaid dividends on the shares, and

(d) the shares are non-voting in respect of the election of the board of directors except in the event of a failure or default under the terms or conditions of the shares;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 25(1), will amend para. (c) of the definition "specified class" in subsec. 55(1) to read as above, and add para. (d), applicable in respect of shares issued after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): The definition "specified class" is relevant in determining whether an exchange of shares of the capital stock of a distributing corporation for shares of the capital stock of another corporation constitutes a permitted exchange, which, in turn, is relevant for the purpose of paragraph 55(3.1)(b) of the Act. The definition "specified class" is also relevant in determining if a redemption of shares by the distributing corporation prior to a distribution is a permitted redemption.

The rules applicable to shares of a specified class are based on the premise that such shares are equivalent to debt. Thus, to ensure that these shares more closely resemble debt, the definition is amended, for shares issued after December 20, 2002, to include a requirement that they be non-voting with respect to the election of the directors of the corporation (or have voting rights only in the event of failure or default under the terms of the shares).

"specified corporation" in relation to a distribution means a distributing corporation

(a) that is a public corporation or a specified wholly-owned corporation of a public corporation,

(b) shares of the capital stock of which are exchanged for shares of the capital stock of another corporation (referred to in this definition and subsection (3.02) as an "acquiror") in an exchange to which the definition "permitted exchange" in this subsection would apply if that definition were read without reference to paragraph (a) and subparagraph (b)(ii) of that definition,

(c) that does not make a distribution, to a corporation that is not an acquiror, after 1998 and before the day that is three years after the day on which the shares of the capital stock of the distributing corporation are exchanged in a transaction described in paragraph (b), and

(d) no acquiror in relation to which makes a distribution after 1998 and before the day that is three years after the day on which the shares of the capital stock of the distributing corporation are exchanged in a transaction described in paragraph (b), and, for the purposes of paragraphs (c) and (d),

(e) a corporation that is formed by an amalgamation of two or more other corporations is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each of the other corporations, and

(f) where there has been a winding-up of a corporation to which subsection 88(1) applies, the parent is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, the subsidiary;

History: The definition "specified corporation" added to subsec. 55(1) by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 38(1), applicable to transfers that occur after 1998.

"specified wholly-owned corporation" of a public corporation means a corporation all of the outstanding shares of the capital stock of which (other than directors' qualifying shares and shares of a specified class) are held by

(a) the public corporation,

(b) a specified wholly-owned corporation of the public corporation, or

(c) any combination of corporations described in paragraph (a) or (b).

History: The definition "specified wholly-owned corporation" added to subsec. 55(1) by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 38(1), applicable to transfers that occur after 1998.

History [subsec. 55(1)]: New subsec. 55(1) added by 1995, c. 3, subsec. 16(1), applicable to dividends received after February 21, 1994 other than dividends received before 1995 in the course of a reorganization that was required on February 22, 1994 to be carried out pursuant to a written agreement entered into before February 22, 1994.

(2) Deemed proceeds or capital gain — Where a corporation resident in Canada has received a taxable dividend in respect of which it is entitled to a deduction under subsection 112(1) or (2) or 138(6) as part of a transaction or event or a series of transactions or events, one of the purposes of which (or, in the case of a dividend under subsection 84(3), one of the results of which) was to effect a significant reduction in the portion of the capital gain that, but for the dividend, would have been realized on a disposition at fair market value of any share of capital stock immediately before the dividend and that could reasonably be considered to be attributable to anything other than income earned or realized by any corporation after 1971 and before the safe-income determination time for the transaction, event or series, notwithstanding any other section of this Act, the amount of the dividend (other than the portion of it, if any, subject to tax under Part IV that is not refunded as a consequence of the payment of a dividend to a corporation where the payment is part of the series)

(a) shall be deemed not to be a dividend received by the corporation;

(b) where a corporation has disposed of the share, shall be deemed to be proceeds of disposition of the share except to the extent that it is otherwise included in computing such proceeds; and

(c) where a corporation has not disposed of the share, shall be deemed to be a gain of the corporation for the year in which the dividend was received from the disposition of a capital property.

> (2) Where a corporation resident in Canada has after April 21, 1980 received a taxable dividend in respect of which it is entitled to a deduction under subsection 112(1) or 138(6) as part of a transaction or event or a series of transactions or events (other than as part of a series of transactions or events that commenced before April 22, 1980), one of the purposes of which (or, in the case of a dividend under subsection 84(3), one of the results of which) was to effect a significant reduction in the portion of the capital gain that, but for the dividend, would have been realized on a disposition at fair market value of any share of capital stock immediately before the dividend and that could reasonably be considered to be attributable to anything other than income earned or realized by any corporation after 1971 and before the transaction or event or the commencement of the series of transactions or events referred to in paragraph (3)(a), notwithstanding any other section of this Act, the amount of the dividend (other than the portion thereof, if any, subject to tax under Part IV that is not refunded as a consequence of the payment of a dividend to a corporation where the payment is part of the series of transactions or events)

Proposed Amendment — 55(3)(a)(ii)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Oct. 16, 2007:

[xxx], Ernst & Young LLP, Montreal

Dear [xxx]:

Thank you for your correspondence dated December 4, 2006 and June 1, 2007, addressed to Brian Ernewein, regarding the application of subsection 55(2) and paragraph 55(3)(a) of the Income Tax Act (Act). In your correspondence, you asked us to consider an amendment to the Act that would ensure that subsection 55(2) would not apply to a dividend received as part of a series of transactions or events that includes an increase in the interest in a corporation described in subparagraph 55(3)(a)(ii) in the circumstances described below.

Parentco is a widely-held publicly-traded corporation. It owns indirectly, 100% of the shares of Subco 1, a taxable Canadian corporation. A subsidiary corporation controlled by Parentco ("Aquireco") acquires all the issued and outstanding shares of another corporation ("Targetco") such that Targetco becomes a wholly-owned subsidiary of Aquireco. Targetco controls another corporation (Subco 2). In consideration for the shares of Targetco, the Targetco shareholders receive money and shares of Parentco. Aquireco partly finances the cash portion of the takeover by issuing shares of its capital stock ("financing shares") solely for money to another corporation ("Finco") that is unrelated to Aquireco. Before the post-takeover internal reorganization (described below) is undertaken, the financing shares are redeemed, with the result that Finco no longer has an interest in Acquireco.

Following the acquisition of Targetco and after the cancellation of the financing shares, Parentco undertakes an internal reorganization that results in taxable dividends being received by Subco 1 and Subco 2. At no time before the end of the series of transaction or events that includes the receipt of the dividend will Subco 1 and Subco 2 cease to be controlled by Parentco.

Your concern is that subsection 55(2) of the Act will apply to the dividends that will be received in the course of the internal reorganization because the increase in interest in Acquireco by Finco will be described in subparagraph 55(3)(a)(ii) of the Act. You submit that the application of subsection 55(2) of the Act to the dividends to be received on the internal reorganization would not be appropriate since the increase in interest in Acquireco by Fineco occurs as part of a financing transaction that is completed before the internal reorganization. Moreover, the transactions do not result in a tax-deferred disposition of the assets of the dividend payer or dividend recipient outside the Parentco group.

We agree that subsection 55(2) of the Act should not apply to the dividends received in the circumstances described above solely as a result of the acquisition of the financing shares by Finco. Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended, applicable to dividends received after 2005, to ensure this result.

While I cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendation, I hope that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Gerard Lalonde
Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(iii) a disposition, to a person or partnership who was an unrelated person immediately before the particular time, of

(A) shares of the capital stock of the corporation that paid the dividend (referred to in this paragraph and subsection (3.01) as the "dividend payer"), or

(B) property more than 10% of the fair market value of which was, at any time during the course of the series, derived from shares of the capital stock of the dividend payer,

Proposed Amendment — 55(3)(a)(iii)(B)

(B) property (other than shares of the capital stock of the dividend recipient) more than 10% of the fair market value of which was, at any time during the course of the series, derived from shares of the capital stock of the dividend payer,

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 25(3), will amend cl. 55(3)(a)(iii)(B) to read as above, applicable to dividends received after February 21, 1994.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Paragraph 55(3)(a) provides an exemption from the application of subsection 55(2) for dividends received in the course of certain related-party transactions. More specifically, paragraph 55(3)(a) exempts a dividend received by a corporation if, as part of a transaction or event or a series of transactions or events that includes the receipt of the dividend, there was not, at any particular time, a disposition of property or a significant increase in the total direct interest in a corporation in the circumstances described in subparagraphs 55(3)(a)(i) to (v).

Clause 55(3)(a)(iii)(B) describes a disposition, to a person or partnership that was unrelated to the dividend recipient, of property more than 10% of the fair market value of which was derived from shares of the capital stock of the dividend payer. Clause 55(3)(a)(iii)(B) is amended, for dividends received after February 21, 1994, to exclude a disposition of property that is a share of the capital stock of the dividend recipient. This amendment ensures that subsection 55(2) does not apply to the dividend received in the circumstances described in the following example involving the disposition of the shares of the dividend recipient:

A corporation (BuyerCo) owns all the shares of another corporation (SubCo). BuyerCo acquires all the shares of a third corporation (Target) in an arm's length transaction for fair market value. Target owns all the shares of two corporations — T1Subco and T2Subco. Target transfers, on a tax-deferred basis under section 85, all the shares of T2SubCo to SubCo in consideration for High/Low Shares of SubCo. SubCo subsequently redeems the High/Low Shares with the result that Target receives a deemed dividend.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 23, 1998:

Dear [xxx]:

This is in response to your letter of September 9, 1998 regarding the application of subparagraph 55(3)(a)(iii) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") to the circumstances described in your letter.

We agree that, from a tax policy perspective, subsection 55(2) of the Act should not apply to Target in respect of the dividend it receives on the redemption of the SubCo shares as part of the transactions described in your letter and example 5 of the explanatory notes for subclause 96(4) of Bill C-28. The scope of subparagraph 55(3)(a)(iii) of the Act is too broad and should not capture the dividend paid on the Subco shares merely because the SubCo shares acquired by Target in exchange for the T2SubCo shares have a value greater than 10% of the value of the Target's shares.

We will recommend to the Minister of Finance that an amendment be made to subparagraph 55(3)(a)(iii) of the Act to ensure that it does not apply to the acquisition of the shares of Target by Buyerco in the circumstances described in your letter. We will recommend that an amendment be effective for dividends received by a corporation after February 21, 1994. If the recommendation is acted upon, I would anticipate that such an amendment would be included in the next technical bill.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein
Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(B) property more than 10% of the fair market value of which was, at any time during the course of the series, derived from shares of the capital stock of the dividend recipient, and

(v) a significant increase in the total of all direct interests in the dividend payer of one or more persons or partnerships who were unrelated persons immediately before the particular time; or

Letter from Dept. of Finance, July 3, 2001: See under 256(7)(a)(i)(E).

Proposed Amendment — 55(3)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Sept. 6, 2006:

Mr. Firoz Ahmed, Osler Hoskin & Harcourt LLP, Toronto, ON

Dear Mr. Ahmed:

Thank you for your letter dated May 3, 2006 regarding the application of subsection 55(2) and paragraph 55(3)(a) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act"). In your letter, you asked us to consider an amendment to the Act that would ensure that subsection 55(2) would not apply to the dividends received as part of a series of transactions or events described below.

The series of transactions or events in issue ("relevant series") includes the disposition of the shares of a publicly-traded corporation ("Targetco") to another publicly-traded corporation ("Acquireco") such that Targetco will become a wholly-owned subsidiary of Acquireco. Following the disposition of the Targetco shares to Acquireco, an indirect wholly-owned subsidiary of Targetco ("T Sub") will undertake an internal reorganization that will result in dividends being received by T Sub and another indirect wholly-owned subsidiary of Targetco ("Newco"). More specifically, the transactions or events that will occur as part of the relevant series are as follows:

(a) The Targetco shareholders will dispose of their shares of Targetco to Acquireco in consideration for shares of Acquireco. The disposition of the Targetco shares by the Targetco shareholders will occur for proceeds of disposition that are less than fair market value or will be deemed by paragraph 55(3.01)(e) of the Act to occur at less than fair market value.

(b) The parent of T Sub will transfer some of its shares of T Sub to Newco in consideration for shares of Newco. The fair market value of the transferred T Sub shares will be equal to the fair market value of the transferred assets referred to in paragraph (c).

(c) T Sub will transfer some of its assets to Newco in exchange for preferred shares of Newco with a fair market value and redemption value equal to the transferred assets. T Sub and Newco will jointly elect under subsection 85(1) to effect the transfer on a tax-deferred basis.

(d) Newco will redeem the Newco preferred shares for a promissory note and T Sub will purchase for cancellation the shares of its capital stock owned by Newco for a promissory note. The promissory notes will be offset and cancelled. The redemption of the Newco preferred shares and the cancellation of the T Sub shares would result in deemed dividends being received by T Sub and Newco. Newco and T Sub will each be a taxable Canadian corporation and, as a result, the deemed dividends will be deductible to T Sub and Newco under subsection 112(1) of the Act.

(e) The parent of T Sub will transfer the shares of T Sub to an indirect wholly-owned subsidiary of Acquireco ("A Sub") for fair market value. T Sub will be wound up into A Sub under subsection 88(1). Pursuant to paragraph 55(3.01)(c) of the Act, A Sub will be deemed, for the purpose of paragraph 55(3)(a), to be the same corporation and a continuation of T Sub.

You advised us that, at no time before the end of the relevant series, will more than 10% of the fair market value of the Acquireco shares or the Targetco shares be derived from the shares of either Newco, T Sub or A Sub. In addition, T Sub and Newco will not cease to be related as part of the relevant series.

Your concern is that subsection 55(2) of the Act will apply to the dividends that will be received by T Sub and Newco in the course of the internal reorganization because

(a) the disposition of the Targetco shares to Acquireco is described in subparagraph 55(3)(a)(i); and

(b) the increase in interest in Acquireco by the Targetco shareholders is described in subparagraph 55(3)(a)(ii).

You submit that the application of subsection 55(2) of the Act to the dividends to be received by T Sub and Newco in the course of the internal reorganization would not be appropriate for a number of reasons. First, the internal reorganization occurs entirely within a related group of corporations and none of the corporations will, as part of the relevant series, cease to be related. Secondly, you submit that the application of subsection 55(2) to dividends received in the course of an internal reorganization following a takeover or merger could inhibit related Canadian corporations from organizing their business in an effective manner. Lastly, you submit that the relevant series will not result in the disposition of shares of a corporation in substitution for the sale of corporate assets since all the corporate assets will continue to be owned by indirect wholly-owned subsidiaries of Acquireco.

We agree that subsection 55(2) of the Act should not apply to the dividends received by T Sub and Newco in the specific circumstances described above solely as a result of the disposition of the Targetco shares to Acquireco or as a result of the increase in interest in Acquireco by the Targetco shareholders. Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended, applicable to dividends received after 2005, to ensure this result.

While I cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendation, I hope that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein

(15) Where a corporation elects under [paragraph (b) of the application to this amendment (above) — ed.] in respect of dividends,

(a) subsection 55(4) of the Act shall, in respect of those dividends, be read as follows:

(4) Where it can reasonably be considered that the principal purpose of one or more transactions or events was to cause 2 or more persons to be related or to not deal with each other at arm's length, or to cause one corporation to control another corporation, so as to make subsection (2) inapplicable, for the purposes of this section, those persons are deemed not to be related or are deemed to deal with each other at arm's length, or the corporation is deemed not to control the other corporation, as the case may be.

(b) paragraph 55(5)(e) of the Act shall, in respect of those dividends, be read as follows:

(e) in determining whether 2 or more persons deal with each other at arm's length,

(i) a person is deemed to deal with another person at arm's length and not to be related to the other person if the person is the brother or sister of the other person, and

(ii) persons who are otherwise related to each other solely because of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b) are deemed not to be related to each other; and

Subparas. 55(3)(a)(i) and (ii) amended by 1995, c. 3, subsec. 16(2), applicable to dividends received after February 21, 1994, other than dividends received as part of a transaction or event or a series of transactions or events that was required on February 22, 1994 to be carried out pursuant to a written agreement entered into before February 22, 1994. Subparas. (i) and (ii) formerly read:

(i) a disposition of any property to a person with whom that corporation was dealing at arm's length, or

(ii) a significant increase in the interest in any corporation of any person with whom the corporation that received the dividend was dealing at arm's length; or

Para. 55(3)(b) amended by 1995, c. 3, subsec. 16(3), applicable to dividends received after February 21, 1994 other than dividends received before 1995 in the course of a reorganization that was required on February 22, 1994 to be carried out pursuant to a written agreement entered into before February 22, 1994. Para. (b) formerly read:

(b) if the dividend was received in the course of a reorganization in which property of a particular corporation was transferred, directly or indirectly, to one or more corporations (each of which is in this paragraph referred to as a "transferee") and, in respect of each type of property so transferred, the fair market value of the property so received by each transferee was equal to or approximated the proportion of the fair market value of all property of that type owned by the particular corporation immediately before the transfer that

(i) the total of the fair market value immediately before the transfer of all shares of the capital stock of the particular corporation owned by the transferee at that time

(ii) the fair market value immediately before the transfer of all the issued shares of the capital stock of the particular corporation at that time, except that this paragraph does not apply in respect of a transfer where, in contemplation of and before the transfer, property has become property of the particular corporation, a corporation controlled by the particular corporation or a predecessor of any such corporation otherwise than as a result of

(iii) an amalgamation of corporations each of which was related to the particular corporation,

(iv) the winding-up of a corporation that was related to the particular corporation,

(v) a transaction to which subsection (2) would, but for this subsection, apply,

(vi) a disposition of property by the particular corporation or a corporation controlled by it to another corporation controlled by the particular corporation,

(vii) a disposition of property by the particular corporation or a predecessor thereof for consideration that consists only of money or indebtedness that is not convertible into other property, or of any combination thereof, or

(viii) a prescribed transaction.

(3.01) Interpretation for para. (3)(a) — For the purposes of paragraph (3)(a),

(a) an unrelated person means a person (other than the dividend recipient) to whom the dividend recipient is not related or a partnership any member of which (other than the dividend recipient) is not related to the dividend recipient;

(b) a corporation that is formed by an amalgamation of 2 or more other corporations is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each of the other corporations;

(c) where there has been a winding-up of a corporation to which subsection 88(1) applies, the parent is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, the subsidiary;

(d) proceeds of disposition shall be determined without reference to "paragraph 55(2)(a) or" in paragraph (j) of the definition "proceeds of disposition" in section 54; and

(d) proceeds of disposition are to be determined without reference to

(i) the expression "paragraph 55(2)(a) or" in paragraph (j) of the definition "proceeds of disposition" in section 54, and

(ii) section 93; and

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 25(4), will amend para. 55(3.01)(d) to read as above, applicable to dividends received after February 21, 1994.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Paragraphs 55(3.01)(a) to (e) contain various interpretive rules for the purpose of paragraph 55(3)(a). Paragraph 55(3.01)(d) provides that proceeds of disposition are to be determined without reference to the application of paragraph 55(2)(a). This rule is intended to ensure that proceeds of disposition do not include a dividend or deemed dividend that is subject to subsection 55(2).

Section 93 permits a corporation resident in Canada to elect to treat the proceeds of disposition of a share of a foreign affiliate as a dividend in certain circumstances. Where such an election is made, the proceeds of disposition of the share are reduced accordingly. The reduction in the proceeds of disposition under section 93 is not intended to affect the application of paragraph 55(3)(a). Thus, paragraph 55(3.01)(d) is amended, for dividends received after February 21, 1994, to ensure that, for the purpose of paragraph 55(3)(a), proceeds of disposition are determined without reference to section 93.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Feb. 19, 1999:

Dear [xxx]:

This is in reply to your letter of December 1, 1998 to Len Farber regarding an anomaly that results from the interaction of section 55 and 93 of the Income Tax Act (the "Act"). You ask that a technical amendment be made to the Act to remove this anomaly.

Based on our understanding of the facts set out in your letter, Parentco/Canco undertakes a series of transactions to utilize losses within its related group. As part of this series of transactions, Forco sells its shares of Forco2 to an arm's length third party for proceeds of disposition equal to the fair market value of the shares. On the disposition, section 93 of the Act applies to treat proceeds realized by Forco as a dividend with the result that, for the purposes of the Act, Forco is considered not to have received fair market value proceeds. As part of the series, Canco transfers on a tax-deferred basis under subsection 85(1) of the Act its shares of Forco to Sisterco in exchange for preferred shares of Sisterco. Sisterco redeems its preferred shares held by Canco and Canco receives a dividend (the "Sisterco Dividend"). The Sisterco Dividend is subject to subsection 55(2) of the Act only because section 93 applies to treat Forco's proceeds of disposition to be less than the fair market value of the Forco2 shares.

We agree that, in the above circumstances, the Sisterco Dividend should be exempt from the application of subsection 55(2) because of paragraph 55(3)(a) of the Act. Section 93 should not, in and by itself, cause an intercorporate dividend received by a corporation in the course of certain related-corporate transactions to be subject to subsection 55(2). Inter-corporate dividends that would, but for the application of section 93 which reduces the proceeds of disposition of a property to less than the fair market value of the property, have been exempt from the application of subsection 55(2) because of paragraph 55(3)(a) should remain exempt from the application of subsection 55(2).

We are prepared therefore to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended to ensure the appropriate results in the circumstances described above. We will recommend that the amendment be effective for dividends received by a corporation after February 21, 1994. If the recommendation is acted upon, I would anticipate that such an amendment would be included in the next technical bill.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein
Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(e) notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, where a non-resident person disposes of a property in a taxation year and the gain or loss from the disposition is not included in computing the person's taxable income earned in Canada for the year, the person is deemed to have disposed of the property for proceeds of disposition that are less than its fair market value unless, under the income tax laws of the country in which the person is resident, the gain or loss is computed as if the property were disposed of for proceeds of disposition that are not less than its fair market value and the gain or loss so computed is recognized for the purposes of those laws.

Proposed Amendment — 55(3.01)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, April 21, 2005:

Mr. Marc Ton-That, KPMG LLP, Toronto, ON

Dear Mr. Ton-That:

We are writing in response to your letter dated February 22, 2005, and further to your telephone discussions with Daryl Boychuk of this Division in which you expressed concern regarding the application of paragraphs 55(3.01)(b) and (c) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") in certain situations involving the winding-up of a wholly-owned subsidiary into its parent corporation or the amalgamation of a wholly-owned subsidiary with its parent corporation.

Subsection 55(3.01) of the Act applies for the purpose of paragraph 55(3)(a), which, in turn, provides that subsection 55(2) of the Act does not apply to a dividend received by a corporation if, as part of a transaction or event or series of transactions or events in which the dividend was received, there was not, at any particular time, a disposition of property, or a significant increase in the direct interest in a corporation, in circumstances described in subparagraphs 55(3)(a)(i) to (v).

Subsection 55(3.01) of the Act sets out certain rules that apply for the purpose of paragraph 55(3)(a). In particular, paragraph 55(3.01)(c) provides that where there has been a winding-up of a subsidiary corporation into its parent to which subsection 88(1) applies, the parent is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, the subsidiary. Similarly, if the subsidiary corporation is amalgamated with the parent corporation, paragraph 55(3.01)(b) deems the new corporation to be the same corporation and a continuation of each of the predecessor corporations.

Your concern is that a winding-up of a wholly-owned subsidiary into its parent corporation or the amalgamation of a wholly-owned subsidiary with its parent corporation in the situations described below may result in a significant increase in the direct interest in the subsidiary corporation by a shareholder of the parent corporation as described in subparagraphs 55(3)(a)(ii) and (v).

We have assumed that the transactions or events described in each situation below are part of the same series of transactions or events.

Situation #1

A public corporation ("Pubco") owns all the issued and outstanding shares of a taxable Canadian corporation ("Subco"). None of the shareholders of Pubco are related to Pubco. Subco owns property1 and property2 and Pubco wishes to acquire property1. However, corporate and commercial restrictions preclude Pubco from issuing shares to Subco and, therefore, a direct tax-deferred acquisition of property1 by Pubco is not possible. Accordingly, Pubco will incorporate a wholly-owned subsidiary ("Newco") and cause Subco to transfer property1 to Newco on a tax-deferred basis in exchange for redeemable preferred shares of Newco ("Newco shares"). The Newco shares will then be redeemed giving rise to a deemed dividend to Subco. Following the redemption of the Newco shares, Newco will be wound up into or amalgamated with Pubco.

Situation #2

Two taxable Canadian corporations ("Aco" and "Bco") are both controlled by the same person ("Mr. X"). Mr. X owns 100% of the shares of the capital stock of Aco and 70% of the shares of each class of Bco. Persons that are not related to Mr. X own the remaining shares of Bco. In addition, Aco owns 100% of the shares of another taxable Canadian corporation ("Cco"). Aco intends to transfer the properties owned by Cco to Bco. To accomplish this, Aco will transfer the shares of Cco to Bco in exchange for redeemable preferred shares of Bco ("Bco shares"). The transfer will be done on a tax-deferred basis using subsection 85(1) of the Act. Aco will then cause Bco to redeem the preferred shares owned by Aco giving rise to a deemed dividend to Aco. Cco will then be wound up into or amalgamated with Bco.

A public corporation ("Pubco") owns all the issued and outstanding shares of a taxable Canadian corporation ("Subco"). None of the shareholders of Pubco are related to Pubco. Subco pays a dividend to Pubco and then is wound up into Pubco or amalgamated with Pubco.

In each of the situations described above, the amalgamation or winding-up will result in an increase in the total direct interests in the subsidiary corporation by a person unrelated to the dividend recipient because the new corporation formed on the amalgamation (or the parent corporation in the case of a winding-up) is deemed by paragraph 55(3.01)(b) (or paragraph 55(3.01)(c) in the case of a winding-up) to be a continuation of the subsidiary corporation. Accordingly, subsection 55(2) of the Act will apply to the dividends that are received or deemed to be received by the dividend recipient. You have asked us to recommend an amendment to the Act that would ensure that a short-form vertical amalgamation of a wholly-owned subsidiary with its parent corporation or a winding-up of a wholly-owned subsidiary into its parent corporation would not, in the situations described above, result in the application of subsection 55(2) to a dividend received as part of a series of transactions or events that included the amalgamation or winding-up.

We agree that, in the situations described above, the amalgamation of a wholly-owned subsidiary with its parent corporation or the winding-up of a wholly-owned subsidiary corporation into its parent corporation, should not result in the increase in the total direct interests in the subsidiary corporation described in subparagraphs 55(3)(a)(ii) or (v) of the Act. Accordingly, we will recommend to the Minister that the Act be amended to ensure that, in the situations described above, the winding-up or amalgamation of the subsidiary corporation will not result in an increase in the interest in the subsidiary corporation described in subparagraphs 55(3)(a)(ii) and (v). We will also recommend that the amendment be effective for dividends received after 2004. While we cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendation, we trust that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber
General Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(i) an amalgamation of corporations each of which was related to the distributing corporation,

(ii) an amalgamation of a predecessor corporation of the distributing corporation and one or more corporations controlled by that predecessor corporation,

(iii) a reorganization in which a dividend was received to which subsection (2) would, but for paragraph (3)(b), apply, or

(iv) a disposition of property by

(A) the distributing corporation, a corporation controlled by it or a predecessor corporation of any such corporation to a corporation controlled by the distributing corporation or a predecessor corporation of the distributing corporation,

Proposed Amendment — 55(3.1)(a)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Nov. 26, 2004:

Dear [xxx]:

We are writing in response to your correspondence dated September 28, 2004 regarding paragraph 55(3.1)(a) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act"). More specifically, you have asked us to consider an amendment to paragraph 55(3.1)(a) to ensure that the restrictions on the acquisition of property in contemplation of a butterfly reorganization do not apply if the distributing corporation is a "specified corporation" as defined in subsection 55(1) of the Act.

Paragraph 55(3.1)(a) of the Act provides that the exemption from subsection 55(2) for dividends received in the course of a butterfly reorganization does not generally apply if property becomes property of the distributing corporation in contemplation of the distribution of property by the corporation.

The rules governing butterfly reorganizations mandate that each type of property owned by the distributing corporation (other than a distributing corporation that is a specified corporation) be distributed pro rata based on each transferee corporation's proportionate interest in the distributing corporation. In the case of a specified corporation, subsection 55(3.02) of the Act permits the distributing corporation to undertake a butterfly reorganization by making a proportionate distribution of all of its property as opposed to each type of property. Therefore, while an acquisition of property may alter the types of property owned by the distributing corporation, you submit that since a distribution by a specified corporation is not subject to the types of property requirement, the restrictions in paragraph 55(3.1)(a) should not apply to a specified corporation.

We agree that paragraph 55(3.1)(a) of the Act should not apply to a dividend if a specified corporation acquires the property referred to in that paragraph in contemplation of a distribution by that corporation. Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended, applicable to dividends received after November 2004, to exclude the restrictions in paragraph 55(3.1)(a) from applying if the distribution referred to in that paragraph is a distribution by a specified corporation.

While I cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendation, I hope that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Emewein
Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(b) the dividend was received as part of a series of transactions or events in which

(i) a person or partnership (referred to in this subparagraph as the "vendor") disposed of property and

(A) the property is

(I) a share of the capital stock of a distributing corporation that made a distribution as part of the series or of a transferee corporation in relation to the distributing corporation, or

(II) property 10% or more of the fair market value of which was, at any time during the course of the series, derived from one or more shares described in subclause (I),

(B) the vendor was, at any time during the course of the series, a specified shareholder of the distributing corporation or of the transferee corporation, and

Proposed Amendment — 55(3.1)(b)(i)(B)

(B) the vendor (other than a qualified person in relation to the distribution) was, at any time during the course of the series, a specified shareholder of the distributing corporation or of the transferee corporation, and

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 25(5), will amend cl. 55(3.1)(b)(i)(B) to read as above, applicable in respect of dividends received after 1999.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Paragraph 55(3.1)(b) provides that a dividend received in the course of a reorganization to which paragraph 55(3)(b) applies is not excluded from the application of subsection 55(2) if one of the transactions or events described in paragraph 55(3.1)(b) occurs as part of the series of transactions or events that includes the receipt of the dividend. Subparagraph 55(3.1)(b)(i) deals with a disposition of property in circumstances described in clauses 55(3.1)(b)(i)(A) to (C). Clause 55(3.1)(b)(i)(A) describes the type of property (i.e., shares of the distributing or transferee corporation or property whose value is derived from such shares), clause 55(3.1)(b)(i)(B) describes the type of vendor (i.e., a specified shareholder of the distributing or transferee corporation) and clause 55(3.1)(b)(i)(C) describes the type of acquirer (i.e., a person unrelated to the vendor or a partnership).

Clause 55(3.1)(b)(i)(B) is amended, for dividends received after 1999, to exclude a vendor that is a qualified person in relation to the distribution. "Qualified person" is a new expression defined in subsection 55(1) of the Act. For additional information, see the commentary to "qualified person" under subsection 55(1).

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 15, 2000: See under 55(1)"qualified person".

(C) the property or any other property (other than property received by the transferee corporation on the distribution) acquired by any person or partnership in substitution therefor was acquired (otherwise than on a permitted acquisition, permitted exchange or permitted redemption in relation to the distribution) by a person (other than the vendor) who was not related to the vendor or, as part of the series, ceased to be related to the vendor or by a partnership,

(ii) control of a distributing corporation that made a distribution as part of the series or of a transferee corporation in relation to the distributing corporation was acquired (otherwise than as a result of a permitted acquisition, permitted exchange or permitted redemption in relation to the distribution) by any person or group of persons, or

(iii) in contemplation of a distribution by a distributing corporation, a share of the capital stock of the distributing corporation was acquired (otherwise than on a permitted acquisition or permitted exchange in relation to the distribution or on an amalgamation of 2 or more predecessor corporations of the distributing corporation) by

(A) a transferee corporation in relation to the distributing corporation or by a person or partnership with whom the transferee corporation did not deal at arm's length from a person to whom the acquiror was not related or from a partnership,

(B) a person or any member of a group of persons who acquired control of the distributing corporation as part of the series,

(C) a particular partnership any interest in which is held, directly or indirectly through one or more partnerships, by a person referred to in clause (B), or

(D) a person or partnership with whom a person referred to in clause (B) or a particular partnership referred to in clause (C) did not deal at arm's length,

(c) the dividend was received by a transferee corporation from a distributing corporation that, immediately after the reorganization in the course of which a distribution was made and the dividend was received, was not related to the transferee corporation and the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at the time of acquisition, of a property that

(i) was acquired, as part of the series of transactions or events that includes the receipt of the dividend, by a person (other than the transferee corporation) who was not related to the transferee corporation or, as part of the series, ceased to be related to the transferee corporation or by a partnership, otherwise than

(A) as a result of a disposition in the ordinary course of business,

(B) on a permitted acquisition in relation to a distribution, or

(C) as a result of an amalgamation of 2 or more corporations that were related to each other immediately before the amalgamation, and

(ii) is a property (other than money, indebtedness that is not convertible into other property, a share of the capital stock of the transferee corporation and property more than 10% of the fair market value of which is attributable to one or more such shares)

(A) that was received by the transferee corporation on the distribution,

(B) more than 10% of the fair market value of which was, at any time after the distribution and before the end of the series, attributable to property (other than money and indebtedness that is not convertible into other property) described in clause (A) or (C), or

(C) to which, at any time during the course of the series, the fair market value of property described in clause (A) was wholly or partly attributable

is greater than 10% of the fair market value, at the time of the distribution, of all the property (other than money and indebtedness that is not convertible into other property) received by the transferee corporation on the distribution, or

(d) the dividend was received by a distributing corporation that, immediately after the reorganization in the course of which a distribution was made and the dividend was received, was not related to the transferee corporation that paid the dividend and the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at the time of acquisition, of a property that

(i) was acquired, as part of the series of transactions or events that includes the receipt of the dividend, by a person (other than the distributing corporation) who was not related to the distributing corporation or, as part of the series, ceased to be related to the distributing corporation or by a partnership, otherwise than

(A) as a result of a disposition in the ordinary course of business,

(B) on a permitted acquisition in relation to a distribution, or

(C) as a result of an amalgamation of 2 or more corporations that were related to each other immediately before the amalgamation, and

(ii) is a property (other than money, indebtedness that is not convertible into other property, a share of the capital stock of the distributing corporation and property more than 10% of the fair market value of which is attributable to one or more such shares)

(A) that was owned by the distributing corporation immediately before the distribution and not disposed of by it on the distribution,

(B) more than 10% of the fair market value of which was, at any time after the distribution and before the end of the series, attributable to property (other than money and indebtedness that is not convertible into other property) described in clause (A) or (C), or

(C) to which, at any time during the course of the series, the fair market value of property described in clause (A) was wholly or partly attributable

is greater than 10% of the fair market value at the time of the distribution, of all the property (other than money and indebtedness that is not convertible into other property) owned immediately before that time by the distributing corporation and not disposed of by it on the distribution.

Proposed Amendment — 55(3.1)(c), (d)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 8, 2005:

Dear [xxx]:

We are writing in response to your correspondence of June 2, 2005 and further to your discussions with Daryl Boychuk of this Division regarding the application of paragraphs 55(3.1)(c) and (d) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") in the circumstances described below.

You advised us that a taxable Canadian corporation ("Holdco") has two shareholders, both of which are taxable Canadian corporations ("Xco" and "Yco"). Xco and Yco own ⅔ and ⅓, respectively, of the common shares of Holdco. The principal asset owned by Holdco is shares of a public corporation ("Pubco").

Holdco is proposing to implement a reorganization described in paragraph 55(3)(b) of the Act (i.e., a "butterfly reorganization"). Prior to the distribution that will occur in the course of the butterfly reorganization, Holdco intends to dispose of ⅓ of its Pubco shares either directly through the stock exchange or indirectly by disposing of the shares of a wholly-owned subsidiary corporation to which Holdco will transfer the Pubco shares. In each case, the shares will be disposed of at fair market value, for consideration that consists only of money.

Your concern is that property described in clause 55(3.1)(c)(ii)(B) and 55(3.1)(d)(ii)(B) will be acquired as a result of the proposed disposition of the shares of Pubco. You submit that the result is anomalous and frustrates the legislative scheme in paragraphs 55(3.1)(c) and (d), particularly in view of the exclusion in clause 55(3.1)(a)(iv)(C) for property disposed of for proceeds that consists only of money or indebtedness that is not convertible into other property. In addition, you suggest that paragraphs 55(3.1)(c) and (d) should not apply to the pre-butterfly dispositions of property in the circumstances described above.

Based on our understanding of the facts described above and the circumstances surrounding the proposed transactions, we agree that paragraphs 55(3.1)(c) and (d) of the Act should not apply to the direct or indirect disposition by Holdco of the shares of Pubco if the disposition occurs before the distribution that will be made in the course of the proposed butterfly reorganization. Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that paragraph 55(3.1)(c) and (d) of the Act be amended to ensure this result in respect of the proposed transactions described above, which we understand will occur in June of 2005. While we cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendations, we hope that this statement of our position is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber, General Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(B) a person or any member of a group of persons who acquired control of the distributing corporation as part of the series,

(C) a particular partnership any interest in which is held, directly or indirectly through one or more partnerships, by a person referred to in clause (B), or

Subsec. 55(3.1) formerly read:

(3.1) Idem — Notwithstanding subsection (3), a dividend to which subsection (2) would, but for paragraph (3)(b), otherwise apply is not excluded from the application of subsection (2) where the dividend is received as part of a series of transactions or events in which

(a) a person or partnership (in this subsection referred to as the "foreign vendor") who, or any member of which, is resident in a country other than Canada disposes of property that is

(i) a share of the capital stock of the particular corporation referred to in paragraph (3)(b) or of a transferee (within the meaning assigned by that paragraph) in relation to the particular corporation that is taxable Canadian property of the foreign vendor or, where the foreign vendor is a partnership, would be taxable Canadian property of the foreign vendor if the foreign vendor were non-resident, or

(ii) property the fair market value of which, at any time during the course of the series of transactions or events, is derived principally from one or more shares which, if owned by the foreign vendor, would be shares described in subparagraph (i); and

Subsec. 55(3.1) added by 1994, c. 21, s. 24, applicable to dividends received after May 4, 1993, other than a dividend received as part of a series of transactions or events in which a foreign vendor was obliged on May 4, 1993 to dispose of property described in para. 55(3.1)(a), under a written agreement entered into before May 5, 1993.

(3.2) Interpretation of para. (3.1)(b) — For the purpose of paragraph (3.1)(b),

(a) in determining whether the vendor referred to in subparagraph (3.1)(b)(i) is at any time a specified shareholder of a transferee corporation or of a distributing corporation, the references in the definition "specified shareholder" in subsection 248(1) to "taxpayer" shall be read as "person or partnership";

(b) a corporation that is formed by the amalgamation of 2 or more corporations (each of which is referred to in this paragraph as a "predecessor corporation") shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each of the predecessor corporations;

(c) subject to paragraph (d), each particular person who acquired a share of the capital stock of a distributing corporation in contemplation of a distribution by the distributing corporation shall be deemed, in respect of that acquisition, not to be related to the person from whom the particular person acquired the share unless

(i) the particular person acquired all the shares of the capital stock of the distributing corporation that were owned, at any time during the course of the series of transactions or events that included the distribution and before the acquisition, by the other person, or

(ii) immediately after the reorganization in the course of which the distribution was made, the particular person was related to the distributing corporation;

(d) where a share is acquired by an individual from a personal trust in satisfaction of all or a part of the individual's capital interest in the trust, the individual shall be deemed, in respect of that acquisition, to be related to the trust;

(e) subject to paragraph (f), where at any time a share of the capital stock of a corporation is redeemed or cancelled (otherwise than on an amalgamation where the only consideration received or receivable for the share by the shareholder on the amalgamation is a share of the capital stock of the corporation formed by the amalgamation), the corporation shall be deemed to have acquired the share at that time;

(f) where a share of the capital stock of a corporation is redeemed, acquired or cancelled by the corporation pursuant to the exercise of a statutory right of dissent by the holder of the share, the corporation shall be deemed not to have acquired the share;

(g) control of a corporation shall be deemed not to have been acquired by a person or group of persons where it is so acquired solely because of

(i) the incorporation of the corporation, or

(ii) the acquisition by an individual of one or more shares for the sole purpose of qualifying as a director of the corporation; and

(h) each corporation that is a shareholder and specified shareholder of a distributing corporation at any time during the course of a series of transactions or events, a part of which includes a distribution made by the distributing corporation, is deemed to be a transferee corporation in relation to the distributing corporation.

Proposed Amendment — 55(2.3)(h)

(h) in relation to a distribution each corporation (other than a qualified person in relation to the distribution) that is a shareholder and a specified shareholder of the distributing corporation at any time during the course of a series of transactions or events, a part of which includes the distribution made by the distributing corporation, is deemed to be a transferee corporation in relation to the distributing corporation.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 25(6), will amend para. 55(3.2)(h) to read as above, applicable in respect of dividends received after 1999.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 55(3.2) sets out a number of interpretative rules for the purpose of paragraph 55(3.1)(b). Paragraph 55(3.2)(h) provides that each corporation that is a shareholder and specified shareholder of the distributing corporation at any time during the course of the series of transactions or events that includes a distribution is deemed to be a transferee corporation in relation to the distributing corporation. Paragraph 55(3.2)(h) is amended, for dividends received after 1999, to ensure that a "qualified person" as defined in subsection 55(1) is not deemed by this provision to be a transferee corporation in relation to the distributing corporation. For additional information, see the comments in the explanatory note to "qualified person" under subsection 55(1).

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 15, 2000: See under 55(1)"qualified person".

Related Provisions: 88(1)(c)(iv), 88(1)(c.2) — Winding-up; 139.1(18) — Holding corporation deemed not to acquire control of insurer on demutualization; 256(6)–(9) — Whether control acquired.

History: Para. 55(3.2)(h) added by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 96(8), applicable to dividends received after June 20, 1996 other than dividends received in the course of a reorganization that is carried out under a series of transactions or events substantially advanced, as evidenced in writing, before June 21, 1996 or that was required on June 20, 1996 to be carried out under a written agreement made before June 21, 1996, and for the purpose of this application, a reorganization is deemed not to be required to be carried out if the parties to that agreement can be relieved of that requirement if there is a change to the Act.

Subsec. 55(3.2) added by 1995, c. 3, subsec. 16(4), applicable to dividends received after February 21, 1994 other than dividends received before 1995 in the course of a reorganization that was required on February 22, 1994 to be carried out pursuant to a written agreement entered into before February 22, 1994, except that, in applying the Act to dividends received before June 23, 1994, the Act shall be read without reference to paras. 55(3.2)(c) and (e).

(3.3) Interpretation of "specified shareholder" changed — In determining whether a person is a specified shareholder of a corporation for the purposes of subparagraph (3.1)(b)(i) and paragraph (3.2)(h), the reference in the definition "specified shareholder" in subsection 248(1) to "or of any other corporation that is related to the corporation" shall be read as "or of any other corporation that is related to the corporation and that has a significant direct or indirect interest in any issued shares of the capital stock of the corporation".

History: Subsec. 55(3.3) added by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 96(9), applicable to dividends received after 1996.

Proposed Addition — 55(3.4)

(3.4) Specified shareholder exclusion — In determining whether a person is a specified shareholder of a corporation for the purposes of the definition "qualified person" in subsection (1), subparagraph (3.1)(b)(i) and paragraph (3.2)(h) as it applies for the purpose of subparagraph (3.1)(b)(iii), the expression "not less than 10% of the issued shares of any class of the capital stock of the corporation" in the definition "specified shareholder" in subsection 248(1) is to be read as the expression "not less than 10% of the issued shares of any class of the capital stock of the corporation, other than shares of a specified class (within the meaning of subsection 55(1))".

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 25(7), will add subsec. 55(3.4), applicable in respect of dividends received after 1999.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 55(3.4) is added to provide that shares of a specified class are not to be considered in determining whether a person is a specified shareholder for the purposes of subparagraph 55(3.1)(b)(i) and paragraph 55(3.2)(h) (as it applies for the purpose of subparagraph 55(3.1)(b)(iii)) and for the purpose of the definition "qualified person" in subsection 55(1). New subsection 55(3.4), which applies to dividends received after 1999, ensures that a person or partnership that would not, but for the ownership of shares of a specified class, be a specified shareholder, will not be subject to the restrictions on the disposition of property described in subparagraph 55(3.1)(b)(i) and will not be deemed to be a transferee corporation for the purpose of subparagraph 55(3.1)(b)(iii).

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 15, 2000: See under 55(1)"qualified person".

Proposed Addition — 55(3.5)

(3.5) Amalgamation of related corporations — For the purposes of paragraphs (3.1)(c) and (d), a corporation formed by an amalgamation of two or more corporations (each of which is referred to in this subsection as a "predecessor corporation") that were related to each other immediately before the amalgamation, is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each of the predecessor corporations.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 25(7), will add subsec. 55(3.5), applicable in respect of dividends received after April 26, 1995.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 55(3.5) is a new provision that applies for the purposes of paragraphs 55(3.1)(c) and (d). Paragraphs 55(3.1)(c) and (d) provide that a dividend arising in the course of a reorganization to which paragraph 55(3)(b) applies is not exempt from the application of subsection 55(2) where, as Part of the series of transactions or events that includes the receipt of the dividend, property described therein is acquired by a particular person or partnership. In the case of paragraph 55(3.1)(c), the particular person is a person who is not related to the transferee corporation (or ceases to be related to the transferee corporation). In the case of paragraph 55(3.1)(d), the particular person is a person who is not related to the distributing corporation (or ceases to be related to the distributing corporation). Property described in paragraph 55(3.1)(c) does not include a share of the capital stock of the transferee corporation. Similarly, property described in paragraph 55(3.1)(d) does not include a share of the capital stock of the distributing corporation.

New subsection 55(3.5), which applies to dividends received after April 26, 1995, deems an amalgamated corporation to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each of its predecessor corporations provided each of the predecessor corporations was related to each other immediately before the amalgamation. As a result, the references in paragraphs 55(3.1)(c) and (d) to a share of the capital stock of the transferee or distributing corporation include a share of the capital stock of a new corporation formed on an amalgamation where the new corporation is deemed by new subsection 55(3.5) to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, the transferee or distributing corporation, as the case may be.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Feb. 8, 2002:

Dear [xxx]:

We are writing in response to your correspondence of January 25, 2002 and further to your numerous discussions with officials at the Tax Policy Branch regarding the application of paragraph 55(3.1)(c) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") to a proposed issuance of shares by a corporation following a reorganization described in paragraph 55(3)(b) of the Act.

More specifically, you advised us that a transferee corporation ("Newco") received a distribution in the course of a paragraph 55(3)(b) reorganization. The property received by Newco consisted of all the shares of the capital stock of Subco A which, in turn, owned all the shares of Subco B (itself a transferee corporation as a result of a previous paragraph 55(3)(b) reorganization). At the time of the distribution, Subco B owned shares of Opco. Following the distribution, Newco amalgamated with Subco A and Subco B to form Amalco. Amalco then amalgamated with Opco to form Amalco2. Immediately before the amalgamation in which Amalco2 was created, Amalco owned all the shares of Opco. Each amalgamation was governed by subsection 87(1) of the Act. Amalco2 is now proposing to issue shares of its capital stock to persons not related to it in consideration for the transfer of property to Amalco2.

Your concern is that property described in paragraph 55(3.1)(c) will be acquired as a result of the issuance of the Amalco2 shares. While subparagraph 55(3.1)(c)(ii) excludes a share of the capital stock of a transferee corporation from the type of property described in paragraph 55(3.1)(c), this exclusion does not extend to a share of the capital stock of a new corporation formed on the amalgamation of a transferee corporation and a corporation related to the transferee corporation.

You submit that the result is anomalous and frustrates the legislative scheme in paragraph 55(3.1)(c), particularly in view of the exclusion in clause 55(3.1)(c)(i)(C) for property acquired as a result of an amalgamation of two or more related corporations. In addition, you submit that there is an apparent conflict between subparagraph 55(3.1)(b)(ii) and paragraph 55(3.1)(c). Subparagraph 55(3.1)(b)(ii) applies, among other things, to an issuance of shares of the capital stock of a transferee corporation (or a new corporation deemed by paragraph 55(3.2)(b) to be a continuation of the transferee corporation) that results in an acquisition of control. In your view, subparagraph 55(3.1)(b)(ii) establishes the parameters within which a share issued by a transferee corporation (or by a new corporation formed on the amalgamation of a transferee corporation and a corporation related to the transferee corporation) should or should not affect a paragraph 55(3)(b) reorganization and, therefore, if paragraph 55(3.1)(c) also applied, the acquisition of control test in subparagraph 55(3.1)(b)(ii) would be compromised. Based on our understanding of the facts described above and the circumstances surrounding these transactions, we agree that the issuance of shares by Amalco2 should not result in an acquisition of property described in paragraph 55(3.1)(c). Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that, for the purpose of paragraph 55(3.1)(c), the Act be amended to ensure that, in situations described in your correspondence, Amalco2 will be considered to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, Newco. In addition, as a result of our review, we will also recommend that an amendment be made to the Act to ensure that a similar continuation rule will apply to a distributing corporation for the purpose of paragraph 55(3.1)(d). If the recommendations are acted upon, we anticipate that the amendments would be included in the next technical bill.

Yours sincerely,
Len Farber, General Director, Tax Policy Branch

(4) Avoidance of subsec. (2) — For the purposes of this section, where it can reasonably be considered that one of the main purposes of one or more transactions or events was to cause 2 or more persons to be related to each other or to cause a corporation to control another corporation, so that subsection (2) would, but for this subsection, not apply to a dividend, those persons shall be deemed not to be related to each other or the corporation shall be deemed not to control the other corporation, as the case may be.

Related Provisions: 55(5)(e) — Determination of "related" and "arm's length"; 139.1(18) — Holding corporation deemed not to acquire control of insurer on demutualization.

History: Subsec. 55(4) amended by 1994, c. 3, subsec. 16(5), applicable to dividends received after February 21, 1994, other than dividends received as part of a transaction or event or a series of transactions or events that was required on February 22, 1994 to be carried out pursuant to a written agreement entered into before February 22, 1994. Subsec. 55(4) formerly read:

> (4) Arm's length dealings — Where it may reasonably be considered that the principal purpose of one or more transactions or events was to cause two or more persons to be related or to not deal with each other at arm's length, or to cause one corporation to control another corporation, so as to make subsection (2) inapplicable, for the purposes of this section, those persons shall be deemed not to be related or shall be deemed to deal with each other at arm's length, or the corporation shall be deemed not to control the other corporation, as the case may be.

(5) Applicable rules — For the purposes of this section,

(d) the income earned or realized by a corporation (referred to in this paragraph as the "affiliate") for a period ending at a time when the affiliate was a foreign affiliate of another corporation is deemed to be the lesser of

(ii) the fair market value at that time of all the issued and outstanding shares of the capital stock of the affiliate;

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), s. 8, will amend para. 55(2)(d) to read as above, applicable in respect of a dividend received after August 19, 2011 by a corporation resident in Canada, except where the dividend is received as part of a series of transactions or events that includes a disposition of the shares in respect of which the dividend is received that

(a) is made to a person or partnership that, at the time of the disposition, deals at arm's length with the corporation; and

(b) occurs under an agreement in writing entered into before August 19, 2011.

See also Application under s. 90 re extended reassessment deadline.

Technical Notes: Section 55 deals with certain Canadian domestic corporate reorganization transactions. Its main operative rule is found in subsection 55(2). Subsection 55(2) is an anti-avoidance provision directed at arrangements designed to use the inter-corporate dividend exemption in section 112 to unduly reduce a capital gain on a sale of shares of a Canadian corporation. If it applies, subsection 55(2) recharacterizes dividends in respect of the shares of a Canadian corporation as proceeds from the sale of the shares or as a capital gain.

Subsection 55(2) does not apply where the gain that has been reduced can be attributed to the share's portion of the income ("safe income") earned or realized by any corporation after 1971 and before the "safe-income determination time", a term that is defined in subsection 55(1).

Paragraph 55(5)(d) provides a mechanical rule to compute the safe income of a foreign affiliate of the relevant Canadian corporation. This rule is being amended as a consequence of the recent introduction of the concept of a "tax-free surplus balance", in subsection 5905(5.5) of the Regulations, and to ensure that appropriate amounts in respect of foreign affiliates are counted towards the safe income of a relevant Canadian corporation.

This amendment applies in respect of dividends received after August 19, 2011 by a corporation resident in Canada but there is "grandfathering" for transactions in progress as of August 19, 2011.

Proposed Addition — 55(6)

(6) Unlisted shares deemed listed — A share (in this subsection referred to as the "reorganization share") is deemed, for the purposes of subsection 116(6) and the definition "taxable Canadian property" in subsection 248(1), to be listed on a designated stock exchange if

(a) a dividend, to which subsection (2) does not apply because of paragraph (3)(b), is received in the course of a reorganization;

(b) in contemplation of the reorganization

(i) the reorganization share is issued to a taxpayer by a public corporation in exchange for another share of that corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "old share") owned by the taxpayer, and

(ii) the reorganization share is exchanged by the taxpayer for a share of another public corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "new share") in an exchange that would be a permitted exchange if the definition "permitted exchange" were read without reference to paragraph (a) and subparagraph (b)(ii) of that definition;

(c) immediately before the exchange, the old share

(i) is listed on a designated stock exchange, and

(ii) is not taxable Canadian property of the taxpayer; and

(d) the new share is listed on a designated stock exchange.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 25(8), will add subsec. 55(6), applicable to shares that are issued after April 26, 1995, except that for the period before December 14, 2007, the references to "designated stock exchange" are to be read as references to "prescribed stock exchange".

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 55(6), which applies to shares issued after April 26, 1995, treats a taxpayer's unlisted shares of a public corporation ("reorganization shares") — that were issued to the taxpayer and redeemed in the course of a tax-deferred reorganization spin-off by the public corporation — to be listed on a prescribed stock exchange. This subsection ensures that the shares are listed on a prescribed stock exchange for the purposes of the clearance certificate rule in subsection 116(1) and the definition "taxable Canadian property" in subsection 248(1). However, for this treatment to apply, the following conditions must be met:

- a dividend must be received in the course of the reorganization to which the anti-avoidance rule in subsection 55(2) does not apply because of the exception for certain spin-off butterfly transactions in paragraph 55(3)(b);
- in contemplation of the reorganization
  - the reorganization share must be issued to a taxpayer by a public corporation in an exchange for another share of that corporation (the old share) owned by the taxpayer, and
  - the reorganization share must be exchanged by the taxpayer for a new share of another public corporation in an exchange that would be within the meaning of the definition "permitted exchange" in subsection 55(1) if that definition were read without reference to paragraph (a) and subparagraph (b)(ii) of that definition. In other words, the exchange occurs in contemplation of a public corporation transacting a spin-off reorganization;
- immediately before the exchange, the old share
  - must be listed on a prescribed stock exchange, and
  - must not be taxable Canadian property of the taxpayer; and
- the new share must be listed on a prescribed stock exchange.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 6, 2000:

Dear [xxx]:

I am writing in response to your letter of March 20, 2000 and further to your telephone conversation with Davine Roach of this Division regarding a proposed butterfly reorganization in which [xxx], a Canadian public corporation, proposes to distribute the shares of its wholly-owned subsidiary, [xxx] ("Subco"), proportionately amongst [xxx] shareholders. [xxx] shareholders will hold their interest in Subco indirectly through Newco, which will subsequently be amalgamated with Subco.

Our understanding of the facts of the proposed transaction is that the common shares currently held by each [xxx] shareholder will be exchanged for New [xxx] Common Shares and [xxx] Reorganisation Shares. The Reorganisation Shares will not be listed on a stock exchange,prescribed in the Income Tax Regulations (a "prescribed stock exchange"). The [xxx] Reorganisation Shares will be exchanged for Newco common shares (the "Newco Shares"). The Newco Shares will be listed on a prescribed stock exchange. [xxx] Reorganisation Shares will be redeemed by [xxx] as part of the butterfly reorganisation.

Because of subparagraph 115(1)(b)(iv) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act"), the [xxx] Reorganisation Shares will be considered to be taxable Canadian property for the purposes of the Act. Under the provisions of section 85 and 85.1 of the Act, the taxable Canadian property status of the [xxx] Reorganisation Shares will also cause the Newco Shares acquired in exchange for a shareholder's Reorganisation Shares to be taxable Canadian property of the shareholder even though the Newco Shares will be listed on a prescribed stock exchange. In addition, the [xxx] Reorganisation Shares will not be considered to be excluded property for the purpose of subsection 116(3) of the Act because paragraph 116(6)(b) of the Act will not apply to those shares.

In these circumstances, we agree that the Newco Shares held by a shareholder, which were acquired by the shareholder in exchange for the Reorganisation Shares in the course of the butterfly reorganisation, should not be considered to be taxable Canadian property of the shareholders for the purposes of the Act. Consequently, we will recommend to the Minister of Finance that amendments to the Act be introduced to ensure that the [xxx] Reorganisation Shares held by a shareholder of [xxx] will not be considered to be taxable Canadian property of the shareholder for the purposes of the Act.

You have also expressed a concern that shareholders may be prevented from choosing, under subsection 85.1(1) of the Act, to include in computing their incomes a loss arising from the disposition of their Reorganisation Shares in exchange for Newco Common Shares because of the application of paragraph 40(3.5)(b) of the Act.

The stop-loss rule in subsection 40(3.4) of the Act suspends the loss that would otherwise be realized on a transfer of a non-depreciable capital property to an affiliated person. For the purposes of this rule, paragraph 40(3.5)(b) provides that a share that is acquired in exchange for another share in a transaction to which section 85.1 applies is deemed to be a property identical to the other share. This ensures, for example, that a loss that is deferred on the transfer of a share to an affiliate will not be recognized at the time the share is subsequently replaced by the affiliate in a share-for-share exchange with another corporation under that provision. Even though it may be argued that the former share is no longer held by an affiliated person (since that share no longer exists), paragraph 40(3.5)(b) causes the new share in effect to take its place for this purpose.

We agree that from a policy point of view, in a transaction to which section 85.1 applies, it ought to be possible for the vendor (as defined in that subsection) to realize a loss on the transfer of the exchanged shares to the purchaser corporation in exchange for shares of the purchaser, provided that the purchaser is not affiliated with the vendor. We will recommend that the Act be amended to ensure that this result obtains in the context of the transaction that you have described. We do not, however, anticipate recommending that this change be implemented in the particular manner proposed in your letter — through a new exclusion in subsection 85.1(2). This would have the incidental effect of removing a whole class of transactions from the application of paragraph 85.1(1)(b), a result which we do not believe would be appropriate in policy terms.

We will recommend that the amendments described above be included in a future bill containing technical amendments to the Act. While I cannot, as you know, offer any assurance that either the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendations, I hope that this statement of our position is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber

General Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Feb. 28, 2001:

Dear [xxx]:

This is in response to your letter of December 20, 2000 to Davine Roach of the Department regarding a proposed series of transactions under which a public corporation ("Opco") in the course of a butterfly reorganization spins-off certain of its property to a new corporation ("Newco").

Our understanding of the facts of the proposed transaction is that each common share currently held by an Opco shareholder will be exchanged for a new common share and a special share of Opco. This exchange will be governed by section 86 of the Income Tax Act (the "Act"). The special shares of Opco will be redeemable and will not be listed on a prescribed stock exchange. Newco will acquire all the special shares of Opco from the Opco shareholders in exchange for common shares of Newco (the Newco shares). This exchange will be governed by section 85.1 of the Act unless a shareholder elects under subsection 85(1) of the Act. The Newco shares will be listed on a prescribed stock exchange. Opco will redeem the special shares of Opco acquired by Newco as part of the butterfly reorganization.

Because of subparagraph 115(1)(b)(iv) of the Act, the special shares of Opco held by a non-resident shareholder will be considered to be taxable Canadian property for the purposes of the Act. Under the provisions of sections 85 and 85.1 of the Act, the taxable Canadian property status of the special shares of Opco will also cause the Newco shares acquired by the non-resident shareholder in exchange for the non-resident's special shares of Opco to be taxable Canadian property of the non-resident even though the Newco shares will be listed on a prescribed stock exchange. As well, the special shares of Opco will not be considered to be excluded property for the purpose of subsection 116(3) of the Act because the definition "excluded property" in subsection 116(6) applies, in the case of shares of the capital stock of a corporation, only if the shares are listed on a prescribed stock exchange.

In these circumstances, we agree that Newco shares should not be considered to be taxable Canadian property by reason only of a deeming rule that applies on the exchange of the special shares for the Newco shares (i.e., because subparagraph 115(1)(b)(iv) applied before the exchange to the special shares of Opco). Consequently, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the income tax provisions be amended to ensure that the above-mentioned special shares of Opco held by a non-resident shareholder will not be considered to be taxable Canadian property of the non-resident in these circumstances for the purposes of the Act. We would recommend that such an amendment be effective for such reorganization shares issued by a public corporation after April 26, 1995 where the shares were issued by the corporation as part of the series of transactions or events that included a distribution of property by the corporation in the course of a butterfly reorganization. The date of April 26, 1995 is the date upon which the related amendments to paragraph 115(1)(b) took effect. If the recommendation is acted upon, I would anticipate that such an amendment would be included in a future technical bill.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber

Dept. of Finance news release 2005-050, July 19, 2005: Amendments to be Recommended to the Income Tax Act With Respect to the Québec Parental Insurance Plan

The Department of Finance today indicated its intention to recommend amendments to the Income Tax Act to provide for the tax treatment of benefits and premiums under the Québec Parental Insurance Plan (QPIP), which is expected to come into force on January 1, 2006.

The QPIP will replace maternity and parental benefits currently provided under the employment insurance (EI) program for eligible Quebec residents. EI premiums for employers and employees in Quebec will be reduced to reflect the fact that Quebec residents will no longer receive maternity and parental benefits under EI. QPIP premiums will be collected directly by the Province of Quebec.

The proposed amendments would ensure that the federal tax treatment of QPIP premiums and benefits is consistent with the federal tax treatment of EI premiums and benefits. Specifically:

- Benefits paid under the QPIP would be included in the calculation of an individual's income [56(1)(a)(iv) — ed.].
- Employees would be eligible for a federal non-refundable tax credit for QPIP premiums paid, to be provided at the same rate as the federal non-refundable tax credit for EI premiums [118.7 — ed.].
- Employers would be able to deduct premiums paid under the plan in the calculation of their income [9(1), and 8(1)(l.1) for individuals — ed.].
- The self-employed would be eligible for a non-refundable tax credit for the employee's share of QPIP premiums [118.7 — ed.] and a tax deduction for the employer's share [9(1) — ed.], where the calculation of these shares is determined by the Province of Quebec.

These amendments would apply to benefits received and premiums paid upon the implementation of the QPIP. It is intended that legislation to implement the proposed amendments be introduced at the earliest opportunity.

(9) Meaning of "income for the year" — For the purposes of paragraphs (1)(s) and (u), "income for the year" of a person means the amount that would, but for those paragraphs, paragraphs 60(v.1) and (w) and section 63, be the income of that person for the year.

History: Subsec. 56(9) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VII (1992, c. 48), subsec. 1(2), applicable to 1993 et seq. Subsec. 56(9) formerly read:

(9) Definition of "income for the year" — For the purposes of paragraphs (1)(s) and (u) and subsection (6), "income for the year" of a person means the amount that would, but for those paragraphs, subsection (5), paragraphs 60(v.1) and (w) and section 63, be the income of that person for the year.

Subsec. 56(9) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 32(11), to add reference to paragraph 60(v.1), applicable to 1989 et seq.

Proposed Addition — 56(9.1)

(9.1) Meaning of "income" — For the purposes of subsection (6), "income" of a person for a taxation year means the amount that would, in the absence of that subsection, paragraphs (1)(s) and (u), 60(v.1), (w) and (y) and section 63, be the income of the person for the taxation year.

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, s. 8, will add subsec. 56(9.1), applicable to 2006 et seq.

Technical Notes: Subsection 56(6) generally provides that the Universal Child Care Benefit ("UCCB") is to be reported by the spouse or common-law partner with the lower income for a taxation year. Other provisions in the Act similarly apply to include amounts in the income of, or to allow deductions to, the spouse or common-law partner with the higher or lower net income in the year.

New subsection 56(9.1) defines "income" for the purpose of determining the income of each spouse or common-law partner for the purposes of subsection 56(6). The new rule requires that, in calculating for these purposes the income of the taxpayer and the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner, the following amounts will not be considered:

- certain grants and social assistance payments received by a married person or that person's spouse, which are for other purposes added in computing income; and
- child care expense deductions, and repayments of old age security, employment insurance and UCCB which are for other purposes deductible in computing income.

(10) Severability of retirement compensation arrangement — Where a retirement compensation arrangement is part of a plan or arrangement (in this subsection referred to as the "plan") under which amounts not related to the retirement compensation arrangement are payable or provided, for the purposes of this Act, other than this subsection,

(a) the retirement compensation arrangement shall be deemed to be a separate arrangement independent of other parts of the plan of which it is a part; and

(b) subject to subsection 6(14), amounts paid out of or under the plan shall be deemed to have first been paid out of the retirement compensation arrangement unless a provision in the plan otherwise provides.

(11) Disposition of property by RCA trust — For the purposes of paragraphs (1)(x) and (z), where, at any time in a year, a trust governed by a retirement compensation arrangement

(a) disposes of property to a person for consideration less than the fair market value of the property at the time of the disposition, or for no consideration,

(b) acquires property from a person for consideration greater than the fair market value of the property at the time of the acquisition, or

(c) permits a person to use or enjoy property of the trust for no consideration or for consideration less than the fair market value of such use or enjoyment, the amount, if any, by which such fair market value differs from the consideration or, if there is no consideration, the amount of the fair market value shall be deemed to be an amount received at that time by the person out of or under the arrangement that can reasonably be considered to have been received in respect of an office or employment of a taxpayer.

Related Provisions: 69(1) — General rule deeming disposition to be at fair market value.

(12) [Repealed]

Proposed Addition — 56(12)

(12) Foreign retirement arrangement — If an amount in respect of a foreign retirement arrangement is, as a result of a transaction, an event or a circumstance, considered to be distributed to an individual under the income tax laws of the country in which the arrangement is established, the amount is, for the purpose of paragraph (1)(a), deemed to be received by the individual as a payment out of the arrangement in the taxation year that includes the time of the transaction, event or circumstance.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 26(3), will add subsec. 56(12), applicable to 1998 et seq. except that, for taxation years that end before 2002, the subsec. is to be read as follows:

(12) For the purpose of paragraph (1)(a),

(a) if an amount in respect of a foreign retirement arrangement is considered, under section 408A(d)(3)(C) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 of the United States (in this subsection referred to as the "Code"), to be distributed to an individual as a result of a conversion of the arrangement after 1998 and before 2002, the amount is deemed to be received by the individual as a payment out of the arrangement in the taxation year that includes the time of the conversion; and

(b) if an individual received an amount as a payment out of or under a foreign retirement arrangement in 1998, or an amount is considered under section 408A(d)(3)(C) of the Code to be distributed to the individual as a result of a conversion of the arrangement in 1998, the individual was resident in Canada at the time of the receipt or conversion and the amount is an amount to which section 408A(d)(3)(A)(iii) of the Code applies,

(i) the amount is deemed not to have been received by the individual, and

(ii) an amount equal to the amount that is included under section 408A(d)(3)(A)(iii) or 408A(d)(3)(E) of the Code in the individual's gross income for a particular taxable year is deemed to be an amount received by the individual, in the taxation year that includes the day on which the particular taxable year begins, as a payment out of the arrangement, where the expressions "gross income" and "taxable year" in this subparagraph have the meanings assigned to those expressions by the Code.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Clause 56(1)(a)(i)(C.1) generally requires that payments received by a taxpayer from a foreign retirement arrangement (FRA) be included in computing the taxpayer's income as a superannuation or pension benefit. An FRA is defined in subsection 248(1) as a prescribed plan or arrangement. Presently, the only arrangements prescribed to be an FRA under Regulation 6803 are individual retirement accounts and annuities (IRAs) established pursuant to section 408(a), (b) or (h) of the United States' Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (referred to as the "Code").

New subsection 56(12) is introduced to require Canadian residents who hold IRAs to include in income any amount treated under the Code as a distribution from an IRA, to the extent that the amount is required to be included in income for U.S. tax purposes. New subsection 56(12), among other things, gives effect to a proposal that was announced in Finance Canada News Release 1998-129, dated December 18, 1998.

In certain circumstances, the Code provides that an amount is to be treated as a distribution from an IRA even though no distribution has in fact been made. For example, if an individual converts an IRA into a Roth IRA (which is an individual retirement plan established pursuant to section 408A(b) of the Code) simply by amending the plan terms, section 408A(d)(3)(C) of the Code treats the converted amount as a distribution from the regular IRA and, thus, includible in income for U.S. tax purposes. For Canadian tax purposes, however, the converted amount might not be considered to have been received by the individual and, thus, could escape taxation in Canada. Other circumstances in which the Code treats a distribution to have occurred include borrowing money from an IRA and using an IRA as security for a loan. New subsection 56(12) clarifies that such "deemed" distributions under the Code are to be treated as distributions for Canadian income tax purposes.

More specifically, subsection 56(12) provides that, for the purpose of paragraph 56(1)(a), an individual is deemed to have received an amount as a payment from an FRA where, as a result of a transaction, event or circumstance, the income tax laws of the foreign country in which the FRA is established treats the amount as having been distributed from the FRA to the individual. The taxation year in which the individual is deemed to have received the amount is the taxation year that includes the time of the transaction, event or circumstance.

Subsection 56(12) applies to the 1998 and subsequent taxation years except that, in its application to the 1998 to 2001 taxation years, two modifications are made. First, its application is limited to circumstances involving the conversion of an IRA into a Roth IRA. Second, for conversions of IRAs into Roth IRAs that occurred in 1998, the amount and timing of the income inclusion in Canada will match the amount and timing in the U.S. Under the Code, individuals who converted an IRA into a Roth IRA in 1998 were entitled to spread the income inclusion over a four-year period. Subsection 56(12) provides for the same treatment. However, if an individual became resident in Canada after having converted an IRA into a Roth IRA in 1998, the individual will not be subject to taxation in Canada on any amounts relating to the conversion that remain taxable for U.S. tax purposes.

Dept. of Finance news release 1998-129, Dec. 18, 1998: Qualified RRSP Investments and IRAs

Finance Minister Paul Martin today announced that he will propose changes to the Income Tax Act and the Income Tax Regulations to address two issues that have been recently raised with the Department of Finance, in the context of retirement savings decisions currently being made by individuals.

[First measure now implemented in Reg. 4900(1)(n.1) — ed.]

The second issue deals with individual retirement accounts (IRAs) established under the United States Internal Revenue Code. The Minister announced that he will propose an amendment to the Income Tax Act in response to recent changes to the Code relating to IRAs.

The changes to the Code have established a new type of IRA, known as a Roth IRA. Under the Code, contributions to a Roth IRA are not deductible, but investment income accrues tax-free and distributions are generally not taxable. Under certain circumstances, an individual may convert an ordinary IRA into a Roth IRA, but is required to include in computing income for the year of conversion the value of the ordinary IRA at the time of conversion. If the conversion is made in 1998, the income inclusion may be spread out over a four-year period.

The proposed amendment to the Act would affect Canadian residents who convert ordinary IRAs into Roth IRAs. It would require that the individual include in income for Canadian tax purposes any amount that must be included in income for U.S. tax purposes. This would ensure that the conversion amount is taxed in Canada, even where the IRA is converted simply by amending its terms. It would also ensure that the amount and timing of the inclusion in Canada matches the amount and timing in the U.S., thus allowing individuals to maximize the use of U.S. taxes paid on conversion as foreign tax credits in computing Canadian income tax payable.

Mr. Martin noted that the deferral opportunities in the U.S. for Roth IRAs are far more generous than the deferral opportunities in the U.S. for ordinary IRAs and the deferral opportunities in Canada for tax-assisted retirement savings. In particular, contributions can be made to a Roth IRA at any age, and there is no requirement for payments under a Roth IRA to begin by a certain age. Accordingly, there are no plans to provide tax assistance by way of an exemption from or deferral of taxation in Canada on earnings within a Roth IRA.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New section 56.4 sets out rules with respect to amounts that are received or receivable in respect of a restrictive covenant. In addition to new section 56.4, there are consequential changes to other provisions of the Act, including section 6 (employment income), subsection 14(5.1) (restrictive covenant amount), section 56 (amounts to be included in income), section 60 (other deductions), section 68 (allocation of consideration) and section 212 (Part XIII tax, non-resident withholding tax) of the Act. The notes accompanying those consequential changes contain additional details about each change.

56.4 Restrictive covenants [Non-competition agreements] — (1) Definitions — The following definitions apply in this section.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 56.4(1) defines an "eligible corporation", an "eligible interest", an "eligible person", a "restrictive covenant", a "goodwill amount", "a permanent establishment" and a "taxpayer". These definitions are relevant for the purpose of computing the amount, if any, that a taxpayer is required to include in income, or in proceeds of disposition in respect of certain capital property, in respect of amounts received or receivable for a restrictive covenant.

"eligible corporation", of a taxpayer, means a taxable Canadian corporation of which the taxpayer holds, directly or indirectly, shares of the capital stock.

Technical Notes (July 2010): "Eligible corporation" of a taxpayer means a taxable Canadian corporation of which the taxpayer holds, directly or indirectly, shares of the capital stock.

This definition is relevant for the purpose of determining whether new subsections 56.4(5), (7), (8) and (8.1) apply to provide an exception from the rule in section 68 that may deem a person who grants a restrictive covenant to receive an amount for the restrictive covenant.

"eligible interest", of a taxpayer, means capital property of the taxpayer that is

(a) a partnership interest in a partnership that carries on a business;

(b) a share of the capital stock of a corporation that carries on a business; or

(c) a share of the capital stock of a corporation 90% or more of the fair market value of which is attributable to eligible interests in one other corporation.

Technical Notes (July 2010): "Eligible interest", of a taxpayer, means capital property of the taxpayer that is

- a partnership interest in a partnership that carries on a business,
- a share of the capital stock of a corporation that carries on a business, or
- a share of the capital stock of a corporation 90% or more of the fair market value of which is attributable to eligible interest in one other corporation.

This definition is relevant for the purpose of applying new paragraphs 56.4(3)(c) and (4)(c).

Related Provisions: 56.4(4)(c) — Cost to purchaser of eligible interest.

"eligible person" in respect of a vendor at any time means an individual who is related to the vendor and who has attained the age of 18 years at or before that time.

Technical Notes (July 2010): "Eligible person" in respect of a vendor at any time means an individual who is related to the vendor and who has attained the age of 18 years at that time or before. This definition is relevant for the purpose of applying new subsection 56.4(8.1).

"goodwill amount", of a taxpayer, is an amount received or receivable by the taxpayer as consideration for the disposition by the taxpayer of goodwill, and that is required by the description of E in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5) to be included in computing the cumulative eligible capital of a business carried on by the taxpayer through a permanent establishment located in Canada.

Technical Notes (July 2010): "Goodwill amount", of a taxpayer, is an amount that is received or receivable by the taxpayer as consideration for the disposition by the taxpayer of goodwill, and that is required by the description of E in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5) to be included in computing the cumulative eligible capital of a business carried on through a permanent establishment located in Canada. This definition is relevant for the purpose of applying new subsection 56.4(7).

Related Provisions: 56.4(7)(d) — Allocation of goodwill amount.

"permanent establishment" means a permanent establishment as defined for the purpose of subsection 16.1(1).

Technical Notes (July 2010): "Permanent establishment" means a permanent establishment as defined for the purpose of subsection 16.1(1) — see Income Tax Regulation 8201. This definition is relevant for the purpose of applying the definition "goodwill amount".

Regulations: 8201 (meaning of permanent establishment).

"restrictive covenant", of a taxpayer, means an agreement entered into, an undertaking made, or a waiver of an advantage or right by the taxpayer, whether legally enforceable or not, that affects, or is intended to affect, in any way whatever, the acquisition or provision of property or services by the taxpayer or by another taxpayer that does not deal at arm's length with the taxpayer, other than an agreement or undertaking

(a) that disposes of the taxpayer's property; or

(b) in satisfaction of an obligation described in section 49.1 that is not a disposition except where the obligation being satisfied is in respect of a right to property or services that the taxpayer acquired for less than its fair market value.

Technical Notes (July 2010): "Restrictive covenant", of a taxpayer, means an arrangement entered into, an undertaking made, or a waiver of an advantage or right by a taxpayer that affects, in any way whatever, the acquisition or provision of property or services by a taxpayer or by another taxpayer that does not deal at arm's length with the taxpayer, other than an arrangement or undertaking

(a) that disposes of the taxpayer's property, or

(b) in satisfaction of an obligation described in section 49.1 that is not a disposition except where the obligation being satisfied is in respect of a right to property or services that the taxpayer acquired for less than fair market value.

Related Provisions: 68(c) — Allocation of amount to restrictive covenant must be reasonable.

Technical Notes (July 2010): "Taxpayer" includes a partnership.

(2) Income — restrictive covenants [non-competition agreements] — There is to be included in computing a taxpayer's income for a taxation year the total of all amounts each of which is an amount in respect of a restrictive covenant of the taxpayer that is received or receivable in the taxation year by the taxpayer or by a taxpayer with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length (other than an amount that has been included in computing the taxpayer's income because of this subsection for a preceding taxation year or in the taxpayer's eligible corporation's income because of this subsection for the taxation year or a preceding taxation year).

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 56.4(2) provides that there is to be included in computing a taxpayer's income for a taxation year amounts in respect of a restrictive covenant that are received or receivable in the taxation year by the taxpayer (or by another taxpayer with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length). If an amount that is receivable is included because of subsection 56.4(2) in computing a taxpayer's income, or the taxpayer's eligible corporation's income, in a taxation year, the amount will not be included in computing the taxpayer's income in a subsequent year. Subsection 56.4(2) does not apply in certain circumstances described in subsection (3). Also, subsection 56.4(12) provides a clarifying rule in respect of amounts included in income under subsection 56.4(2).

Related Provisions: 6(3), (3.1) — Employment income inclusion from restrictive covenant; 12(1)(x)(v.1) — No income inclusion under 12(1)(x); 14(5.1) — Cumulative eligible capital — exclusion from calculation; 56.4(3) — Exceptions; 56.4(12) — Other person who receives the amount is not taxed on it; 60(f) — Deduction for bad debt; 68(c) — Allocation of amount to restrictive covenant must be reasonable; 212(1)(i), (13)(g) — Non-resident withholding tax.

(3) Non-application of subsec. (2) — Subsection (2) does not apply to an amount received or receivable by a particular taxpayer in a taxation year in respect of a restrictive covenant granted by the particular taxpayer to another taxpayer (referred to in this subsection and subsection (4) as the "purchaser") with whom the particular taxpayer deals at arm's length (determined without reference to paragraph 251(5)(b)), if

(a) section 5 or 6 applied to include the amount in computing the particular taxpayer's income for the taxation year or would have so applied if the amount had been received in the taxation year;

(b) the amount would, if this Act were read without reference to this section, be required by the description of E in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5) to be included in computing the particular taxpayer's cumulative eligible capital in respect of the business to which the restrictive covenant relates, and the particular taxpayer elects (or if the amount is payable by the purchaser in respect of a business carried on in Canada by the purchaser, the particular taxpayer and the purchaser jointly elect) in prescribed form to apply this paragraph in respect of the amount; or

(c) subject to subsection (10), the amount directly relates to the particular taxpayer's disposition of property that is, at the time of the disposition, an eligible interest in the partnership or corporation that carries on the business to which the restrictive covenant relates, or that is at that time an eligible interest by virtue of paragraph (c) of the definition "eligible interest" where the other corporation referred to in that paragraph carries on the business to which the restrictive covenant relates, and

(i) the disposition is to the purchaser (or to a person related to the purchaser),

(ii) the amount is consideration for an undertaking by the particular taxpayer not to provide, directly or indirectly, property or services in competition with the property or services provided or to be provided by the purchaser (or by a person related to the purchaser),

(iii) the restrictive covenant may reasonably be considered to have been granted to maintain or preserve the value of the eligible interest disposed of to the purchaser;

(iv) if the restrictive covenant is granted on or after July 18, 2005, subsection 84(3) does not apply to the disposition,

(v) neither section 85 nor subsection 97(2) applies to the disposition of the eligible interest by the particular taxpayer,

(vi) the amount is added to the particular taxpayer's proceeds of disposition, as defined by section 54, for the purpose of applying this Act to the disposition of the particular taxpayer's eligible interest, and

(vii) the particular taxpayer and the purchaser elect in prescribed form to apply this paragraph in respect of the amount.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 56.4(3) provides three exceptions to the income inclusion rule in subsection 56.4(2) for amounts received or receivable in respect of a restrictive covenant granted by a taxpayer to a person with whom the taxpayer deals at arm's length (the "purchaser").

First, subsection 56.4(2) does not apply to an amount if section 5 or 6 of the Act applies to include the amount in computing the taxpayer's employment income for the year or would have so applied if the amount had been received in the taxation year.

Second, subsection 56.4(2) does not apply to an amount that would, if the Act were read without reference to section 56.4, be required by the description of E in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5) to be included in computing the taxpayer's cumulative eligible capital in respect of the business to which the restrictive covenant relates. The taxpayer (and the purchaser if the purchaser carries on business in Canada) is required to elect jointly in prescribed form to apply this exception. The note accompanying new subsection 56.4(14) provides further details with respect to filing an election.

Third, subsection 56.4(2) does not apply to an amount to the extent that the amount is additional "proceeds of disposition" from the disposition of an eligible interest (see the definition "eligible interest" in subsection 56.4(11)) of the taxpayer if certain conditions are met. All of the following conditions must be met:

- The amount must directly relate to the taxpayer's disposition of an eligible interest in the partnership or corporation that carries on the business to which the restrictive covenant relates, or that is an eligible interest by virtue of paragraph (c) of the definition "eligible interest" where the other corporation referred to in that paragraph carries on the business to which the restrictive covenant relates.
- The disposition of the eligible interest must be to the purchaser of the restrictive covenant (or to a person related to that purchaser).
- The amount received or receivable must be consideration for an undertaking by the taxpayer not to provide property or services in competition with the property or services provided by the purchaser (or by a person related to the purchaser).
- The restrictive covenant must be reasonably considered to have been granted to maintain or preserve the value of the eligible interest disposed of to the purchaser.
- In order to be able to add the restrictive covenant amount to the proceeds of disposition of an eligible interest that is a share, there cannot be a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of the share to which subsection 84(3) applies. This requirement applies to a restrictive covenant granted on or after July 18, 2005.
- The disposition of the eligible interest cannot be the subject matter of a rollover under section 85 or subsection 97(2). This requirement applies to restrictive covenants granted on or after November 9, 2006.
- The amount is added in the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the eligible interest.
- The taxpayer and the purchaser of the restrictive covenant jointly elect in prescribed form to apply this exception. The note accompanying new subsection 56.4(14) provides further details with respect to filing an election.

New paragraph 56.4(3)(c) is, however, subject to new subsection 56.4(10) – discussed below in the accompanying note – which provides an anti-avoidance rule that, if applicable, results in the non application of paragraph 56.3(3)(c).

Related Provisions: 6(3), (3.1) — Employment income inclusion from restrictive covenant; 56.4(4) — Treatment of purchaser; 56.4(10) — Para. (c) does not apply to employment or business income; 56.4(14) - Filing of prescribed form for paras. (b) and (c); 220(3.2), Reg. 600(c) — Late filing or revocation of election under 56.4(3)(c); 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

(4) Treatment of purchaser — An amount paid or payable by a purchaser for a restrictive covenant is

(a) if the amount is required because of section 5 or 6 to be included in computing the income of an employee of the purchaser, to be considered to be wages paid or payable by the purchaser to the employee;

(b) if an election has been made under paragraph (3)(b) in respect of the amount, to be considered to be incurred by the purchaser on account of capital for the purpose of applying the definition "eligible capital expenditure" in subsection 14(5) and not to be an amount paid or payable for all other purposes of the Act; and

(c) if an election has been made under paragraph (3)(c), in respect of the amount and the amount relates to the purchaser's acquisition of property that is, immediately after the acquisition, an eligible interest of the purchaser, to be included in computing the cost to the purchaser of that eligible interest and considered not to be an amount paid or payable for all other purposes of the Act.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 56.4(4) provides rules that apply to an amount paid or payable by a purchaser of a restrictive covenant in certain circumstances.

If the amount paid or payable by a purchaser of a restrictive covenant is employment income of an employee of the purchaser, the amount is considered to be wages paid or payable by the purchaser to the employee.

If an election has been made under paragraph 56.4(3)(b) in respect of the amount, the amount is to be considered to be an outlay incurred by the purchaser on account of capital for the purpose of applying the definition "eligible capital expenditure" in subsection 14(5) and not to be an amount paid or payable for all other purposes of the Act.

If an election has been made under paragraph 56.4(3)(c) in respect of the amount and the amount relates to the purchaser's acquisition of property that is immediately after the acquisition an eligible interest of the purchaser, the amount is to be included in computing the cost to the purchaser of that interest and is considered not to be an amount paid or payable for all other purposes of the Act.

Related Provisions: 153(1)(a) — Tax to be withheld at source.

(5) Non-application of s. 68 — If this subsection applies in respect of a restrictive covenant granted by a taxpayer, section 68 does not apply to deem consideration to be received or receivable by the taxpayer for the restrictive covenant.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 56.4(5) provides that, in respect of a restrictive covenant granted by a taxpayer, section 68 does not apply to deem consideration to be received or receivable by the taxpayer for the restrictive covenant. There are four cases in which subsection 56.4(5) may apply, which are more fully described below in the notes accompanying new subsections 56.4(6), (7), (8) and (8.1).

Related Provisions: 56.4(6)–(9), (11) — Conditions for 56.4(5) to apply; 56.4(13) — Effect of 56.4(5) applying.

(6) Application of subsec. (5) — if employee provides covenant — Subsection (5) applies to a restrictive covenant if

(a) the restrictive covenant is granted by an individual to another taxpayer with whom the individual deals at arm's length (referred to in this subsection as the "purchaser");

(b) the restrictive covenant directly relates to the acquisition from one or more other persons (in this subsection and subsection (13) referred to as the "vendors") by the purchaser of an interest, or for civil law purposes a right, in the individual's employer, in a corporation related to that employer or in a business carried on by that employer;

(c) the individual deals at arm's length with the employer and with the vendors;

(d) the restrictive covenant is an undertaking by the individual not to provide, directly or indirectly, property or services in competition with property or services provided or to be provided by the purchaser (or by a person related to the purchaser) in the course of carrying on the business to which the restrictive covenant relates;

(e) no proceeds are received or receivable by the individual for granting the restrictive covenant; and

(f) the amount that can reasonably be regarded to be consideration for the restrictive covenant is received or receivable only by the vendors.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 56.4(6) provides a set of conditions that, if met, result in subsection 56.4(5) applying with respect to a restrictive covenant granted by an individual — with the result that section 68 does not apply to deem consideration to be received or receivable by the individual for granting the restrictive covenant. This is the case if all of the following conditions exist:

- The individual grants a restrictive covenant to another taxpayer with whom the individual deals at arm's length (referred to as the "purchaser").
- The restricted covenant directly relates to the acquisition from one or more other persons (referred to as the "vendors") by the purchaser of an interest in the individual's employer, in a corporation related to that employer or in the business carried on by that employer.
- The individual deals at arm's length with the employer and with the vendors.
- The restrictive covenant is an undertaking of the individual not to provide, directly or indirectly, property or services in competition with the property or services provided or to be provided by the purchaser (or by a person related to the purchaser) in the course of carrying on the business to which the restrictive covenant relates.
- No proceeds are received or receivable by the individual for granting the restrictive covenant.
- The amount that can reasonably be regarded to be consideration for the restrictive covenant is received or receivable only by the vendors.

Related Provisions: 56.4(13)(a) — Effect of para. (f) applying.

(7) Application of subsec. (5) — goodwill amount — Subject to subsection (11), subsection (5) applies to a restrictive covenant if

(a) the restrictive covenant is granted by a taxpayer (in this subsection and subsection (13) referred to as the "vendor") to another taxpayer with whom the vendor deals at arm's length (referred to in this subsection as the "purchaser");

(b) the restrictive covenant is an undertaking of the vendor not to provide, directly or indirectly, property or services in competition with the property or services provided or to be provided by the purchaser (or by a person related to the purchaser) in the course of carrying on the business to which the restrictive covenant relates;

(c) no proceeds are received or receivable by the vendor for granting the restrictive covenant;

(d) the amount that can reasonably be regarded as being the consideration for the restrictive covenant is

(i) included by the vendor in computing a goodwill amount of the vendor, or

(ii) received or receivable by a corporation that was an eligible corporation of the vendor when the restrictive covenant was granted and included by the eligible corporation in computing a goodwill amount of the eligible corporation in respect of the business to which the restrictive covenant relates;

(e) the restrictive covenant may reasonably be considered to have been granted to maintain or preserve the value of

(i) goodwill acquired by the purchaser from the vendor, or

(ii) goodwill acquired by the purchaser from the vendor's eligible corporation; and

(f) neither section 85 nor subsection 97(2) applies to the disposition of the goodwill by the vendor or the vendor's eligible corporation;

(g) no portion of the amount of consideration that can reasonably be regarded as being in part the consideration for the restrictive covenant is received or receivable, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, by an individual (in this subsection and subsection (9) referred to as the "non-arm's length individual") with whom the vendor does not deal at arm's length or by another taxpayer in which the non-arm's length individual holds, directly or indirectly, an interest, or for civil law purposes a right; and

(h) the vendor and the purchaser or, if subparagraph (d)(ii) applies, the vendor, the eligible corporation and the purchaser, jointly elect in prescribed form to apply subsection (5) to the restrictive covenant.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 56.4(7) provides a set of conditions that, if met, result in subsection 56.4(5) applying with respect to a restrictive covenant granted by a taxpayer — with the result that section 68 does not apply to deem consideration to be received or receivable by a taxpayer for granting the restrictive covenant. This is the case if all of the following conditions exist:

- The restrictive covenant is granted by a taxpayer (the "vendor") to another taxpayer with whom the vendor deals with at arm's length (the "purchaser").
- The restrictive covenant is an undertaking of the vendor not to provide, directly or indirectly, property or services in competition with the property or services provided or to be provided by the purchaser (or by a persons related to the purchaser) in the course of carrying on the business to which the restrictive covenant relates.
- No proceeds are received or receivable by the vendor for granting the restrictive covenant.
- The amount that can reasonably be regarded as being consideration for the restrictive covenant is - included by the vendor in computing a goodwill amount of the vendor, or
  - received or receivable by a corporation that was an eligible corporation of the vendor when the restrictive covenant was granted and is included by that corporation in computing a goodwill amount in respect of the business to which the restrictive covenant relates.
- The restrictive covenant may reasonably be considered to have been granted to maintain or preserve the value of the goodwill acquired by the purchaser.
- The disposition of the goodwill amount cannot be the subject matter of a rollover under section 85 or subsection 97(2).
- No portion of the consideration for the restrictive covenant can be received or receivable by an individual with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length (the "non-arm's length individual"), or by another taxpayer in which the non-arm's length individual holds, directly or indirectly, an interest. If this condition is not satisfied, the taxpayer may be eligible to elect eligible capital gain receipt treatment under new subsection 56.4(9) in respect of the consideration received by the non-arm's length individual or by the other taxpayer.

- The vendor and the purchaser, or the vendor, the eligible corporation and the purchaser, as the case may be, jointly elect in prescribed form to apply subsection (5) to the restrictive covenant. The note accompanying new subsection 56.4(14) provides further details with respect to filing an election.

In general, if subsection (7) applies to a vendor who grants a restrictive covenant that directly relates to a transfer of goodwill by the vendor, no amount need be allocated to the restrictive covenant under section 68 provided the amount is included in the vendor's goodwill amount. Similarly, this exception may also apply to a vendor's grant of a restrictive covenant if it is the vendor's eligible corporation that transfers goodwill to which the restrictive covenant directly relates, provided the amount is included in computing the eligible corporation's goodwill amount.

Subsection 56.3(7) is, however, subject to new subsection 56.4(11) — discussed below in the accompanying note — which provides an anti-avoidance rule that, if applicable, results in the non application of subsection 56.4(7).

Related Provisions: 56.4(9) — Election to deem portion of consideration to be capital gain; 56.4(11) — Anti avoidance rule; 56.4(13)(b) - - Effect of para. (d) applying; 56.4(14) — Filing of prescribed form for para. (h).

(8) Application of subsec. (5) — disposition of property — Subject to subsection (11), subsection (5) applies to a restrictive covenant granted by a taxpayer if

(a) the restrictive covenant is granted by the taxpayer (in this subsection and subsection (13) referred to as the "vendor") to another taxpayer (in this subsection referred to as the "purchaser") with whom the vendor deals at arm's length (determined without reference to paragraph 251(5)(b));

(b) the restrictive covenant is an undertaking of the vendor not to provide, directly or indirectly, property or services in competition with the property or services provided or to be provided by the purchaser (or by a person related to the purchaser) in the course of carrying on the business to which the restrictive covenant relates;

(c) it is reasonable to conclude that the restrictive covenant is integral to an agreement in writing

(i) under which the vendor disposes of property (other than property to which subparagraph (ii) applies) to the purchaser for consideration that is received or receivable by the vendor, or

(ii) under which shares of the capital stock of a corporation (in this subsection and subsections (9) and (13) referred to as the "target corporation") are disposed of to the purchaser;

(d) where subparagraph (c)(i) applies, the consideration that can reasonably be regarded as being in part the consideration for the restrictive covenant is received or receivable by the vendor as consideration for the disposition of the property except that, if all or a part of the consideration can reasonably be regarded as being for a disposition that is described in the description of E in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5), subsection (2), paragraph (3)(b), subsection (7) or paragraph (9)(b) is required to apply to that consideration;

(e) where subparagraph (c)(ii) applies, no portion of the amount of consideration that can reasonably be regarded as being in part the consideration for the restrictive covenant is received or receivable, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, by an individual (in this subsection and subsection (9) referred to as the "non-arm's length individual") with whom the vendor does not deal at arm's length or by another taxpayer in which the non-arm's length individual holds, directly or indirectly, an interest, or for civil law purposes a right;

(f) subsection 84(3) does not apply to the disposition;

(g) neither section 85 nor subsection 97(2) applies to the disposition;

(h) no proceeds are received or receivable by the vendor for granting the restrictive covenant; and

(i) the restrictive covenant can reasonably be regarded to have been granted to maintain or preserve the fair market value of the property disposed of to the purchaser or of the shares of the target corporation disposed of to the purchaser.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 56.4(8) provides a set of conditions that, if met, result in subsection 56.4(5) applying with respect to a restrictive covenant granted by a taxpayer — with the result that section 68 does not apply to deem consideration to be received or receivable by a taxpayer for granting the restrictive covenant. This is the case if all of the following conditions exist:

- The restrictive covenant is granted by a taxpayer (the "vendor") to another taxpayer with whom the vendor deals with at arm's length (the "purchaser").
- The restrictive covenant is an undertaking of the vendor not to provide, directly or indirectly, property or services in competition with the property or services provided or to be provided by the purchaser (or by a persons related to the purchaser) in the course of carrying on the business to which the restrictive covenant relates.
- It is reasonable to conclude that the restrictive covenant is integral to an agreement in writing:
  - Under which the vendor disposes of property (other than shares of a target corporation, which are referred to below) to the purchaser for consideration that is received or receivable by the vendor. If this is the case, the consideration that can reasonably be regarded as being for the restrictive covenant must be received or receivable by the vendor as consideration for the disposition of the property, except that, where the consideration can reasonably be regarded as being for a disposition described in the description of E in the definition of "cumulative eligible capital", subsection (2), paragraph (3)(b), subsection (7) or paragraph (9)(b) applies to that consideration. In essence, the exception in subsection 56.4(8) is not meant to apply to consideration that is an eligible capital receipt or similar consideration to which another provision of section 56.4 applies and subsection (8) does not apply, if there is such consideration, unless one of those other provisions applies to that consideration.
  - Under which shares of a corporation (the "target corporation") are disposed of to the purchaser. If this is the case, while the consideration that can reasonably be regarded as being for the restrictive covenant is not received or receivable by the vendor, no portion of that consideration may be received or receivable by an individual with whom the vendor does not deal at arm's length (the "non-arm's length individual") or by another taxpayer in which the non-arm's length individual holds, directly or indirectly, an interest. If this condition is not satisfied, the vendor may be eligible to elect capital gain treatment under new subsection 56.4(9) in respect of the consideration received by the non-arm's length individual or by the other taxpayer.
- In order to be able to add the restrictive covenant amount to the proceeds of disposition of property, the disposition cannot be a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of the share to which subsection 84(3) applies.
- The disposition of the property cannot be the subject matter of a rollover under section 85 or subsection 97(2).
- No proceeds are received or receivable by the vendor for granting the restrictive covenant.
- The restrictive covenant must be granted to maintain or preserve the fair market value of the vendor's property disposed of to the purchaser, or of the shares of the target corporation disposed of to the purchaser.

New subsection 56.4(8) is, however, subject to new subsection 56.4(11) — discussed below in the accompanying note — which provides an anti-avoidance rule that, if applicable, results in the non application of new subsection 56.4(8).

Related Provisions: 56.4(9) — Election to deem portion of consideration to be capital gain; 56.4(11) — Anti-avoidance rule; 56.4(13)(c) — Effect of para. (c) applying.

(8.1) Application of subsec. (5) — disposition of shares to an eligible person — Subject to subsection (11), subsection (5) applies to a restrictive covenant granted by an individual (in this subsection referred to as the "vendor") who is resident in Canada at the time of the grant if

(a) the restrictive covenant is granted by the vendor to an eligible person in respect of the vendor;

(b) the restrictive covenant is an undertaking of the vendor not to provide, directly or indirectly, property or services in competition with the property or services provided or to be provided by the eligible person (or by an eligible corporation of the eligible person) in the course of carrying on the business to which the restrictive covenant relates;

(c) it is reasonable to conclude that the restrictive covenant is integral to an agreement in writing under which shares of the capital stock of the vendor's eligible corporation (in this subsection and subsections (9) and (13) referred to as the "target corporation") are disposed of to the eligible person or to the eligible corporation of the eligible person;

(d) in the case where shares of the target corporation are disposed of to the eligible corporation of the eligible person, the vendor does not, at any time after the grant of the restrictive covenant and whether directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, have an interest, or for civil law purposes a right, in the target corporation or in the eligible corporation;

(e) no proceeds are received or receivable by the vendor for granting the restrictive covenant;

(f) no portion of the amount of consideration that can reasonably be regarded as being in part the consideration for the restrictive covenant (other than consideration to which paragraph (j) applies) is received or receivable, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, by an individual (in this subsection and subsection (9) referred to as the "non-arm's length individual") with whom the vendor does not deal at arm's length or by another taxpayer in which the non-arm's length individual holds, directly or indirectly, an interest or for civil law purposes a right;

(g) subsection 84(3) does not apply to the disposition;

(h) neither section 85 nor subsection 97(2) applies to the disposition;

(i) the restrictive covenant can reasonably be regarded to have been granted to maintain or preserve the fair market value of the shares of the target corporation disposed of to the eligible person or the eligible corporation of the eligible person; and

(j) for the purposes of applying section 69 to the disposition, the fair market value of the share is the amount that can reasonably be regarded as the fair market value of the share determined on the basis that the restrictive covenant is part of the share.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 56.4(8.1) provides a set of conditions that, if met, result in subsection 56.4(5) applying with respect to a restrictive covenant granted by an individual to an "eligible person" as defined by subsection (1) — with the result that section 68 does not apply to deem consideration to be received or receivable by the individual for granting the restrictive covenant. This is the case if all of the following conditions exist:

- The restrictive covenant is granted by an individual (the "vendor") who is resident in Canada at the time of the grant to the eligible person.
- The restrictive covenant is an undertaking of the vendor not to provide, directly or indirectly, property or services in competition with the property or services provided or to be provided by the purchaser (or by a persons related to the purchaser) in the course of carrying on the business to which the restrictive covenant relates.
- It is reasonable to conclude that the restrictive covenant is integral to an agreement in writing under which the vendor disposes of shares of the vendor's eligible corporation (the "target corporation") to an eligible person in respect of the vendor in circumstances where the target corporation, or an eligible corporation of the eligible person, carries on the business to which the restrictive covenant relates.
- In a case where shares of the target corporation are disposed of to an eligible corporation of the eligible person, the vendor does not retain a direct or indirect interest (in any manner whatever) in the target corporation, or in the eligible person's eligible corporation, that carries on the business to which the restrictive covenant relates.
- No proceeds are received or receivable by the vendor for granting the restrictive covenant.
- No portion of the consideration is received or receivable by an individual with whom the vendor does not deal at arm's length (the "non-arm's length individual") or by another taxpayer in which the non-arm's length individual holds, directly or indirectly, an interest. If this condition is not satisfied, the vendor may be eligible to elect under new subsection 56.4(9) in respect of the consideration received by the non-arm's length individual or by the other taxpayer.
- In order to be able to add the restrictive covenant amount to the proceeds of disposition of target shares, the disposition cannot be a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of target shares to which subsection 84(3) applies.
- The disposition of the target shares cannot be the subject matter of a rollover under section 85 or subsection 97(2).
- The restrictive covenant must be granted to maintain or preserve the fair market value of the vendor's property disposed of to the purchaser, or of the shares of the target corporation disposed of to the purchaser.
- For the purposes of applying section 69 to the disposition of the target shares, the fair market value of the shares is to be determined on the basis that the restrictive covenant is part of the share.

New subsection 56(8.1) is, however, subject to new subsection 56.4(11) — discussed below in the accompanying note — which provides an anti-avoidance rule that, if applicable, results in the non application of new subsection 56(8.1).

(9) To extent s. 68 applies — capital gain election — If subsection (7) does not apply to a taxpayer's grant of a restrictive covenant solely because the condition in paragraph (7)(g) has not been satisfied, if subsection (8) does not apply solely because the condition in paragraph (8)(e) has not been satisfied, or if subsection (8.1) does not apply solely because the condition in paragraph (8.1)(f) has not been satisfied,

(a) to the extent that the consideration that can reasonably be regarded as being in part the consideration for the restrictive covenant granted by the taxpayer is received or receivable by one or more non-arm's length individuals and taxpayers in which one or more non-arm's length individuals hold, directly or indirectly, an interest, or for civil law purposes a right, (in this subsection referred to as the "allocable portion"), section 68 applies only to that allocable portion;

(b) except to the extent that an allocable portion is received or receivable by an eligible corporation of the vendor referred to in subsection (8.1), a joint election may be filed in prescribed form by the taxpayer and each non-arm's length individual and any other taxpayer referred to in paragraph (a) to deem the portion of the allocable portion that would otherwise be considered by section 68 to be received or receivable in a taxation year by the taxpayer for granting the restrictive covenant to be received or receivable in the taxation year by the taxpayer

(i) as a goodwill amount, if paragraph (7)(g) has not been satisfied, and

(ii) as proceeds of disposition from the disposition of property, if paragraph (8)(e) or (8.1)(f) has not been satisfied;

(c) if paragraph (b) applies to deem consideration to be received or receivable in the taxation year by the taxpayer, except for the purpose of applying this subsection, that consideration is considered not to be received or receivable by each of the non-arm's length individuals and other taxpayers who make the joint election with the taxpayer;

(d) if paragraph (b) applies to deem consideration to be received or receivable in a taxation year by the taxpayer and the consideration is actually received or receivable by another taxpayer referred to in that paragraph that is a corporation, partnership or trust, that consideration is deemed to have been received by the corporation, partnership or trust, as the case may be, as an agent of the taxpayer to the extent that the amount designated in the election is transferred to the taxpayer within 180 days from the date of receipt;

(e) to the extent that an allocable portion is received or receivable by an eligible corporation of the vendor referred to in subsection (8.1), a joint election may be filed in prescribed form by the eligible corporation and the vendor to deem the portion of the allocable portion that is considered by section 68 to be received or receivable in a taxation year by the vendor, and which is actually received or receivable by the eligible corporation, to be received or receivable by the eligible corporation as the agent of the vendor, to the extent that the amount designated in the election is transferred to the vendor within 180 days from the date of receipt and is, or has been, included in computing the vendor's income pursuant to subsection (2);

(f) for greater certainty, the outlay to the purchaser for the goodwill amount referred to in subsection (7), the cost of the property referred to in subsection (8) or the cost of the shares of the target corporation referred to in subsection (8.1), as the case may be, does not differ from the amount that those amounts would have been if subsection (7), (8) or (8.1) had applied to all of the consideration paid or payable by the purchaser to the non-arm's length individuals and other taxpayers.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 56.4(9) provides rules that apply if section 68 applies to a taxpayer's grant of a restrictive covenant solely because all or a portion of the consideration in respect of the restrictive covenant is received or receivable by a non-arm's length individual, or by another taxpayer in which the non-arm's length individual holds, directly or indirectly, an interest. The following rules may apply where the reason section 68 applies is solely because paragraph 174(1)(b), (b.0) or (b.1)(ii) has not been met.

First, paragraph 56.4(9)(a) provides that section 68 applies solely to consideration received or receivable by the non-arm's length individuals and any other taxpayer in which those individuals hold, directly or indirectly, an interest. This amount, if any, is referred to as the "allocable portion".

Second, paragraph 56.4(9)(b) provides for a joint election in respect of the allocable portion referred to in paragraph (9)(a). Under the election the allocable portion is deemed to be received by the taxpayer granting the restrictive covenant as a goodwill amount, or as proceeds from the disposition of property, based on which provision has (if both were satisfied so as to render section 68 applicable. This treatment applies only to the extent that an allocable portion is not received or receivable by an eligible corporation of the vendor referred to in subsection (8.1).

Third, paragraph 56.4(9)(c) provides that the consideration deemed under paragraph 56.4(9)(a) to be received by the grantor of the restrictive covenant is considered not to be received by the non-arm's length individuals or other taxpayers who make the joint election with the grantor.

Fourth, paragraph 56.4(9)(d) provides that an amount deemed by paragraph (a) to be received or receivable by a taxpayer who granted a restrictive covenant — where the amount is actually received by another taxpayer that is a corporation, partnership or trust — is considered to be received by such other person as an agent of the taxpayer. This treatment applies only if the consideration is transferred by the "agent" to the taxpayer within 180 days of it being received by the "agent".

Fifth, paragraph 56.4(9)(e) provides a special rule that applies to the extent that an allocable portion is received or receivable by an eligible corporation of the individual who is the vendor of a restrictive covenant under new subsection 56.4(8.1). In such cases, the eligible corporation is considered to be the agent of the individual for the portion of the allocable consideration that is deemed to be received or receivable by the individual pursuant to section 68. This treatment applies only if the amount designated in the election is transferred by the corporation within 180 days from the date of receipt to the individual and the amount is, or has been, included in the individual's income pursuant to subsection (2).

Sixth, paragraph 56.4(9)(f) clarifies that the purchaser's outlay for the property acquired does not differ from what it would be if subsections 56.4(7), (8) or (8.1) had applied to all of the consideration paid or payable for the property by the purchaser to the non-arm's length individuals or other taxpayers referred to in paragraph 56.4(9)(a).

New subsection 56.4(9) is, however, subject to new subsection 56.4(11) — discussed below in the accompanying note — which provides an anti-avoidance rule that, if applicable, results in the non-application of new subsection 56.4(9).

Related Provisions: 56.4(11) — Anti-avoidance rule; 56.4(14) — Filing of prescribed form for para. (b).

(10) Anti-avoidance rule — non-application of para. (3)(c) — Paragraph (3)(c) does not apply to an amount that would, if this Act were read without reference to subsections (2) to (15), be included in computing a taxpayer's income from a source that is an office or employment or a business or property under paragraph 3(a).

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 56.4(10) provides an anti-avoidance rule that, if applicable, denies an election under paragraph 56.4(3)(c) that would have allowed a taxpayer to treat certain amounts that can reasonably be regarded as being for granting a restrictive covenant as proceeds of disposition in respect of an eligible interest. Subsection 56.4(10) applies — and paragraph 56.4(3)(c) does not apply — to an amount received by a taxpayer for granting a restrictive covenant if the amount would, if the Act were read without reference to section 56.4 (other than the definition in subsection 56.4(1)), be included in computing a taxpayer's income from a source that is an office or employment or a business or property.

New subsection 56.4(10) is meant to preclude elections under paragraph 56.4(3)(c) from applying to consideration in respect of a restrictive covenant that is taxable as ordinary income. For example, paragraph 56.4(3)(c) does not apply to consideration reasonably by an employee/shareholder that can reasonably be regarded under section 68 to be receivable for a covenant to which subsection 6(3) applies.

(11) Anti-avoidance — non-application of subsecs. (7), (8), (8.1) and (9) — Subsections (7), (8), (8.1) and (9) do not apply in respect of a taxpayer's grant of a restrictive covenant if one of the results of not applying section 68 to the consideration received or receivable in respect of the taxpayer's grant of the restrictive covenant would be that paragraph 3(a) would not apply to consideration that would, if this Act were read without reference to subsections (2) to (15), be included in computing a taxpayer's income from a source that is an office or employment or a business or property.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 56.4(11) provides an anti-avoidance rule that overrides the exceptions to the application of section 68 that are found in subsections 56.4(7) to (9). Subsection 56.4(11) applies, and as a result section 68 applies, to consideration that can reasonably be regarded as being for a restrictive covenant if one of the results of not applying section 68 to the consideration would be that the consideration would not be included in computing a taxpayer's income from a source that is an office or employment or a business or property.

New subsection 56.4(11) is meant to preclude subsections (7) to (9) from applying to consideration in respect of a restrictive covenant that is taxable as income under paragraph 3(a) of the Act. For example, if a taxpayer were to grant a restrictive covenant to a purchaser in circumstances where another taxpayer disposes of shares to the purchaser, section 68 would apply to the consideration that can reasonably be regarded as being for the restrictive covenant if that consideration would be income to the other taxpayer — which would be the case, for example, if those shares were held by the other taxpayer on income account. As a result, the taxpayer granting the restrictive covenant would be required to apply subsection 56.4(2) to the consideration deemed by section 68 to have been received by the taxpayer for the covenant when computing income.

(12) Clarification if subsec. (2) applies — where another person receives the amount — For greater certainty, if subsection (2) applies to include in computing a taxpayer's income an amount received or receivable by another taxpayer, that amount is not to be included in computing the income of that other taxpayer.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 56.4(12) provides that, for greater certainty, if subsection (2) applies to include in computing a taxpayer's income an amount received or receivable by another taxpayer, the amount is not to be included in computing the income of that other taxpayer.

(13) Clarification if subsec. (5) applies — For greater certainty, if subsection (5) applies in respect of a restrictive covenant

(a) the amount referred to in paragraph (6)(f) is to be added in computing the amount received or receivable by the vendors as consideration for the disposition of the interest or right referred to in paragraph (6)(b);

(b) the amount that could reasonably be regarded as consideration referred to in subparagraph (7)(d)(i) or (ii), as the case may be, is to be added in computing

(i) the amount that is required by the description of E in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5) to be included in computing the cumulative eligible capital of a business carried on by the vendor through a permanent establishment located in Canada, or

(ii) the amount that is required by the description of E in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5) to be included in computing the cumulative eligible capital of a business carried on by the eligible corporation through a permanent establishment located in Canada;

(c) the amount that can reasonably be regarded as being in part consideration received or receivable for a restrictive covenant to which subsection (5) applies because of subsection (8) or subsection (8.1) is to be added in computing the consideration

(i) if subparagraph (8)(c)(i) applies, that is received or receivable by the vendor from the disposition of the property, and

(ii) if subparagraph (8)(c)(ii) or subsection (8.1) applies, that is received or receivable by each taxpayer who disposes of shares of the target corporation to the extent that consideration is received or receivable by that taxpayer.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 56.4(13) provides that, if subsection 56.4(5) applies in respect of restrictive covenant granted by a taxpayer (that is, section 68 does not apply to allocate consideration to the taxpayer's grant of a restrictive covenant), for greater certainty

- The amount referred to in paragraph 56.4(6)(f) — that is, the amount received by vendors other than the taxpayer — is to be added in computing the amount received or receivable by those vendors as consideration for the disposition of the interest referred to in paragraph 56.4(6)(b)

- The amount referred to in paragraph 56.4(7)(d) — that is, the amount that could reasonably be regarded as consideration for the restrictive covenant that was included in the taxpayer's income as a goodwill amount, or in the taxpayer's eligible corporation as a goodwill amount — is to be added in computing the taxpayer's or the eligible corporation's cumulative eligible capital, as the case may be.

- The amounts referred to in subparagraph (8)(c) and subsection (8.1) — in general, the amount that could reasonably be regarded as consideration for the restrictive covenant that was received or receivable as proceeds for the disposed of property — is to be added in computing the consideration receivable for disposing of the property.

(14) Filing of prescribed form — For the purpose of paragraphs (3)(b) and (c), (7)(h) and (9)(b) and (9)(e), an election in prescribed form filed under any of those provisions is to include a copy of the restrictive covenant and be filed

(a) if the person who granted the restrictive covenant is a person resident in Canada when the restrictive covenant was granted, by the person with the Minister on or before the person's filing-due date for the taxation year that includes the day on which the restrictive covenant was granted; and

(b) in any other case, with the Minister on or before the day that is six months after the day on which the restrictive covenant is granted.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 56.4(14) provides that a joint election in prescribed form filed under paragraph 56.4(3)(b) and (c) or under paragraphs 56.4(7)(h) and (9)(b) is to include a copy of the restrictive covenant, and be filed

- if the person who agreed to the restrictive covenant is a person resident in Canada when the restrictive covenant was granted, by that person with the Minister on or before that person's filing due-date for the taxation year that includes the day on which the restrictive covenant was granted, and

- in any other case, with the Minister on or before the day that is six months after the day on which the restrictive covenant was granted.

However, such an election is deemed to be filed on a timely basis if it is filed on or before the day that is 180 days after the day this provision is assented to.

(15) Non-application of s. 42 — Section 42 does not apply to an amount received or receivable as consideration for a restrictive covenant.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 56.4(15) provides that section 42 does not apply to an amount received or receivable as consideration for a restrictive covenant.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 27, will add s. 56.4, applicable (subject to the proviso below) to

(a) amounts received or receivable by a taxpayer after October 7, 2003 other than to amounts received by the taxpayer before 2005 under a grant of a restrictive covenant made in writing on or before October 7, 2003 between the taxpayer and a purchaser with whom the taxpayer deals at arm's length; and

(b) amounts paid or payable by a purchaser after October 7, 2003 other than to amounts paid or payable by the purchaser before 2005 under a grant of a restrictive covenant made in writing on or before October 7, 2003 between the purchaser and a taxpayer with whom the purchaser deals at arm's length.

For the purpose of applying s. 56.4 to a restrictive covenant granted by a taxpayer before November 9, 2006,

(a) the definition "restrictive covenant" in subsec. 56.4(1) is to be read as follows:

"restrictive covenant", of a taxpayer, means an agreement entered into, an undertaking made, or a waiver of an advantage or right by the taxpayer, whether legally enforceable or not, that affects, or is intended to affect, in any way whatever, the acquisition or provision of property or services by the taxpayer or by another taxpayer that does not deal at arm's length with the taxpayer, other than an agreement or undertaking

(a) to dispose of the taxpayer's property; or

(b) in satisfaction of an obligation described in section 49.1 that is not a disposition.

(b) para. 56.4(3)(c) applies as enacted unless the taxpayer elects, no later than 180 days after Royal Assent, by filing with the Minister of National Revenue an election in writing that this paragraph apply, in which case para. 56.4(3)(c) shall be read in respect of the restrictive covenant as follows:

(c) the amount directly relates to the particular taxpayer's disposition of property that is, at the time of the disposition, an eligible interest in the partnership or corporation that carries on the business to which the restrictive covenant relates, or that is at that time an eligible interest by virtue of paragraph (c) of the definition "eligible interest" where the other corporation referred to in that paragraph carries on the business to which the restrictive covenant relates, and

(i) the disposition is to the purchaser (or to a person related to the purchaser),

(ii) the amount is consideration for an undertaking by the particular taxpayer not to provide, directly or indirectly, property or services in competition with the property or services provided or to be provided by the purchaser (or by a person related to the purchaser),

(iii) the amount does not exceed the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount that would be the fair market value of the particular taxpayer's eligible interest that is disposed of if all restrictive covenants that may reasonably be considered to relate to a disposition of an interest, or for civil law purposes a right, in the business by any taxpayer were provided for no consideration, and

B is the amount that would be the fair market value of the particular taxpayer's eligible interest that is disposed of if no covenant were granted by any taxpayer that held an interest, or for civil law purposes a right, in the business,

(iv) if the restrictive covenant is granted on or after July 18, 2005, subsection 84(3) does not apply to the disposition,

(v) the amount is added to the particular taxpayer's proceeds of disposition, as defined by section 54, for the purpose of applying this Act to the disposition of the particular taxpayer's eligible interest, and

(vi) the particular taxpayer and the purchaser elect in prescribed form to apply this paragraph in respect of the amount.

(c) subsec. 56.4(7) is to be read without reference to paras. (f) and (g);

(d) s. 56.4 is to be read without reference to subsecs. (10) and (11) in respect of restrictive covenants granted before November 9, 2006; and

(e) for the purpose of applying s. 56.4 to a restrictive covenant, an election referred to in subsec. 56.4(14) is deemed to be filed on a timely basis if it is filed on or before the later of the day that it is otherwise required to be filed and the day that is 180 days after Royal Assent;

(f) for the purpose of applying s. 56.4 to a restrictive covenant granted by a taxpayer on or before July 16, 2010,

(i) para. 56.4(8)(d) is to be read as follows:

(d) where subparagraph (c)(i) applies, the consideration that can reasonably be regarded as being in part the consideration for the restrictive covenant is received or receivable by the vendor as consideration for the disposition of the property;

(ii) subsec. 56.4(8) is to be read without reference to its para. (h).

Dept. of Finance news release 2003-049, Oct. 7, 2003: Minister Manley Proposes Amendments to the Tax Treatment of Restrictive Covenants

John Manley, Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance, today announced his intention to propose amendments to the Income Tax Act affecting the income tax treatment of amounts received or receivable by a taxpayer for granting a restrictive covenant.

The proposed amendments respond to recent Federal Court of Appeal decisions [Fortino, [2000] 1 C.T.C. 349, and Manrell, [2003] 3 C.T.C. 50 – ed.], which held that amounts receivable by a vendor on the sale of shares of a corporation, for an agreement not to compete with the business carried on by the corporation, were generally not taxable. The proposed amendments would alter this result and, subject to an exception described below, would treat any amount receivable in respect of a restrictive covenant as ordinary income for income tax purposes.

The proposed amendments include an exception to ordinary income treatment in circumstances where proceeds are receivable by a taxpayer in respect of an arm's length disposition of shares in a corporation, and other proceeds are receivable by the taxpayer for a restrictive covenant relating to the business carried on by the corporation. In these cases, the amount receivable for the covenant may be treated as part of the proceeds for the disposition of the shares, to the extent that the covenant increases the fair market value of the shares. Only the portion of the amount receivable for the covenant that is in excess of that treated as share proceeds will be taxable as ordinary income. This mechanism, which is described in more detail in the attached backgrounder, will also apply to dispositions of partnership interests.

These proposals will apply to amounts received or receivable after today, other than to amounts received before 2005 pursuant to a written agreement made on or before today between parties dealing at arm's length.

For further information: Andrée Houde, Public Affairs and Operations Division, (613) 996-8080; Mike Scandiffio, Communications Advisor, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance (613) 996-7861; Kerry Harnish, Tax Legislation Division, (613) 992-4385.

Backgrounder: Under the proposals announced today, amounts receivable for granting a restrictive covenant (that is not treated as a disposition of property for income tax purposes) will be taxable as ordinary income. However, exceptions will apply to amounts receivable for a restrictive covenant granted in the context of the sale of a business, either directly or indirectly through the sale of the shares of a corporation or an interest in a partnership.

In circumstances where a proprietor sells a business, an amount receivable by the proprietor for the goodwill of the business (eligible capital property) is generally taxable on capital account as an eligible capital receipt. This will generally also include situations where a restrictive covenant is provided for no consideration by a vendor to ensure that the value of that goodwill is not undermined by subsequent actions of the vendor.

Treatment on capital account may apply if a taxpayer sells shares of a corporation or an interest in a partnership to a party dealing at arm's length, and an amount is receivable by the taxpayer for granting a restrictive covenant (that is not property) relating to a business carried on by the corporation or the partnership. In these circumstances, the amount receivable by the taxpayer will be taxable on capital account to the extent that the taxpayer's share or partnership interest being disposed of would increase in value (when compared to a sale in which the taxpayer does not grant a covenant) if no amount were payable for the covenant. To that extent, the amount will be treated as additional sales proceeds from the disposition of the shares or partnership interest.

Where an amount is paid for a restrictive covenant in conjunction with the acquisition of a business, or of a share or partnership interest, the payer of the amount will be allowed to include the payment in the cost of the eligible capital expenditure or share/partnership interest.

Example:

Assumed facts:

- Terence and Isabelle each own 50 of 100 common shares of X Ltd., which carries on a business. The adjusted cost base of their shares is nil.
- In 2004, a person with whom they deal at arm's length, Y Ltd., offers to acquire all of the shares of X Ltd. for $2 million provided Terence (who has been much more closely involved in the management and operations of X Ltd.'s business) agrees not to compete with the business of Y Ltd. and X Ltd. after the sale. If no covenant is provided, Y Ltd. will pay $1.8 million. Terence and Isabelle agree to accept the offer to sell X Ltd., with the proceeds broken down as follows: $1.8 million for shares ($18,000 a share) plus $200,000 for Terence's covenant not to compete after the sale.
- Of total amounts payable to Terence and Isabelle, Terence will receive total proceeds of $1.1 million ($900,000 for shares and $200,000 for his covenant) and Isabelle will receive $900,000.

Application of proposed rules:

To Isabelle:

Because no proceeds were receivable by Isabelle for a restrictive covenant with respect to the business of X Ltd., her $900,000 in proceeds relate solely to the disposition of her shares of X Ltd.

1. Capital gain = $900,000 ($900,000 proceeds less nil adjusted cost base).

2. Ordinary income from covenant = Nil.

To Terence:

Because Terence will receive $200,000 for his restrictive covenant, he may add a portion of those proceeds to the $900,000 he is to receive for the sale of his shares of X Ltd. The portion of the $200,000 that can be added to those share proceeds is the amount by which the value of his share interest would increase if the covenant were provided for no consideration (when compared to the value of those shares if no covenant were provided).

1. Capital gain = $1,000,000 ($1,000,000 of proceeds less nil adjusted cost base).

   where proceeds of disposition are:

   - $900,000 in proceeds of disposition for shares of X Ltd.

   plus

   - $100,000 of the covenant's proceeds (which can be added to the proceeds of disposition from the sale of the shares), determined as follows:

     i. $200,000 (amount receivable)

     ii. $100,000 (value by which Terence's share interest in X Ltd. would increase if covenant were provided for no consideration when compared with a sale in which no covenant is granted), computed as follows:

     To the extent

     - $1 million (50% of $2 million if covenant for no consideration)

     exceeds

     - $900,000 (50% of $1.8 million if no covenant granted).

2. Ordinary income = $100,000 ($200,000 less $100,000 allocated to proceeds of disposition for the shares).

(b) that the total of the amounts paid by the taxpayer into or under the fund or plan during the period when its income was exempt by reason of that election together with simple interest on each amount so paid from the end of the year of payment thereof to the commencement of the superannuation allowance or pension at 3% per annum is of the total of all amounts paid by the taxpayer into or under the fund or plan together with simple interest, computed in the same manner, on each amount so paid,

Related Provisions: 57(2)–(4) — Exceptions and limitations; 212(1)(h)(iv) — Parallel exemption from non-resident withholding tax.

(2) Exception — This section does not apply in respect of a payment received by a taxpayer out of or under a superannuation or pension fund or plan if the taxpayer made no payment into or under the fund or plan.

(3) Limitation — Where a payment, to which subsection (1) would otherwise be applicable, is received by a taxpayer out of or under a superannuation or pension fund or plan in respect of a period of service for part only of which the taxpayer made payments into or under the fund or plan, subsection (1) is applicable only to that part of the payment which may reasonably be regarded as having been received in respect of the period for which the taxpayer made payments into or under the fund or plan and any part of the payment which may reasonably be regarded as having been received in respect of a period for which the taxpayer made no payments into or under the fund or plan shall be included in computing the taxpayer's income for the year without any deduction whatever.

(4) Certain payments from pension plan — Where a taxpayer, during the period from August 15, 1944 to December 31, 1945, made a contribution in excess of $300 to or under a registered pension plan in respect of services rendered by the taxpayer before the taxpayer became a contributor, there shall be included in computing the taxpayer's income in respect of a payment received by the taxpayer out of or under the plan only that part of the payment that remains after deducting the proportion thereof that the contribution so made minus $300 is of the total of the amounts paid by the taxpayer to or under the plan.

Related Provisions: 212(1)(h)(iv) — Parallel benefits — non-residents.

(5) Payments to widow, etc., of contributor — Where, in respect of the death of a taxpayer who was a contributor to or under a superannuation or pension fund or plan described in subsection (1) or (4), a payment is received by a person in a taxation year out of or under the fund or plan, there shall be included in computing the income of that person for the year in respect thereof only that part of the payment that would, if the payment had been received by the taxpayer in the year out of or under the fund or plan, have been included by virtue of this section in computing the income of the taxpayer for the year.

58. (1) Government annuities and like annuities — In determining the amount that shall be included in computing the income of a taxpayer in respect of payments received by the taxpayer in a taxation year under contracts entered into before May 26, 1932 with the Government of Canada or annuity contracts like those issued under the Government Annuities Act entered into before that day with the government of a province or a corporation incorporated or licensed to carry on an annuities business in Canada, there may be deducted from the total of the payments received the lesser of

(a) the total of the amounts that would have been so received if the contracts had continued in force as they were immediately before June 25, 1940, without the exercise of any option or contractual right to enlarge the annuity by the payment of additional sums or premiums unless those additional sums or premiums had been paid before that day, and

Related Provisions: 58(3) — Limitation; 58(4) — Capital element.

(2) Annuities before 1940 — In determining the amount that shall be included in computing the income of a taxpayer in respect of payments received by the taxpayer in a taxation year under annuity contracts entered into after May 25, 1932, and before June 25, 1940, with the Government of Canada or annuity contracts like those issued under the Government Annuities Act entered into during that period with the government of a province or a corporation incorporated or licensed to carry on an annuities business in Canada, there may be deducted from the total of the payments received the lesser of

(a) the total of the amounts that would have been received under the contracts if they had continued in force as they were immediately before June 25, 1940, without the exercise of any option or contractual right to enlarge the annuity by the payment of additional sums or premiums unless such additional sums or premiums had been paid before that day, and

(b) $1,200.

Related Provisions: 58(3) — Limitation; 58(4) — Capital element.

(3) Limitation — Where a taxpayer has received annuity payments in respect of which the taxpayer would otherwise be entitled to make deductions under both subsection (1) and subsection (2),

(a) if the amount deductible under subsection (1) is $1,200 or more, [the taxpayer] may not make a deduction under subsection (2); and

(b) if the amount deductible under subsection (1) is less than $1,200, the taxpayer may make one deduction computed as though subsection (2) applied to all contracts entered into before June 25, 1940.

Related Provisions: 58(4) — Capital element.

(4) Capital element — The amount remaining after deducting from the total of the annuity payments to which this section applies received in a taxation year the deductions permitted by subsection (1), (2) or (3) shall be deemed to be the annuity payment in respect of which the capital element is deductible under paragraph 60(a).

(5) Spouses [or common-law partners] — Where a taxpayer and the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner each received annuity payments in respect of which they may deduct amounts under this section, the amount deductible shall be computed as if their annuities belonged to one person and may be deducted by either of them or be apportioned between them in such manner as is agreed to by them or, in case of disagreement, as the Minister determines.

History: Subsec. 58(5) amended by 2000, c. 12, Sch. 2, s. 1, to replace "spouse" with "spouse or common-law partner", applicable to 2001 et seq., in force July 31, 2000. See also the transitional rules reproduced in the History to 248(1)"common-law partner".

(5) Husband and wife — Where a husband and wife have each received annuity payments in respect of which they may make a deduction under this section, the amount deductible shall be computed as if their annuities belonged to one person and may be deducted by either of them or apportioned between them in such manner as may be agreed by them or, in case of disagreement, as the Minister may determine.

(6) Pension benefits — This section does not apply to superannuation or pension benefits received out of or under a registered pension plan.

(7) Enlargement of annuity — For the purpose of this section, an annuity shall be deemed to have been enlarged on or after June 25, 1940, if what is payable under the contract has, at any such time, been increased whether by increasing the amount of each periodic payment, by increasing the number of payments or otherwise.

59. (1) Consideration for foreign resource property — Where a taxpayer has disposed of a foreign resource property, there shall be included in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year the amount, if any, by which

exceeds

(b) the total of

(i) all amounts each of which is an outlay or expense made or incurred by the taxpayer for the purpose of making the disposition that was not otherwise deductible for the purposes of this Part, and

History: Subsec. 59(1) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 40(1), applicable to taxation years that begin after 2000. It formerly read:

(1) Where a taxpayer has disposed of a foreign resource property, the amount, if any, by which the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition therefrom exceed any outlays or expenses made or incurred by the taxpayer for the purpose of making the disposition and that were not otherwise deductible for the purposes of this Part shall be included in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year to the extent that the proceeds become receivable in that year.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-125R4: Dispositions of resource property.

(1.1) Partnerships [look-through rule] — Where a taxpayer is a member of a partnership in a fiscal period of the partnership, the taxpayer's share of the amount that would be included under subsection (1) in respect of a disposition of a foreign resource property in computing the partnership's income for a taxation year if the partnership were a person, the fiscal period were a taxation year, subsection (1) were read without reference to subparagraph (1)(b)(ii) and section 96 were read without reference to paragraph 96(1)(d) is deemed to be proceeds of disposition that become receivable by the taxpayer at the end of the fiscal period in respect of a disposition of the property by the taxpayer.

Proposed Addition — 60(f)

(f) restrictive covenant — bad debt — all debts owing to a taxpayer that are established by the taxpayer to have become bad debts in the taxation year and that are in respect of an amount included because of the operation of subsection 6(3.1) or 56.4(2) in computing the taxpayer's income in a preceding taxation year;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 28(1), will add para. 60(f), applicable after October 7, 2003.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New paragraph 60(f) provides a taxpayer with a deduction for a bad debt in respect of an amount that was receivable on a restrictive covenant and previously included in computing the taxpayer's income because of new section 56.4 (or new subsection 6(3.1)).

(g)–(h) [Repealed under former Act]

Proposed Addition — 60(g)

(g) Quebec parental insurance plan — self-employed premiums — the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount payable by the taxpayer in respect of self-employed earnings for the taxation year as a premium under the Act respecting parental insurance R.S.Q., c. A-29.011, and

B is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount that would be payable by the taxpayer as an employee's premium under the Act respecting parental insurance R.S.Q., c. A-29.011 if those earnings were employment income of the taxpayer for the taxation year;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 28(1), will add para. 60(g), applicable to 2006 et seq.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New paragraph 60(g) provides for a deduction in computing the income of a taxpayer for a taxation year equal to the amount by which the amounts payable by the taxpayer in respect of self-employed earnings for the taxation year as a premium under the new Quebec Parental Insurance Plan exceeds the amounts that would be payable by the taxpayer as an employee's premium under that Plan for the taxation year if those earnings were employment income of the taxpayer.

The other portion of the premiums paid may be claimed as a credit under section 118.7 at the lowest marginal rate.

This amendment applies to the 2006 and subsequent taxation years and is consequential to the introduction of the new Quebec Parental Insurance Plan on January 1, 2006.

Possible Future Amendment — 60(l)(ii)(A)

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, Feb. 23, 2005: Registered Retirement Savings Plans and Registered Retirement Income Funds

Currently, financially-dependent children with mental or physical infirmities are eligible to receive, on a tax-deferred basis, a deceased parent's (or in the case of a child that is financially dependent on a grandparent, the deceased grandparent's) proceeds from a registered retirement savings plan (RRSP) or a registered retirement income fund (RRIF) if the funds are transferred to the child's RRSP or are used to purchase a life annuity. The Committee [Technical Advisory Committee on Tax Measures for Persons with Disabilities; see under 118.3(1) — ed.] recommended that the Government review these rules in order to allow more flexibility in respect of a deceased's RRSP or RRIF proceeds left to a financially-dependent child or grandchild with a disability and, in particular, that the use of a discretionary trust be permitted in these circumstances. The Government will review the tax rules in this area with a view to providing more flexibility where appropriate.

(II) for a term equal to 90 years minus the age in whole years of the taxpayer or the age in whole years of the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner, at the time the annuity was acquired, or

(B) under which the taxpayer, or a trust under which the taxpayer is the sole person beneficially interested in amounts payable under the annuity, is the annuitant for a term not exceeding 18 years minus the age in whole years of the taxpayer at the time the annuity was acquired

Proposed Amendment — 60(l)(ii)(B)

(B) under which the taxpayer is the annuitant for a term not exceeding 18 years minus the age in whole years of the taxpayer at the time the annuity was acquired

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 28(2), will amend cl. 60(l)(ii)(B) to read as above, applicable after 1988. (See 60.011.)

Technical Notes (July 2010): In circumstances where an individual has received (or is deemed to have received) certain taxable lump sum amounts from a registered retirement savings plan, a registered retirement income fund or a registered pension plan, paragraph 60(l) allows the individual to claim an offsetting deduction for qualifying payments (not exceeding the amounts so received) made by or on behalf of the individual.

If the individual is a minor and the taxable amount is received as a consequence of the death of a parent or grandparent on whom the minor was financially dependent, a payment made to acquire an immediate annuity payable for a fixed term not exceeding 18 years minus the age of the minor at the time of acquisition is a qualifying payment for the purpose of paragraph 60(l). Clause 60(l)(ii)(B) requires that the annuitant under the annuity be either the minor or a trust under which the minor is the sole person beneficially interested in amounts payable under the annuity.

Clause 60(l)(ii)(B) is amended to require that the minor be the annuitant under the annuity. This is consequential to the introduction of new section 60.011 which, among other things, allows this requirement in paragraph 60(l) to be disregarded, if the annuitant under the term annuity is a trust under which the minor is the sole person beneficially interested in amounts payable under the annuity. Section 60.011 also provides that, in determining if the minor is the sole person beneficially interested in amounts payable under the annuity, any right of a person to receive an amount from the trust only on or after the death of the minor is to be disregarded. Section 60.011 also introduces a requirement, applicable with respect to annuities acquired after 2005, that the annuity provide for commutation on the death of the minor. (Refer to the explanatory notes to new section 60.011 for further details.)

This amendment applies after 1988, which reflects the effective date of the amendment to paragraph 60(l) allowing a trust to be named as the annuitant.

Proposed Amendment — 60(l)(v)(B.1)(II)1

1. a payment (other than a payment that is part of a series of periodic payments or that relates to an actuarial surplus) received by the taxpayer out of or under a pooled registered pension plan, a registered pension plan or a specified pension plan,

Application: The December 14, 2011 draft legislation, s. 5, will amend sub-subcl. 60(l)(v)(B.1)(II)1 to read as above, in force or deemed in force on the day of the coming into force of S.C. 2012, c. 16 (Bill C-25, Royal Assent June 18, 2012), Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act.

Technical Notes: In circumstances where an individual has received (or is deemed to have received) certain taxable lump sum amounts from a registered retirement savings plan (RRSP), a registered retirement income fund (RRIF) or a registered pension plan (RPP), paragraph 60(l) allows the individual to claim an offsetting deduction for qualifying payments (not exceeding the amounts so received) made by or on behalf of the individual. If, as a consequence of the death of a parent or grandparent on whom a minor was financially dependent, the minor receives taxable proceeds from the deceased parent's (or grandparent's) RRSP, RRIF or RPP, a payment made to acquire an immediate annuity payable for a fixed term not exceeding 18 years minus the age of the minor at the time of acquisition is a qualifying payment for the purposes of paragraph 60(l).

Paragraph 60(l) is amended to generally permit a financially dependent minor child or grandchild of a deceased pooled registered pension plan member to take a deduction for any taxable amounts received from the PRPP (after the death) used to purchase a term (to age 18) annuity. Specifically, subclause 60(l)(v)(B.1)(II) is amended so that a lump sum death benefit received from a "pooled registered pension plan" is included in computing the limit on the deduction for the cost of acquiring the annuity.

For further information regarding PRPPs, please see the commentary on new section 147.5.

(III) the amount, if any, by which the amount determined for the year under subclause (II) in respect of the taxpayer exceeds the amount, if any, by which

1. the total of all designated benefits of the taxpayer for the year in respect of registered retirement income funds

exceeds

2. the total of all amounts that would be eligible amounts of the taxpayer for the year in respect of those funds (within the meaning that would be as-

exceeds

(II) the amount, if any, by which the minimum amount (within the meaning assigned by subsection 146.3(1)) under the fund for the year exceeds the total of all amounts received out of or under the fund in the year by an individual who was an annuitant under the fund before the taxpayer became the annuitant under the fund and that were included because of subsection 146.3(5) in computing that individual's income for the year, and

Proposed Addition — 60.011 — Rollover of RRSP to Henson trust

Technical Notes (July 2010): New section 60.011 contains special rules relating to the application of paragraph 60(l).

In circumstances where a taxpayer has received (or is deemed to have received), as a consequence of the death of a spouse or common-law partner or of a parent or a grandparent on whom the taxpayer was financially dependent, certain taxable lump sum amounts from a registered retirement savings plan (RRSP), registered retirement income fund (RRIF) or registered pension plan (RPP), paragraph 60(l) allows the taxpayer to claim an offsetting deduction for, among other things, a payment made by or on behalf of the taxpayer to acquire an immediate annuity that satisfies the requirements set out in that paragraph.

A taxpayer is deemed to have received an amount from an RRSP, RRIF or RPP when the amount is paid to the deceased individual's estate and an election in respect of the amount is made jointly by the taxpayer and the deceased individual's legal representative. These deeming provisions are found in subsections 104(27), 146(8.1) and 146.3(6.1) for RPPs, RRSPs and RRIFs respectively.

There are two types of annuity for which an offsetting deduction may be provided under paragraph 60(l).

- One type (referred to in these notes as a "life annuity") is an annuity that is payable for the life of the taxpayer (with or without a guaranteed period), or for a fixed term equal to 90 years minus the age of the taxpayer when the annuity is acquired, and under which the taxpayer is the annuitant. Where the taxpayer is a child or grandchild of the deceased individual, this type of annuity is available only if the taxpayer was dependent on the deceased individual by reason of physical or mental infirmity.
- The other type (referred to in these notes as a "minor term annuity") is an annuity payable for a fixed term not exceeding 18 years minus the age of the taxpayer when the annuity is acquired. For this type of annuity, the annuitant may be the taxpayer or a trust under which the taxpayer is the sole person beneficially interested in amounts payable under the annuity.

(Refer to subparagraph 60(l)(ii) for a complete description of the conditions applicable to these annuities.)

New section 60.011 contains provisions dealing with the application of paragraph 60(l) to a taxpayer in circumstances where a trust (under which the taxpayer is a beneficiary) is named as the annuitant under an annuity acquired with funds paid out of an RRSP, RRIF or RPP as a consequence of the death of a spouse, common-law partner, parent or grandparent of the taxpayer and included in the taxpayer's income. [This allows a rollover of RRSP proceeds to a Henson trust, which is a trust set up for a disabled child that does not cause the child to lose entitlement to social assistance — ed.] Section 60.011 incorporates the existing provision of paragraph 60(l) that allows a trust to be named the annuitant under a minor term annuity, and it allows a trust to be named the annuitant under a life annuity, if certain conditions are met. It ensures that the taxpayer is not denied the deduction under paragraph 60(l) by reason only of the fact that the taxpayer is not the annuitant under the annuity, or the fact that the annuity is acquired by the trust or the estate of the deceased individual rather than "by or on behalf of the taxpayer". The provisions of section 60.011 are explained in greater detail below.

Consequential changes to reflect the introduction of section 60.011 are also made. Specifically, new section 75.2 attributes to the taxpayer amounts payable under such an annuity, with corresponding changes to section 160.2 making the annuitant and the policyholder jointly and severally or solidarily liable with the taxpayer for any tax payable in connection with amounts attributed to the taxpayer. Paragraph 148(1)(e) is amended to ensure that such annuities are considered to be prescribed annuity contracts and treated in the same manner as other prescribed annuity contracts, the purchase price of which is deductible under paragraph 60(l). Lastly, subsection 146(8.1) is amended to ensure that the election provided for thereunder can be made if the taxpayer is "beneficially interested" in the deceased individual's estate (as defined in subsection 248(25)), but not a beneficiary under the estate (as is currently required under subsection 146(8.1)). See the explanatory notes to these provisions for further details.

New section 60.011 applies after 1988, which reflects the effective date of the amendment to paragraph 60(l) allowing a trust to be named as the annuitant under a minor-term annuity.

60.011 (1) Meaning of "lifetime benefit trust" — For the purpose of subsection (2), a trust is at any particular time a lifetime benefit trust with respect to a taxpayer and the estate of a deceased individual if

(a) immediately before the death of the deceased individual, the taxpayer

(i) was both a spouse or common-law partner of the deceased individual and mentally infirm, or

(ii) was both a child or grandchild of the deceased individual and dependent on the deceased individual for support because of mental infirmity; and

(b) the trust is, at the particular time, a personal trust under which

(i) no person other than the taxpayer may receive or otherwise obtain the use of, during the taxpayer's lifetime, any of the income or capital of the trust, and

(ii) the trustees

(A) are empowered to pay amounts from the trust to the taxpayer, and

(B) are required — in determining whether to pay, or not to pay, an amount to the taxpayer — to consider the needs of the taxpayer including, without limiting the generality of the foregoing, the comfort, care and maintenance of the taxpayer.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 60.011(1) defines "lifetime benefit trust" with respect to a taxpayer and the estate of a deceased individual for the purposes of new subsection 60.011(2). Subsection 60.011(2) defines "qualifying trust annuity" with respect to a taxpayer and includes, under paragraph 60.011(2)(a), a life annuity acquired after 2005 under which the annuitant is, at the time the annuity is acquired, a lifetime benefit trust with respect to the taxpayer and the estate of a deceased individual. Subsection 60.011(2) is relevant for new subsection 60.011(3), the provisions of which ensure that the eligibility requirements for a taxpayer to deduct the purchase price of an annuity under paragraph 60(l) can be met where the annuity is a qualifying trust annuity with respect to the taxpayer.

Subsection 60.011(1) defines a trust to be, at a particular time, a lifetime benefit trust with respect to a taxpayer and the estate of a deceased individual if two conditions are satisfied. First, the taxpayer must be, immediately before the death of the deceased individual, a mentally infirm spouse or common-law partner of the deceased individual, or a mentally infirm child or grandchild of the deceased individual who was dependent on the deceased individual by reason of that infirmity. Second, the trust must be, at the particular time, a personal trust under which

- no person other than the taxpayer may, during the taxpayer's lifetime, receive or otherwise obtain the use of any of the income of the trust (determined as required under subsection 108(3), without reference to the provisions of the Act) or the capital of the trust,
- the trustees are empowered to pay amounts from the trust to the taxpayer, and
- the trustees are required to consider the needs of the taxpayer (including the comfort, care and maintenance of the taxpayer) in determining whether to pay, or not to pay, an amount to the taxpayer.

Related Provisions: 108(3) — Meaning of "income" of trust.

(2) Meaning of "qualifying trust annuity" — Each of the following is a qualifying trust annuity with respect to a taxpayer:

(a) an annuity that meets the following conditions, namely,

(i) it is acquired after 2005,

(ii) the annuitant under it is a trust that is, at the time the annuity is acquired, a lifetime benefit trust with respect to the taxpayer and the estate of a deceased individual,

(iii) it is for the life of the taxpayer (with or without a guaranteed period), or for a fixed term equal to 90 years minus the age in whole years of the taxpayer at the time it is acquired, and

(iv) if it is with a guaranteed period or for a fixed term, it requires that, in the event of the death of the taxpayer during the guaranteed period or fixed term, any amounts that would otherwise be payable after the death of the taxpayer be commuted into a single payment;

(b) an annuity that meets the following conditions, namely,

(i) it is acquired after 1988,

(ii) the annuitant under it is a trust under which the taxpayer is the sole person beneficially interested (determined without regard to any right of a person to receive an amount from the trust only on or after the death of the taxpayer) in amounts payable under the annuity,

(iii) it is for a fixed term not exceeding 18 years minus the age in whole years of the taxpayer at the time it is acquired, and

(iv) if it is acquired after 2005, it requires that, in the event of the death of the taxpayer during the fixed term, any amounts that would otherwise be payable after the death of the taxpayer be commuted into a single payment; and

(c) an annuity that meets the following conditions, namely,

(i) it is acquired

(A) after 2000 and before 2005 at a time at which the taxpayer was mentally or physically infirm, or

(B) in 2005 at a time at which the taxpayer was mentally infirm,

(ii) the annuitant under it is a trust under which the taxpayer is the sole person beneficially interested (determined without regard to any right of a person to receive an amount from the trust only on or after the death of the taxpayer) in amounts payable under the annuity, and

(iii) it is for the life of the taxpayer (with or without a guaranteed period), or for a fixed term equal to 90 years minus the age in whole years of the taxpayer at the time it is acquired.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 60.011(2) defines "qualifying trust annuity" with respect to a taxpayer. Subsection 60.011(2) is relevant for new subsection 60.011(3), the provisions of which ensure that the eligibility requirements for a taxpayer to deduct the purchase price of an annuity under paragraph 60(l) can be met where the annuity is a qualifying trust annuity with respect to the taxpayer. It is also relevant for the purposes of new section 75.2, amended section 160.2 and amended paragraph 148(1)(e). Also, subsection 248(1) of the Act is amended to define the expression "qualifying trust annuity" as having the meaning assigned by subsection 60.011(2), thus ensuring that the definition in subsection 60.011(2) applies whenever the expression is used in the Act.

Subsection 60.011(2) defines three types of qualifying trust annuities with respect to a taxpayer, all of which have, as the annuitant thereunder, a trust under which the taxpayer is a beneficiary.

- Paragraph 60.011(2)(a) describes a life annuity that is acquired after 2005 and the annuitant under which is a trust that is, at the time of acquisition, a "lifetime benefit trust" with respect to the taxpayer and the estate of a deceased individual. ("Lifetime benefit trust" is defined in new subsection 60.011(1).) If the annuity has a guaranteed period or is for a fixed term, it must provide for commutation in the event of the death of the taxpayer during the guaranteed period or fixed term.
- Paragraph 60.011(2)(b) describes a minor term annuity that is acquired after 1988 and the annuitant under which is a trust under which the taxpayer is the sole person beneficially interested in amounts payable under the annuity (determined without regard to any right of a person to receive amounts from the trust only on or after the death of the taxpayer). If the annuity is acquired after 2005, it must provide for commutation in the event of the death of the taxpayer during the fixed term.

- Paragraph 60.011(2)(c) describes a life annuity that is acquired after 2000 and the annuitant under which is a trust under which the taxpayer is the sole person beneficially interested in amounts payable under the annuity (determined without regard to any right of a person to receive amounts from the trust only on or after the death of the taxpayer). The taxpayer must be infirm at the time of acquisition, and the annuity must be acquired before 2005 in the case of a physically infirm taxpayer, and before 2006 in the case of a mentally infirm taxpayer.

Related Provisions: 60.011(3) — Lifetime benefit trust; 75.2 — Treatment of qualifying trust annuity payout or on death; 248(1)"qualifying trust annuity" — Definition applies to entire Act.

(3) Application of para. 60(l) to "qualifying trust annuity" — For the purpose of paragraph 60(l),

(a) in determining if a qualifying trust annuity with respect to a taxpayer is an annuity described in subparagraph 60(l)(ii), clauses 60(l)(ii)(A) and (B) are to be read without regard to their requirement that the taxpayer be the annuitant under the annuity; and

(b) if an amount paid to acquire a qualifying trust annuity with respect to a taxpayer would, if this Act were read without reference to this subsection, not be considered to have been paid by or on behalf of the taxpayer, the amount is deemed to have been paid on behalf of the taxpayer where

(i) it is paid

(A) by the estate of a deceased individual who was, immediately before death,

(I) a spouse or common-law partner of the taxpayer, or

(II) a parent or grandparent of the taxpayer on whom the taxpayer was dependent for support, or

(B) by the trust that is the annuitant under the qualifying trust annuity, and

(ii) it would, if it had been paid by the taxpayer, be deductible under paragraph 60(l) in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year and the taxpayer elects, in the taxpayer's return of income under this Part for that taxation year, to have this paragraph apply to the amount.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 60.011(3) contains provisions which ensure that the eligibility requirements for a taxpayer to deduct the purchase price of an annuity under paragraph 60(l) can be met where the annuity is a "qualifying trust annuity" with respect to the taxpayer (as defined in new subsection 60.011(2)). A distinguishing feature of a qualifying trust annuity with respect to a taxpayer is that the annuitant thereunder is a trust under which the taxpayer is a beneficiary.

Paragraph 60(l) requires that the taxpayer claiming a deduction for the purchase price of an annuity be the annuitant under the annuity. New paragraph 60.011(3)(a) provides for this requirement to be disregarded in the case of a qualifying trust annuity.

Paragraph 60(l) allows a taxpayer to deduct the purchase price of an annuity only if the amount paid to acquire the annuity was paid "by or on behalf of" the taxpayer. If a qualifying trust annuity with respect to a taxpayer is acquired either by the trust that is the annuitant, or by the estate of a deceased individual who was a spouse or common-law partner of the taxpayer or a parent or grandparent of the taxpayer on whom the taxpayer was dependent for support, and the purchase price would not otherwise be considered to have been paid "by or on behalf of the taxpayer", paragraph 60.011(3)(b) deems the amount to have been paid on behalf of the taxpayer. For this deeming rule to apply, the taxpayer must so elect in the taxpayer's return of income for the year in which the amount would have been deductible under paragraph 60(l) had the purchase price been paid by the taxpayer. (A taxpayer is deemed to have made the election required under paragraph 60.011(3)(b) with respect to any amount claimed by the taxpayer as a deduction under paragraph 60(l) in computing income for a taxation year ending before 2005.)

Related Provisions: 75.2 — Treatment of qualifying trust annuity payout or on death.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, July 12, 2001:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing further to your meeting, and subsequent conversations, with Department of Finance officials concerning the tax treatment of proceeds of a registered retirement savings plan (RRSP) that are transferred, on the death of the RRSP annuitant, to a trustee for the benefit of a disabled child of the annuitant.

As you know, the Income Tax Act provides preferential tax treatment when RRSP proceeds are left, on the death of the annuitant, to a child of the annuitant who was dependent, financially and by reason of physical or mental infirmity, on the annuitant at the time of the annuitant's death. The main preference, in the context of your submission, is the ability to transfer the proceeds to certain tax-preferred vehicles and, in so doing, to obtain a further deferral of tax (i.e., a "rollover"). You have asked that we consider two changes to the rollover provisions. First, you have asked that the legislated income threshold for determining financially [sic] dependency be increased. Secondly, you have asked that the rollover options be expanded so as to allow a trust established for the benefit of an infirm financially dependent child to hold and manage the proceeds of the deceased parent's RRSP on behalf of the child.

Let me, first of all, address the trust issue. We understand that parents of an infirm child who wish to ensure the child's financial security and well-being after the parent's [sic] death, will typically create a trust to clearly establish their intentions regarding care for the child and management of property, including RRSP proceeds, left for the benefit of the child. The issue is that, if a trust is used, the only rollover option that is available for proceeds of the parent's RRSP is the acquisition of a term annuity to age 18. While there are other rollover options that provide for a deferral beyond age 18, they do not accommodate the use of a trust, with the result that such a deferral can be obtained only be [sic] giving control over the proceeds to the infirm child.

We have concluded that there is no compelling rationale to preclude a deferral past age 18 where a trust is being used to manage property for the benefit of an infirm dependent child. Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend that the existing rollover option, which allows the proceeds of a deceased parent's RRSP to be used to acquire an immediate life annuity under which an infirm dependent child of the deceased is the annuitant, be expanded to allow a trust to be named as the annuitant, provided the child is the sole person beneficially interested in annuity payments made to the trust. I would anticipate that this amendment would be included in the next package of proposed technical amendments to the Act. We would further recommend that this change apply to deaths in the 2001 and subsequent taxation years.

With respect to the test for financial dependency, you submit that the current threshold is below social assistance rates in many provinces, with the result that infirm dependants may be disqualified from the rollover if they receive social assistance. Moreover, although the Income Tax Act allows for the financial dependency of a child with income above the legislated threshold to be established on a factual basis, this requires a reliance on the Canada Customs and Revenue Agency (CCRA) to make such a determination. You are concerned that this does not provide sufficient certainty for the parent of a disabled child who is seeking to provide for the care of such a child as part of the parent's estate plan and, in that regard, have asked that the threshold be increased for infirm children. As you know, we appreciate your concerns and are actively reviewing this issue. Unfortunately, we are not in a position at this time to comment on whether it will be possible to recommend such a change. We understand that, in the absence of such confirmation, you may wish to pursue the possibility of obtaining an opinion from the CCRA as to whether your child would be considered, on a factual basis, to be financially dependent on you.

I wish to thank you for raising this matter with us.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Feb. 18, 2002:

Dear [xxx]

Thank you for your recent letter requesting an increase in the income threshold used to determine the financial dependence of a child of a deceased registered retirement income fund (RRIF) annuitant.

I appreciate you taking the time to contact me and have taken careful note of your suggestion on this important matter. As you may know, government policy is under continuous examination by the Department of Finance with a view to ensuring that the existing system of taxation is fair and effective. The representations and policy suggestions that we receive from a broad range of Canadians are an integral part of this process, helping us to identify issues of concern and focus our efforts toward solutions. I wish to assure you that your proposal will be given careful consideration as part of this on-going review.

Having said this, I would like to clarify that a child with income above the legislated threshold will nonetheless be considered to be financially dependent for purposes of the rollover rules, if this dependence can be established on a factual basis. You may wish to pursue this possibility with the Canada Customs and Revenue Agency.

Finally, I understand that you wish to transfer your RRIF proceeds on death to a trust under which your child will be the beneficiary. In this regard, it may be of interest for you to know that I intend to recommend that the Income Tax Act (Act) be amended to provide an additional option for the utilisation of proceeds of a deceased RRIF annuitant. The amendment would involve the existing rollover option that allows the RRIF proceeds to be used to acquire an immediate life annuity under which a child, financially dependant by reason of physical or mental infirmity on the deceased RRIF annuitant, is the annuitant. Specifically, the amendment would expand this option to allow a trust to be named as the annuitant, provided the child is the sole person beneficially interested in payments made under the annuity to the trust. This provision would be comparable to the existing rollover provision that allows a trust to be named as the annuitant under a term annuity payable to age 18. It is anticipated that this amendment will be included in the next package of proposed technical amendments to the Act.

Thank you again for making me aware of your views on this matter.

Sincerely,

The Honourable Paul Martin, P.C., M.P., Minister of Finance

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 15, 2003:

Dear [xxx]

Thank you for your letter of September 6, 2002 regarding the rules governing the transfer of funds from a deceased annuitant's registered retirement savings plan (RRSP) or registered retirement income fund (RRIF) to a financially dependent child or grandchild. I welcome this opportunity to correspond with you again and regret the delay in my reply.

As my predecessor indicated to you in his letter of February 18, 2002, it will be recommended that the Income Tax Act be amended to allow a tax-deferred rollover of RRSP or RRIF proceeds to acquire an immediate life annuity under which a trust is the annuitant, provided a child or grandchild who is financially dependent by reason of physical or mental infirmity on the deceased annuitant is the sole person beneficially interested in payments made under the annuity to the trust.

This amendment is included in the package of proposed technical amendments to the Act that was released on December 20, 2002 (the package is available on the Finance Canada web site — www.fin.gc.ca). The Department is now in the process of receiving public feedback on the proposed amendments. Once this process is complete and any necessary changes are made to the proposals, the package will be tabled in the House of Commons. While I cannot say with absolute certainty, I have no reason to believe that any changes to the proposed amendment mentioned above would be contemplated.

I would also note that the 2003 budget proposes to increase the level of income used in determining the financial dependence of an infirm child or grandchild under the rules that apply to RRSP and RRIF proceeds on the death of the annuitant. These rules allow a financially dependent child who was dependent on the deceased annuitant by reason of physical or mental infirmity to receive a rollover of the deceased annuitant's RRSP or RRIF proceeds. In recognition of the special need for the ongoing care of financially dependent infirm children and to provide supporting parents with greater certainty in their estate planning, the budget proposes to increase the level of income used to determine the financial dependence of an infirm child under these rules from $7,634 to $13,814, effective in 2003 and indexed in subsequent years.

Thank you again for making me aware of your views. I trust my reply has been helpful in responding to your concerns on these matters.

Yours very truly,

John Manley, Minister of Finance

Letter from Dept. of Finance, April 20, 2005: See under 146(8.1).

Proposed Amendment — 63(2)(b)C(i)(B) opening words

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 30, will amend the opening words of cl. 63(2)(b)C(i)(B) to substitute "certified in writing" for "certified", applicable to certifications made after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 63 provides rules concerning the deductibility of child care expenses in computing an individual's income. When more than one taxpayer contributes to the support of an eligible child, the child care expense deduction must generally be claimed by the taxpayer with the lower income for the year. One of the exceptions to this rule is where a medical doctor certifies that the lower-income supporting individual is incapable of caring for children because of that individual's mental or physical infirmity. This amendment clarifies that such a certification has to be in writing.

(I) was incapable of caring for children because of the person's mental or physical infirmity and confinement throughout a period of not less than 2 weeks in the year to bed, to a wheelchair or as a patient in a hospital, an asylum or other similar institution, or

(II) was in the year, and is likely to be for a long, continuous and indefinite period, incapable of caring for children, because of the person's mental or physical infirmity,

(C) a person confined to a prison or similar institution throughout a period of not less than 2 weeks in the year, or

(D) a person who, because of a breakdown of the person's marriage or common-law partnership, was living separate and apart from the taxpayer at the end of the year and for a period of at least 90 days that began in the year, and

(ii) the number of months in the year (other than a month that includes all or part of a week included in the number of weeks referred to in subparagraph (i)), each of which is a month during which the child care expenses were incurred and the supporting person was a student in attendance at a designated educational institution or a secondary school and enrolled in a program of the institution or school that is not less than 3 consecutive weeks duration and that provides that each student in the program spend not less than 12 hours in the month on courses in the program.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 31(1), will amend the opening words of subsec. 66(12.6) to read as above, applicable to renunciations made after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 66(12.6) permits a principal-business corporation to renounce Canadian exploration expenses ("CEE") to its flow-through shareholders. To be eligible for flow-through treatment, CEE must be incurred in the 24-month period that begins on the day on which the relevant flow-through share agreement is entered into and must be incurred, or deemed to be incurred, on or before the effective date of the renunciation.

Subsection 66.1(9) provides for the reclassification of certain Canadian development expenses as CEE ("reclassified CDE"). The reclassified CDE is deemed, for the purposes of the Act, to be incurred by the taxpayer at the time of the reclassification and not at the time the reclassified CDE was actually incurred. To ensure that expenses actually incurred before a flow-through share agreement is entered into cannot be renounced under a flow-through share agreement, subsection 66(12.6) is amended, applicable to renunciations made after December 20, 2002, to exclude reclassified CDE from CEE that may be renounced by a corporation to its flow-through shareholders.

(a) the assistance that the corporation has received, is entitled to receive or can reasonably be expected to receive at any time, and that can reasonably be related to the specified expenses or to Canadian exploration activities to which the specified expenses relate (other than assistance that can reasonably be related to expenses referred to in paragraph (b) or (b.1)),

(b) all specified expenses that are prescribed Canadian exploration and development overhead expenses of the corporation,

(b.1) all specified expenses each of which is a cost of, or for the use of, seismic data

(i) that had been acquired (otherwise than as a consequence of performing work that resulted in the creation of the data) by any other person before the cost was incurred,

(ii) in respect of which a right to use had been acquired by any other person before the cost was incurred, or

(iii) all or substantially all of which resulted from work performed more than one year before the cost was incurred, and

(c) the total of amounts that are renounced on or before the date on which the renunciation is made by any other renunciation under this subsection in respect of those expenses,

but not in any case

(d) exceeding the amount, if any, by which the consideration for the share exceeds the total of other amounts renounced under this subsection or subsection (12.601) or (12.62) in respect of the share on or before the day on which the renunciation is made, or

(e) exceeding the amount, if any, by which the cumulative Canadian exploration expense of the corporation on the effective date of the renunciation computed before taking into account any amounts renounced under this subsection on the date on which the renunciation is made, exceeds the total of all amounts renounced under this subsection in respect of any other share

(i) on the date on which the renunciation is made, and

(ii) effective on or before the effective date of the renunciation.

"flow-through share" means a share (other than a prescribed share) of the capital stock of a principal-business corporation that is issued to a person under an agreement in writing entered into between the person and the corporation after February 1986, under which the corporation agrees for consideration that does not include property to be exchanged or transferred by the person under the agreement in circumstances in which section 51, 85, 85.1, 86 or 87 applies

(b) to renounce, before March of the first calendar year that begins after that period, in prescribed form to the person in respect of the share, an amount in respect of the Canadian exploration expenses or Canadian development expenses so incurred by it not exceeding the consideration received by the corporation for the share, and includes a right of a person to have such a share issued to that person and any interest acquired in such a share by a person pursuant to such an agreement;

Proposed Amendment — 66(15)"flow-through share"

"flow-through share" means a share (other than a prescribed share) of the capital stock of a principal-business corporation, or a right (other than a prescribed right) to acquire a share of the capital stock of a principal-business corporation, issued to a person under an agreement in writing made between the person and the corporation under which the corporation, for consideration that does not include property to be exchanged or transferred by the person under the agreement in circumstances to which any of sections 51, 85, 85.1, 86 and 87 applies, agrees

(a) to incur, in the period that begins on the day on which the agreement was made and ends 24 months after the month that includes that day, Canadian exploration expenses or Canadian development expenses in an amount not less than the consideration for which the share or right is to be issued, and

(b) to renounce, in prescribed form and before March of the first calendar year that begins after that period, to the person in respect of the share or right, an amount in respect of the Canadian exploration expenses or Canadian development expenses so incurred by it not exceeding the consideration received by the corporation for the share or right;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 31(6), will amend the definition "flow-through share" in subsec. 66(15) to read as above, applicable to agreements made after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): A flow-through share is a share of the capital stock of a principal-business corporation, or a right to such a share, that is issued to a person pursuant to an agreement in writing under which the corporation agrees to incur resource expenses and renounce those expenses to that person.

The definition is amended to exclude a prescribed right from the class of rights that qualifies as flow-through shares. A "prescribed right" is proposed to be defined in new subsections 6202.1(1.1) and (2.1) of the Regulations. This amendment ensures that restrictions on the type of shares that may qualify as flow-through shares, currently found in subsections 6202.1(1) and (2) of the Regulations, also apply to rights to acquire shares.

The amended definition "flow-through share", which applies to agreements made after December 20, 2002, no longer includes the phrase, "any interest acquired in such a share by a person pursuant to such an agreement". This phrase is being deleted because the amended definition is sufficiently comprehensive to include any interest in property that qualifies as a flow-through share.

Related Provisions: 40(12), 54"exemption threshold" — Deemed cost of flow-through share on donation to charity; 66(12.6), (12.601) — Flow-through of expenditures to shareholder; 66(16) — Partnership deemed to be a person; 127.52(1)(e), (e.1) — Minimum tax; 248(1)"flow-through share" — Definition applies to entire Act.

History: Paras. (a) and (b) of the definition "flow-through share" in subsec. 66(15) amended by 1997, c. 25, subsec. 13(26), applicable to renunciations made after 1998. Paras. (a) and (b) formerly read:

(a) to incur, during the period commencing on the day the agreement was entered into and ending 24 months after the end of the month that includes that day, Canadian exploration expenses, Canadian development expenses or Canadian oil and gas property expenses in an amount not less than the consideration for which the share is to be issued, and

(b) to renounce, before March of the first calendar year beginning after that period, in prescribed form to the person in respect of the share, an amount in respect of the Canadian exploration expenses, Canadian development expenses or Canadian oil and gas property expenses so incurred by it not exceeding the consideration received by the corporation for the share,

Para. (b) of the definition "flow-through share" in subsec. 66(15) amended by 1994, c. 8, subsec. 5(18), applicable to shares issued pursuant to an agreement entered into after February 1986. Para. (b) formerly read:

(b) to renounce, within that period or within 30 days thereafter, in prescribed form to the person in respect of the share, an amount in respect of the Canadian exploration expenses, Canadian development expenses or Canadian oil and gas property expenses so incurred by it not exceeding the consideration received by the corporation for the share,

That portion of the definition "flow through share" preceding para. (a) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 38(10), to add "for consideration that does not include property to be exchanged or transferred by the person under the agreement in circumstances in which section 51, 85, 85.1, 86 or 87 applies", applicable to shares issued pursuant to an agreement in writing entered into after July 13, 1990.

Proposed Amendment — 66(18)

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), s. 6, will amend subsec. 66(18) to substitute "110.6(1), the definition "pre-production mining expenditure" in subsection 127(9) and the descriptions of C and D" for "110.6(1) and the descriptions of C and D", applicable to expenses incurred in fiscal periods that begin after 2001.

Technical Notes: Subsection 66(18) provides that, for the purposes of most of the resource taxation rules, a partner's share of resource expenditures incurred in a fiscal period is considered to have been incurred by the partner at the end of the fiscal period.

Subsection 66(18) is amended by adding a reference to the "pre-production mining expenditure", consequential to the introduction of subparagraph (b)(ii) in the definition in subsection 127(9). A taxable Canadian corporation that is a member of a partnership could under certain circumstances earn investment tax credits in respect of the corporation's "pre-production mining expenditure." For more information, refer to commentary following the amendments to the definition of pre-production mining expenditure in subsection 127(9).

"cumulative Canadian exploration expense" of a taxpayer at any time in a taxation year means the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all Canadian exploration expenses made or incurred by the taxpayer before that time,

B is the total of all amounts required by subsection (1) to be included in computing the amount referred to in paragraph 59(3.2)(b) for the taxpayer's taxation years ending before that time,

Proposed Amendment — 66.1(6)"cumulative Canadian exploration expense"B

B is the total of all amounts that were, because of subsection (1), included in computing the amount referred to in paragraph 59(3.2)(b) for the taxpayer's taxation years ending before that time,

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), subsec. 7(4), will amend the description of B in the definition "cumulative Canadian exploration expense" in subsec. 66.1(6) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after November 5, 2010.

Technical Notes: A taxpayer's "cumulative Canadian exploration expense" (CCCE) includes the taxpayer's undeducted pool of Canadian exploration expenses. A taxpayer is permitted a deduction under either subsection 66.1(2) or (3) with respect to a positive CCCE. A "negative" CCEE is included in a taxpayer's income under subsection 66.2(1).

The description of B, in the formula in the definition of CCEE, adds negative CCEE amounts that are required to be included in a taxpayer's income during previous taxation years. The description of B is amended to ensure that only amounts that were included in a taxpayer's income during previous taxation years are added to the taxpayer's CCEE pool.

C is the total of all amounts, except amounts in respect of interest, paid by the taxpayer after May 6, 1974 and before that time to Her Majesty in right of Canada in respect of amounts paid to the taxpayer before May 25, 1976 under the regulations referred to in paragraph (a) of the description of H,

D is the total of all amounts referred to in the description of G that are established by the taxpayer to have become bad debts before that time,

E is such part, if any, of the amount determined for J as has been repaid before that time by the taxpayer pursuant to a legal obligation to repay all or any part of that amount, and

E.1 is the total of all specified amounts determined under paragraph 66.7(12.1)(a) in respect of the taxpayer for taxation years ending before that time,

F is the total of all amounts deducted or required to be deducted in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year ending before that time in respect of the taxpayer's cumulative Canadian exploration expense,

G is the total of all amounts that became receivable by the taxpayer before that time that are to be included in the amount determined under this description by virtue of paragraph 66(12.1)(a) or (12.2)(a),

H is the total of all amounts paid to the taxpayer after May 6, 1974 and before May 25, 1976 to the extent that the amounts have been expended by the taxpayer as or on account of Canadian exploration and development expenses or Canadian exploration expense incurred by the taxpayer,

I is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount received before that time on account of any amount referred to in the description of D,

J is the total amount of assistance that the taxpayer has received or is entitled to receive in respect of any Canadian exploration expense incurred after 1980 or that can reasonably be related to Canadian exploration activities after 1980, to the extent that the assistance has not reduced the taxpayer's Canadian exploration expense by virtue of paragraph (9)(g),

J.1 is the total of all amounts by which the cumulative Canadian exploration expense of the taxpayer is required because of subsection 80(8) to be reduced at or before that time,

K is the total of all amounts that are required to be deducted before that time under subsection 66(14.1) in computing the taxpayer's cumulative Canadian exploration expense,

where

A is the total of all Canadian development expenses made or incurred by the taxpayer before that time,

B is the total of all amounts required by virtue of subsection (1) to be included in computing the amount referred to in paragraph 59(3.2)(c) for taxation years ending before that time,

Proposed Amendment — 66.2(5)"cumulative Canadian development expense"B

B is the total of all amounts that were because of subsection (1) included in computing the amount referred to in paragraph 59(3.2)(c) for taxation years ending before that time,

Technical Notes: A taxpayer's "cumulative Canadian development expense" (CCDE) includes the taxpayer's undeducted pool of Canadian development expenses. 66.21 [Foreign resource expenses] — (1) Definitions — The definitions in this subsection apply in this section.

"adjusted cumulative foreign resource expense" of a taxpayer, in respect of a country, at the end of a taxation year means the total of

(a) the cumulative foreign resource expense of the taxpayer, in respect of that country, at the end of the year; and

(b) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total determined under paragraph 66.7(13.2)(a) in respect of that country and the taxpayer for the year

exceeds

(ii) the amount that would, but for paragraph (3)(c), be determined under subsection (3) in respect of that country and the taxpayer for the year.

"cumulative foreign resource expense" of a taxpayer, in respect of a country other than Canada at a particular time, means the amount determined by the formula

$$(A + B + C + D) - (E + F + G + H + I + J)$$

$$(A + A.1 + B + C + D) - (E + F + G + H + I + J)$$

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 9(1), will amend the formula in the definition "cumulative foreign resource expense" in subsec. 66.21(1) to read as above, deemed to have come into force on January 1, 2005.

Technical Notes: A taxpayer's "cumulative foreign resource expense" (CFRE) in respect of a country other than Canada includes the taxpayer's undeducted pool of foreign resource expenses in respect of the country. A taxpayer is generally permitted a deduction on a country-by-country basis under subsection 66.21(4) in respect of a positive CFRE. A "negative" CFRE is included in a taxpayer's income under subsection 66.21(3).

Formula in the definition of CFRE is amended by adding new element A.1. Element A.1 adds the cost of foreign resource property deemed to have been acquired when the taxpayer last became resident in Canada to the taxpayer's CFRE.

where

A is the total of all foreign resource expenses, in respect of that country, made or incurred by the taxpayer

(a) before the particular time, and

(b) at a time (in this definition referred to as a "resident time")

(i) at which the taxpayer was resident in Canada, and

(ii) where the taxpayer became resident in Canada before the particular time, that is after the last time (before the particular time) that the taxpayer became resident in Canada;

Proposed Addition — 66.21(1)"cumulative foreign resource expense"A.1

A.1 is the total of all foreign resource expenses, in respect of that country, that is the cost to the taxpayer of any of the taxpayer's foreign resource property in respect of that country that is deemed to have been acquired by the taxpayer under paragraph 128.1(1)(c) at the last time (before the particular time) that the taxpayer became resident in Canada;

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 9(2), will add the description of A.1 to the definition "cumulative foreign resource expense" in subsec. 66.21(1), deemed to have come into force on January 1, 2005.

Technical Notes: See under 66.21(1)"cumulative foreign resource expense" formula.

Related Provisions: 66.21(5) — FRE on becoming resident.

B is the total of all amounts required to be included in computing the amount referred to in paragraph 59(3.2)(c.1) in respect of that country, for taxation years that ended before the particular time and at a resident time;

Proposed Amendment — 66.21(1)"cumulative foreign resource expense"B

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), s. 9, will amend the description of B in the definition "cumulative foreign resource expense" in subsec. 66.21(1) to substitute "amounts included" for "amounts required to be included", applicable to taxation years that end after November 5, 2010.

Technical Notes: A taxpayer's "cumulative foreign resource expense" (CFRE) in respect of a country includes the taxpayer's undeducted pool of foreign resource expenses in respect of the country. A taxpayer is generally permitted a deduction under subsection 66.21(4) with respect to a positive CFRE on a country-by-country basis. A "negative" CFRE is included in a taxpayer's income under subsection 66.21(3).

The description of B, in the formula in the definition of CFRE, adds negative CFRE amounts that are required to be included in a taxpayer's income during previous taxation years. The description of B is amended to ensure that only amounts that were included in a taxpayer's income during previous taxation years are added to the taxpayer's CFRE pool.

E is the total of all amounts deducted, in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year that ended before the particular time and at a resident time, in respect of the taxpayer's cumulative foreign resource expense in respect of that country;

F is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount in respect of a foreign resource property, in respect of that country, (in this description referred to as the "particular property") disposed of by the taxpayer equal to the amount, if any, by which

(a) the amount designated under subparagraph 59(1)(b)(ii) by the taxpayer in respect of the portion of the proceeds of that disposition that became receivable before the particular time and at a resident time

(b) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts that would be determined under paragraph 66.7(2.3)(a), immediately before the time (in this paragraph referred to as the "relevant time") when such proceeds of disposition became receivable, in respect of the taxpayer, that country and an original owner of the particular property (or of any other property acquired by the taxpayer with the particular property in circumstances to which subsection 66.7(2.3) applied and in respect of which the proceeds of disposition became receivable by the taxpayer at the relevant time) if

(A) amounts that became receivable at or after the relevant time were not taken into account,

(B) paragraph 66.7(2.3)(a) were read without reference to "30% of", and

(C) no reduction under subsection 80(8) at or after the relevant time were taken into account, exceeds the total of

(ii) all amounts that would be determined under paragraph 66.7(2.3)(a) at the relevant time in respect of the taxpayer, that country and an original owner of the particular property (or of that other property) if

Proposed Addition — 66.7(10.1)

(10.1) Amalgamation — partnership property — For the purposes of subsections (1) to (5) and the definition "original owner" in subsection 66(15), if at any particular time there has been an amalgamation within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(1), other than an amalgamation to which subsection 87(1.2) applies, of two or more corporations (each of which is referred to in this subsection as a "predecessor corporation") to form one corporate entity (referred to in this subsection as the "new corporation") and immediately before the particular time a predecessor corporation was a member of a partnership that owned a Canadian resource property or a foreign resource property,

(a) the predecessor corporation is deemed

(i) to have owned, immediately before the particular time, that portion of each Canadian resource property and of each foreign resource property owned by the partnership at the particular time that is equal to the predecessor corporation's percentage share of the total of the amounts that would be paid to all members of the partnership if the partnership were wound up immediately before the particular time, and

(ii) to have disposed of those portions to the new corporation at the particular time;

(b) the new corporation is deemed to have, by way of the amalgamation, acquired those portions at the particular time; and

(c) the income of the new corporation for a taxation year that ends after the particular time that can reasonably be attributable to production from those properties is deemed to be the lesser of

(i) the new corporation's share of the part of the income of the partnership for fiscal periods of the partnership that end in the year that can reasonably be regarded as being attributable to production from those properties, and

(ii) the amount that would be determined under subparagraph (i) for the year if the new corporation's share of the income of the partnership for the fiscal periods of the partnership that end in the year were determined on the basis of the percentage share referred to in paragraph (a).

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 32, will add subsec. 66.7(10.1), applicable to amalgamations that occur after 1996.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 66.7(10) treats a corporation as a successor corporation for the purposes of the successor rules in section 66.7 following an acquisition of control (or a change in the tax-exempt status) of the corporation. A rule in paragraph 66.7(10)(j) deems the corporation to own its percentage share of the properties owned by a partnership of which it was a member at the time of the acquisition of control. This "look-through rule" permits the deduction of resource expenses against income from, and proceeds of disposition of, the properties owned by the partnership at the time of the acquisition of control. No similar rule currently exists which would allow a new corporation formed on an amalgamation (other than an amalgamation to which subsection 87(2.1) applies) to deduct resource expenses against income from properties owned by a partnership in which a predecessor corporation was a member at the time of the amalgamation.

New subsection 66.7(10.1) applies to an amalgamation to which subsection 87(1.2) does not apply and provides a look-through rule similar to the rule in paragraph 66.7(10)(j). It does so by deeming the predecessor corporation to have owned a portion of the properties owned by a partnership immediately before the amalgamation and to have disposed of them to the new corporation formed on the amalgamation. Thus, subsection 66.7(10.1) allows a new corporation, to the extent permitted under subsections 66.7(1) to (5), to deduct from the resource pools of the predecessor corporation, amounts relating to the new corporation's share of the income from properties owned by a partnership in which a predecessor corporation was a member at the time of the amalgamation. New subsection 66.7(10.1) applies to amalgamations that occur after 1996.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 22, 1999:

Dear [xxx]

This is in reply to your letter of September 23, 1999 to me with regard to a technical deficiency in the successor rules. I also acknowledge your letter of December 6, 1999 to Simon Thompson providing further detail on the same matter.

You have described a case where Parentco owns approximately 85 per cent of the shares of the capital stock of Subco. Parentco and Subco amalgamate to form Newco. We understand that, immediately before the amalgamation, Subco owned Canadian resource property in its own right and that Subco also is a member of a partnership that owns Canadian resource properties.

Your technical analysis, with which we agree, is that subsection 87(1.2) of the Income Tax Act does not apply because Subco is not a "subsidiary wholly-owned corporation" of Parentco. Newco would be viewed as acquiring property from Subco for the purposes of the successor rules in section 66.7. Consequently, Newco's deductions under section 66.7 with regard to Subco's unused pools of resource expenditures would be limited to "streamed income" from resource properties owned by Subco immediately before the amalgamation. However, as "streamed income" does not include partnership income, no part of the resource income generated by the partnership could be offset by deductions under section 66.7 even though a large part of Subco's unused resource pools might be attributable to its share of partnership resource expenditures. As you indicate in your letter, the "look-through" rule for partnerships in paragraph 66.7(10)(j) does not apply because there was no acquisition of control of Newco because of the amalgamation.

We agree that this is a technical deficiency, demonstrated by the more favourable tax treatment in this context where there is an acquisition of control. We will recommend that this technical deficiency be remedied. One approach to remedy the situation would be to follow the option put forward in your letter. This option would effectively provide for a "look-through" rule for partnerships that is similar to the existing rule in paragraph 66.7(10)(j), but which applies where there is an amalgamation that does not involve an acquisition of control. However, we will also reflect further on whether it would be appropriate to recommend broader relief (e.g., relief that applies where one party sells a partnership interest that owns Canadian resource properties).

We will also recommended that this relief apply so that amalgamations that occur after 1996 are accommodated.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber

Proposed Amendment — 66.7(16)

(16) Non-successor acquisitions — Where at any time a Canadian resource property or a foreign resource property is acquired by a person in circumstances in which none of subsections (1) to (5), nor subsection 29(25) of the Income Tax Application Rules, apply, every person who was an original owner or predecessor owner of the property before that time is, for the purpose of applying those subsections to or in respect of the person or any other person who after that time acquires the property, deemed after that time not to be an original owner or predecessor owner of the property before that time.

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), s. 10, will amend subsec. 66.7(16) to read as above, applicable to property acquired after November 5, 2010.

Technical Notes: Subsection 66.7(16) provides that where a particular Canadian resource property or foreign resource property is acquired by a person in circumstances in which the successor rules do not apply, every person who was an original owner or predecessor owner of the property by reason of having previously disposed of the property shall, for the purposes of applying the successor rules to future owners of the property, be treated as never having been an original owner or predecessor owner of the property. Thus, the income from such properties thereafter will not qualify any expenses of a predecessor or original owner for a deduction in the hands of a successor.

The subsection is amended by removing the phrase "by reason of having previously disposed of the property," to ensure that the rule applies to all dispositions of resource properties. As well, the reference to "shall be deemed" is replaced by "is deemed" to reflect the current drafting style.

Related Provisions: See at end of s. 66.7.

(17) Restriction on deductions — Where in a particular taxation year and before June 6, 1987 a person disposed of a Canadian resource property or a foreign resource property in circumstances in which any of subsection 29(25) of the Income Tax Application Rules and subsections (1) to (5) applies, no deduction in respect of an expense incurred before the property was disposed of may be made under this section or section 66, 66.1, 66.2 or 66.4 by the person in computing the person's income for a taxation year subsequent to the particular taxation year.

(18) Application of interpretation provisions — The definitions in subsection 66(15) and sections 66.1 to 66.4 apply in this section.

66.8 (1) Resource expenses of limited partner — Where a taxpayer is a limited partner of a partnership at the end of a fiscal period of the partnership, the following rules apply:

(a) determine the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is the taxpayer's share of

(A) the Canadian oil and gas property expenses (in this subsection referred to as "property expenses"),

(B) the Canadian development expenses (in this subsection referred to as "development expenses"),

(C) the Canadian exploration expenses (in this subsection referred to as "exploration expenses"),

(D) the foreign resource expenses in respect of a country (in this subsection referred to as "country-specific foreign expenses"), or

(E) the foreign exploration and development expenses (in this subsection referred to as "global foreign expenses"), incurred by the partnership in the fiscal period determined without reference to this subsection

exceeds

(ii) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the taxpayer's at-risk amount at the end of the fiscal period in respect of the partnership

exceeds

(B) the total of

(I) the amount required by subsection 127(8) in respect of the partnership to be added in computing the investment tax credit of the taxpayer in respect of the fiscal period, and

(II) the taxpayer's share of any losses of the partnership for the fiscal period from a farming business;

(b) the amount determined under paragraph (a) shall be applied

(i) first to reduce the taxpayer's share of property expenses,

(ii) if any remains unapplied, then to reduce the taxpayer's share of development expenses,

(iii) if any remains unapplied, then to reduce the taxpayer's share of exploration expenses,

(iv) if any remains unapplied, then to reduce (in the order specified by the taxpayer in writing filed with the Minister on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year in which the fiscal period ends or, where no such specification is made, in the order determined by the Minister) the taxpayer's share of country-specific foreign expenses, and

(v) if any remains unapplied, then to reduce the taxpayer's share of global foreign expenses, incurred by the partnership in the fiscal period; and

(c) for the purposes of subparagraph 53(2)(c)(ii), sections 66 to 66.7, subsection 96(2.1) and section 111, the taxpayer's share of each class of expenses described in subparagraph (a)(i) incurred by the partnership in the fiscal period shall be deemed to be the amount by which the taxpayer's share of that class of expenses as determined under subparagraph (a)(i) exceeds the amount, if any, that was applied under paragraph (b) to reduce the taxpayer's share of that class of expenses.

(2) Expenses in following fiscal period — For the purposes of subparagraph (1)(a)(i), the amount by which a taxpayer's share of a class of expenses incurred by a partnership is reduced under paragraph (1)(b) in respect of a fiscal period of the partnership shall be added to the taxpayer's share, otherwise determined, of that class of expenses incurred by the partnership in the immediately following fiscal period of the partnership.

(3) Interpretation — In this section,

(a) the expressions "at-risk amount" of a taxpayer in respect of a partnership and "limited partner" of a partnership have the meanings assigned by subsections 96(2.2) and (2.4), respectively, except that, with respect to the definition "limited partner", the definition "exempt interest" in subsection 96(2.5) shall be read as though the reference therein to

(i) "February 25, 1986" were a reference to "June 17, 1987",

(ii) "February 26, 1986" were a reference to "June 18, 1987",

(iii) "January 1, 1987" were a reference to "January 1, 1988",

(iv) "June 12, 1986" were a reference to "June 18, 1987", and

(v) "prospectus, preliminary prospectus or registration statement" were read as "prospectus, preliminary prospectus, registration statement, offering memorandum or notice that is required to be filed before any distribution of securities may commence";

Proposed Amendment — 66.8(3)(a)

(a) the expression "limited partner" of a partnership has the meaning that would be assigned by subsection 96(2.4), if in subsection 96(2.5) each reference to

(i) "February 25, 1986" were a reference to "June 17, 1987",

(ii) "February 26, 1986" were a reference to "June 18, 1987",

(iii) "January 1, 1987" were a reference to "January 1, 1988",

(iv) "June 12, 1986" were a reference to "June 18, 1987", and

(v) "prospectus, preliminary prospectus or registration statement" were a reference to "prospectus, preliminary prospectus, registration statement, offering memorandum or notice that is required to be filed before any distribution of securities may commence";

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), s. 11, will amend para. 66.8(3)(a) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after 2003.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 66.8(3)(a) currently provides the meaning for two expressions for the purpose of section 66.8. The expression "at-risk amount" of a taxpayer in respect of a partnership, has the meaning assigned by subsection 96(2.2), and the expression "limited partner" of a partnership (subject to certain date references in the definition of "exempt interest" in subsection 96(2.5)) has the meaning assigned by subsection 96(2.4).

Paragraph 66.8(3)(a) is amended so that it no longer provides the meaning of the expression "at-risk amount" — now in new paragraph 66.8(3)(a.1). It continues to provide for the meaning of the expression "limited partner," which meaning remains unchanged.

Proposed Addition — 66.8(3)(a.1)

(a.1) the expression "at-risk amount" of a taxpayer in respect of a partnership has the meaning that would be assigned by subsection 96(2.2) if paragraph 96(2.2)(c) read as follows:

(c) all amounts each of which is an amount owing at that time to the partnership, or to a person or partnership not dealing at arm's length with the partnership, by the taxpayer or by a person or partnership not dealing at arm's length with the taxpayer, other than any amount deducted under subparagraph 53(2)(c)(i.3) in computing the adjusted cost base, or under section 143.2 in computing the cost, to the taxpayer of the taxpayer's partnership interest at that time, or any amount owing by the taxpayer to a person in respect of which the taxpayer is a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation or where the taxpayer is a trust, to a person that is the sole beneficiary of the taxpayer, and;

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), s. 11, will add para. 66.8(3)(a.1), applicable to taxation years that end after 2003.

Technical Notes: New paragraph 66.8(3)(a.1), which provides for the meaning of the expression "at-risk amount", is amended to provide that, for the purposes of deducting resource expenses of a limited partner under section 66.8, the "at-risk amount" of a taxpayer will not be adjusted for any amount owing by the taxpayer to a person in respect of which the taxpayer is a wholly-owned subsidiary or, if the taxpayer is a trust, to a person that is the sole beneficiary of the taxpayer.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Oct. 18, 2004:

Dear [xxx]:

Thank you for your letter of May 14, 2004 to Mr. Daryl Boychuk of this Division concerning the application of section 66.8 and paragraph 96(2.2)(c) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act"). In particular, your concern relates to the application of these provisions to a member of a limited partnership where the limited partnership carries on the business of exploring for, developing and producing oil and natural gas.

More specifically, your concern relates to a situation where the only limited partner is a commercial trust, the sole beneficiary of which is a mutual fund trust, and the general partner is a corporation, all the shares of which are owned by the mutual fund trust. In this situation, the mutual fund trust does not deal at arm's length with either the commercial trust or the limited partnership. The mutual fund trust, as the sole investor in the commercial trust, capitalizes it with a combination of debt and equity. The commercial trust uses these funds to acquire a 99% interest in the limited partnership. In no case does the mutual fund trust derive any of its funds from a person or partnership that does not deal at arm's length with the limited partnership.

The limited partnership earns income from the resource properties and allocates 99% of this income to the commercial trust. However, the debt owing to the mutual fund trust reduces the commercial trust's at-risk amount because the debt is owed by the commercial trust to a person (the mutual fund trust) that does not deal at arm's length with the partnership. As a result, section 66.8 of the Act operates to reduce the resource expenses that the commercial trust would otherwise be treated as having incurred.

Generally, the at-risk rules are designed to limit the deduction of limited partnership losses that exceed the amount that a limited partner has risked in the partnership (the "at-risk amount"). However, as applied to a member of a limited partnership that incurs Canadian oil and gas property expenses ("COGPE", 10% of the cumulative balance of which is deductible in respect of a taxation year), Canadian development expenses ("CDE", 30% of the cumulative balance of which is deductible in respect of a taxation year) or Canadian exploration expenses ("CEE", 100% of the cumulative balance of which is deductible in respect of a taxation year) the at-risk rules may preclude a limited partner from deducting the relevant percentage of its share of the resource expenses incurred by the partnership even if the deduction of those expenses would not create a loss for the limited partner.

We agree that, in the circumstances described above, the debt owing by the commercial trust to the mutual fund trust should not, in and of itself, result in a reduction of the COGPE, CDE or CEE that the commercial trust would otherwise be treated as having incurred as a member of the limited partnership. Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that section 66.8 of the Act be amended to ensure that it would not apply, in the circumstances, to reduce the resource expenditures that would otherwise be treated as having been incurred by the commercial trust.

We are also prepared to recommend that the amendment apply after 2003. If the above recommendation were acted upon, we would anticipate that the amendment would be included in a future technical bill. While I cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendation, I hope that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(1.1) Meal expenses for long-haul truck drivers — An amount paid or payable in respect of the consumption of food or beverages by a long-haul truck driver during an eligible travel period of the driver is deemed to be the amount determined by multiplying the specified percentage in respect of the amount so paid or payable by the lesser of

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), s. 12, will amend the opening words of subsec. 67.1(1.1) to read as above, applicable to amounts that are paid, or become payable, after March 18, 2007.

Technical Notes: Subsection 67.1(1.1) provides that the amount paid or payable by a long-haul truck driver during an eligible travel period is deemed to be a specified percentage of the amount instead of the 50% of the amount otherwise deemed in subsection 67.1(1). The specified percentage is 70% in 2009, 75% in 2010 and 80% after 2010.

The preamble to subsection 67.1(1.1) is amended to ensure that the subsection applies to expenses in respect of the consumption of food or beverages by a long-haul truck driver, whether or not the expenses are paid or payable by the driver. 68. Allocation of amounts in consideration for disposition of property — Where an amount received or receivable from a person can reasonably be regarded as being in part the consideration for the disposition of a particular property of a taxpayer or as being in part consideration for the provision of particular services by a taxpayer,

Proposed Amendment — 68 opening words

68. Allocation of amounts in consideration for property, services or restrictive covenants — If an amount received or receivable from a person can reasonably be regarded as being in part the consideration for the disposition of a particular property of a taxpayer, for the provision of particular services by a taxpayer or for a restrictive covenant as defined by subsection 56.4(1) granted by a taxpayer,

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 33(1), will amend the opening words of s. 68 to read as above, applicable after February 26, 2004, other than to a taxpayer's grant of a restrictive covenant made in writing by the taxpayer before February 27, 2004 between the taxpayer and a person with whom the taxpayer deals at arm's length.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 68 applies where an amount received or receivable can reasonably be regarded as being in Part consideration for the disposition of a particular property of a taxpayer or as being in Part consideration for the provision of particular services. If the amount is in Part consideration for the disposition of property, that Part of the consideration that can reasonably be regarded as being for the disposition of property is deemed to be the proceeds of disposition of that property and, reciprocally, the cost of the property for the acquirer. If the amount is in Part consideration for the provision of particular services, that part of the consideration that can reasonably be regarded as being for the provision of particular services is deemed to be an amount received or receivable by the taxpayer in respect of those services and, reciprocally, an amount paid or payable by the person to whom the services are rendered.

Section 68 is amended to apply in circumstances where consideration received or receivable from a person is in Part for a restrictive covenant (as defined by new subsection 56.4(1)) granted by a taxpayer. However, exceptions to the application of section 68 to a restrictive covenant are provided in new subsections 56.4(5) to (8). If section 68 applies, the part of the consideration that can reasonably be regarded as being for the restrictive covenant is considered to be an amount that is received or receivable by the taxpayer in respect of the restrictive covenant, and that Part is also considered to be paid or payable to the taxpayer by the person to whom the restrictive covenant was granted.

(a) the part of the amount that can reasonably be regarded as being the consideration for the disposition shall be deemed to be proceeds of disposition of the particular property irrespective of the form or legal effect of the contract or agreement, and the person to whom the property was disposed of shall be deemed to have acquired it for an amount equal to that part; and

(b) the part of the amount that can reasonably be regarded as being consideration for the provision of particular services shall be deemed to be an amount received or receivable by the taxpayer in respect of those services irrespective of the form or legal effect of the contract or agreement, and that part shall be deemed to be an amount paid or payable to the taxpayer by the person to whom the services were rendered in respect of those services.

(c) the part of the amount that can reasonably be regarded as being consideration for the restrictive covenant is deemed to be an amount received or receivable by the taxpayer in respect of the restrictive covenant irrespective of the form or legal effect of the contract or agreement, and that part is deemed to be an amount paid or payable to the taxpayer by the person to whom the restrictive covenant was granted.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 33(2), will add para. 68(c), applicable after February 26, 2004, other than to a taxpayer's grant of a restrictive covenant made in writing by the taxpayer before February 27, 2004 between the taxpayer and a person with whom the taxpayer deals at arm's length.

Technical Notes (July 2010): See under 68 opening words above.

Related Provisions: 12(1)(a) — Services, etc. to be rendered; 12(1)(b) — Amounts receivable in respect of services, etc, rendered; 13(33) — Consideration given for depreciable capital; 56.4(5)–(8) — Whether s. 68 applies to restrictive covenant (non-competition payment); 247(8) — Transfer pricing rules take priority over s. 68.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 35(2), will amend subsec. 70(5.2) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after 2006.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 70(5.2) provides rules with respect to the disposition of resource properties and land inventories on the death of an individual. It is amended to update its structure to conform to modern drafting standards.

Paragraph 70(5.2)(b) is amended to provide that properties in respect of which a deemed disposition occurs under paragraph 70(5.2)(a) are deemed to have been acquired, by the person who as a consequence of the individual's death acquires the property, at a cost equal to its fair market value immediately before that death.

Where certain resource properties and land inventories held by an individual immediately before death are deemed, under paragraph 70(5.2)(a) and (b), to have been disposed of by the individual and acquired at a particular cost by another person, new paragraph 70(5.2)(c) sets out the conditions under which it will apply, instead of paragraphs 70(5.2)(a) and (b), to determine the proceeds of disposition and cost of acquisition resulting from that deemed disposition and that acquisition. In particular, where the conditions in paragraph (c) are met, subparagraph 70(5.2)(c)(i) applies to determine the deceased individual's proceeds from the deemed disposition under paragraph (a) of a land inventory or resource property. In turn, subparagraph 70(5.2)(c)(ii) deems the land inventory or resource property to have been acquired at the time of the individual's death at a cost equal to the amount determined under subparagraph (i) in respect of the deemed disposition of the property under paragraph 70(5.2)(a).
